RUPTURE

The Only Chance of Serious Treatment.

All those who really wish to improve their lot and make their life less painful and their health better shall go and see the celebrated European specialist, Andrew Claverie, who shall be present (Saturday), at the Frontenac until Monday.

"It would be a serious mistake to miss this opportunity of treating yourself."

We have several times spoken of the method and of the apparatus of A. Claverie which have been recommended by the highest medical authorities and adopted by nearly 10,000,000 patients all over the world.

How many ruptured patients are now indebted to A. Claverie for their health and recovery.

In all the cities of the province of Ontario where he has passed patients have greeted his passage with enthusiasm.

And all those who have called upon him have recovered health and happiness.

They had so frequently been fooled that they felt a real happiness to meet face to face a man who was not only a scientist of the highest attainments but also a sincere friend who shall tell them the truth and who was worthy of their entire confidence.

It is very evident that in Kingston there will not be a single ruptured patient who shall neglect to call upon A. Claverie because it would be to refuse willingly health and happiness.

D.R. NAMY.

Andrew Claverie will be at Kingston at the Frontenac hotel, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 6 to 9 p.m. All advice given free. Absolute secrecy. Special attention for ladies.

GRAFT AND TARIFF.

So there will be a change in the Tariff act, to the end that companies will not have the encouragement or protection which they now enjoy. Where, says a contemporary, there is a prima facie case made out—that certain trades have entered a deal by which toll is being exacted from the people unduly—the government will pay the expenses of the inquiry. It must do more than that in order to restrain the combiners. There will have to be a change in the tariff so that the protection which the combine possesses may be broken. This question has come up again and again, and the minister of finance, in parliament last session, said it had been found difficult to meet some contingencies that had arisen. With some it has been thought that exposure would be sufficient, but exposure in the grocers' case did not end the impositions from which some small dealers and the people suffered. Prosecution in the plumbers' case had a beneficial effect, for a time, but a favouring tariff will always be taken advantage of when the men in a certain line of business can co-operate.

CLEANSING NOT COMPLETE.

Reflection has brought the Montreal people a new sense of the humiliation the council has brought upon them. The enquiry of Judge Cannon was not complete. It covered only some of the departments, and it established the guilt of many persons. It made clear the pitiable fact that some people were glorying in their shame—the grafting of a quarter of the entire revenue or about $1,250,000 a year—and that there could only be a change by the prosecution of the offenders.

The weakness of the report is the suggestion in it that the new council, the one to be elected next year, and with some of the boodlers, now candidates, as possible members of it, should indict and try certain persons. The aldermen-elect will hardly consider it their duty to clean up this malodorous business. The legislature, on the petition of the people appointed the commission to investigate the scandal; it should see the importance of naming some one as a public prosecutor and directing that he resume the probe, and let up only when every sin has been exposed and every trespasser has got his due.

The council is under a cloud, every member of it the cloud may not be removed by a new election. Municipal government is at stake. The Gouin government cannot blink at this fact. The stirring up of the fifth may be dirty business; but there can only be a cleansing when it is undertaken by some power outside of the council, and a power that will see that the work of reform is made complete.

THE HOME RULE QUESTION.

It is remarkable, to say the least, that certain Irishmen in New York are not satisfied with Mr. Asquith's announcement concerning home rule for Ireland. Strange, is it not, that the Irish Americans cannot accept that which has been quite acceptable to the Irishmen at home, the men on the soil and the men who ought to know what they want. Note the declarations which are promulgated in Ireland, and can be read anywhere on the outer walls, for the poster in the old land has an importance which is denied it in Canada.

"We want home rule for Ireland and for Wales, Scotland and England, but we can't get it in the true sense for any till we draw the teeth of the lords."

Again a telegram says:

"The Directory of the Irish National League, Mr. John Redmond president, to-day, (the 14th), decided to support the liberal party at the general election. Mr. Asquith's declarations on home rule Mr. Redmond declared to be satisfactory."

The same sentiment was expressed in a signed article by T. P. O'Connor, the well-known journalist, who is now in America collecting for the National cause. Mr. O'Connor recalled that Mr. Asquith was not a noisy advocate of home rule. He had favoured it, but a while ago he had intimated that it could not receive the attention it deserved until certain great issues of constitutional character had been disposed of. The occasion for action came sooner than was expected in the acute condition following the lords' refusal to pass the bill.

While federal conservatives go to Montreal and there intimate that Quebec can go smash as far as they are concerned, if it won't tolerate the Borden party, Sir James Whitney and Sir Lomer Gouin are fraternizing and offering themselves to undying friendship. What does it all mean?

THE PREMIERS AS PARTNERS.

Sir Lomer Gouin has captured the people of Toronto whence he journeyed as the guest of Sir James Whitney. It seems they fraternized in Quebec during the centenary event. They were knighted at the same time. The city was crowded and Sir Lomer placed the speaker's quarters of the legislature buildings at Sir James' disposal, and there grew up between them a friendship of which the world knows very little.

Sir Lomer has all the pleasant gravitas and chivalry of the educated Frenchmen and he seems to have captivated all who came in contact with him. He is a liberal, in the largest sense of the term. In politics he is as keen as any one, and one of the most popular as well as most patient of political leaders in his province.

But one can be a public man, and even a politician, and be a gentleman. Hence Sir Lomer can confer with Sir James Whitney, and his government with Sir James' government, on provincial questions, in the most amicable spirit. They can agree that the federal government may not trespass upon provincial jurisdiction, and do it in a most agreeable manner.

The two premiers are of one mind on several questions, and this will be made the clearer when they proceed to the drafting of the programme for the next provincial conference.

STILL PLAYING THE GAME.

The North American, of Philadelphia, appeals to T. W. Lawson, of Boston, the artist's model on the stock market, to return to the widows and other small investors the money he withheld from them fifteen months ago.

Mr. Lawson has posed as the enemy of the "system," which is the name he applies to the syndicate of capitalists who manipulate the stock market as they choose. Occasionally some one, an Ives for instance, or a Ferdinand Ward, steals a march on the system, and makes a commotion by his wily arts, but usually the big fellows can restrain or check the Wall street colts.

Lawson has collided with the combination again and again, and without result. Each time, re-enforced by luck, he enters the arena against the old enemy and fails, and when one as brilliant as he misses the mark it is a lesson to others, who are less skillful or less resourceful.

Lawson over a year ago, announced that he contemplated a raid on Wall street. He wanted money, lots of it. He offered security, the bonds of the Bay Street Gas company, and he made no secret of his intention to enter the market at New York, Boston and Philadelphia and speculate on a scale which promised to yield stupendous results. Well, according to the North American, he got the money, and from people who knew nothing about Lawson or his methods. They were simply carried away by his fascinating promises. Our contemporary concludes that as the stocks were low when he was supposed to do the buying, and rose afterwards, reaching, in some cases, unprecedented figures, he must have made millions, and the question arises, What has he done with the money? Why has he not given the investors some return? "Many of them," says our contemporary, "sent to you Mr. Lawson, all or a greater part of their savings. They did this, believing they would receive dividends which they need for actual necessities. Our information is that they have not received a cent."

The deal in stocks—the acceptance of the Bay State Gas or National bonds—legally protects Mr. Lawson, and the people who put up the money have it appears, given something for nothing. But the North American appeals to Mr. Lawson, as a dead sport, to make amends. He can fight and rob the fellows of his size, but he should not rob the children of their pennies or the old women of their dollars. Once more the people of small means, the people who have saved through many sacrifices, have had a lesson. It is to keep out of the stock market and the fights that concern soulless corporations. It may be remembered; and it may not. It is wonderful how some people court the acquaintance of the sharers.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Victoria Colonist advises Mr. McBride to remain in British Columbia and redeem his promises. Is there anything else he can do fairly?

The municipal election is on but so very quiet that one scarcely sees what is doing. The candidates are busy but on a still hunt.

Only about a quarter of the total vote of Winnipeg was polled in the mayoralty election. The men, there, don't value the franchise. Why not give it to the women and see what they will do with it?

Hon. Mr. Taschereau, of the Gouin government, in Toronto, said the French would do their share toward organizing and maintaining a Canadian navy. Mr. Taschereau indirectly but surely counteracted the pessimism of Mr. Monk.

John Redmond should bridle his tongue when he is mad. In his latest speech he and the Nationalists were going "to tear up and trample under foot the Act of Union." They are not going to do anything of the kind, and he knows it.

The speeches of Canadians and Americans—and especially of our own Sir Wilfrid Laurier—about the cordial relations which exist between the Anglo-Saxon people, have a delightful touch. Ambassador Bryce put it naively, thus: "Americans and Canadians are all of one family."

The New York Herald suggests that the United States and Canada should arrange "for the defense of Canada's abroad." In other words it is urged that an alliance be formed for offensive and defensive purposes. The Germans who misbehaved in the Scott case will be likely to take notice.

A MISSING HAT.

And How He Found He Was Wearing It.

"It's strange, strange, strange, that I can't find a thing or keep a thing in this house," said Mr. Podmore, the other day. "It's all because of your loose, slack, unsatisfactory way of keeping things, Mrs. Podmore."

"What is it, now, dear?"

"Don't dear me, but help me to find my hat. I hung it on the hall rack when I came in."

"Why, Henry?"

"Don't stand there staring at me in that idiotic way, but help me to find that hat. I suppose I must wear my straw hat, and it's raining like fury!"

"Henry Podmore, will you listen?"

"No, I'll not. When a man lays down his hat and can't find it—"

"What? Who put it there? This is some trick. I'd take my oath before any court in the land!"

"Nonsense!"

"It's not nonsense! It's as true as that I live and stand before you, a tormented, worried, harassed man, who is ridiculed and made the victim of some mean, low trick in his own house every day! You'll hear more about this when I get home!"

Then he rushed out, slamming the door after him.
