POOR MADE HAPPY

IN PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS ON CHRISTMAS DAY.

Santa Claus Didn't Neglect Any of the Local Places—The Children Especially Had a Merry Time in Their Cozy Homes.

Christmas day was observed at the various public institutions in the usual manner. At the Orphan's Home the seventy fatherless and motherless children in the institution were made extremely happy. At noon the children sat down to their Christmas dinner and such a dinner as it was. Everything possible to tempt and satisfy the healthy child appetites was there in abundance, and so well did the children enjoy their feast that more than one turkey quickly disappeared, not counting plum puddings innumerable.

In the school room the large tree was placed, and it stood laden with toys for all. On Christmas day the tree was stripped and every child received toys and candy. Many people gave to the home and if they all could have been present to see how happy their gifts made the children, they would have gone away contented, feeling they had done something to bring joy to the hearts of children, who know how to appreciate a kindness.

At The Hotel Dieu.

As usual the children in the Hotel Dieu Orphanage were paid a lengthy visit by Santa Claus, and the good things left behind will long make their childish hearts fall to overflowing with happiness. The two large trees, burdened with toys and candies, were stripped in the morning, and for the remainder of the day the children's wards rang with their merry laughter. The little people were also tendered a sumptuous dinner, when all the good things of the season were set before them in abundance and needless to say were done full justice.

The children in the Hotel Dieu have many friends in the city who, at different times in the year, remember them, and at this Christmas season they were not forgotten in any way.

At The Jail.

The prisoners in the county jail spent as merry a Christmas as could be arranged under the circumstances, and maybe some fared better than if they had been out to look after themselves. The main item in their day was the Christmas dinner, and it was a good one. They had soup, roast meat, vegetables, tea, bread and butter, and pudding for their noon meal, and it was greatly appreciated. In the morning the Salvation Army members paid their usual visit, and treated the inmates to a fine musical programme, as well as a fine Christmas sermon.

At The Infants' Home.

At the Infants' Home, where the very little folks are cared for, Christmas was indeed a happy day. The many friends of the institution contributed handsomely this year, giving provisions and toys to please the children. The nursery was nicely decorated, and everything possible was done to make the children happy. Presents of all kinds arrived the day before Christmas, and on Saturday Santa Claus paid his visit and distributed the good things.

The General Hospital.

The nurses ushered in the Christmas morn by singing several carols at seven o'clock. The wards were decorated with Christmas emblems. At noon the usual dinner was served to the patients, and James A. Minnes, F. G. Lockett, B. W. Robertson and W. B. Skinner, of the board of governors, were present to assist the nurses in serving. On Wednesday, the Flower Mission will give its annual entertainment to the patients.

At House Providence.

At the House of Providence, Christmas day was made a most enjoyable one for all the inmates. The institution was visited by a large number of visitors, during the day, and each one brought good cheer. As usual, a fine Christmas dinner was served, and the day was made just as pleasant as could be, and thanks are extended to all who assisted. Five masses were conducted in the morning.

At The Penitentiary.

The prisoners of the penitentiary had a good Christmas day feast. Their breakfast consisted of coffee, currant bread with butter, and cold roast pork. Their dinner menu comprised roast pork with gravy on potatoes, parsnips and plum pudding, and their supper consisted of currant bread and coffee. Special services were held in the two chapels, which were very finely decorated.

At House of Industry.

The inmates at the House of Industry, spent a very happy Christmas. The arrangements were perfect, in every respect. The entrance was beautifully decorated with evergreens and Christmas bells, and these mottos "Give Us This Day, Our Daily Bread," "A Happy New Year," and was in a prominent place. There was a fine bill of fare for the day, the dinner consisting of roast turkey, cranberry sauce, plum pudding, roast pork, roast potatoes, peas, apples, oranges, grapes and candies. In the dining room, there was a fine motto, "Old Folks At Home," and the room was nicely decorated with evergreens and Christmas bells. Members of the board of directors present were W. J. Crothers, Robt. Meek, Mrs. Jordan, and Mr. Jordan, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Strange and Miss Marlar. Messrs. Crothers, Meek and Strange gave short addresses, and the superintendent replied in a feeling manner. The inmates expressed their thanks to the members of the board, superintendent and directors, and gave these hearty cheers for the cook. The decorations were the best ever put on, and brought forth much praise from the directors.

At The Barracks.

Christmas day at the barracks was observed in the usual way, and "the boys" had a fine time. It was a holiday for everyone, and they enjoyed themselves in various amusements. Turkey and plum pudding was the main item on the bill of fare, for dinner.

A SECOND TERM.

partment; the city property had $300 above its original appropriation; there were $400 worth of last year's board of health bills to pay, and extra by-laws cost $400 more in printing. Mayor Couper thought that the city's finances had been well cared for. The city's assets are $62,116.55, and the liabilities, $62,936.63. The debt service of the city is $1,226,490.29.

Continuing the mayor said: "In my remarks last December I made some slight reference to my record in the council, and said that I was no man's man, and would be the representative of no section and no class. You took me at my word, and elected me by a large majority, and I felt all through the year that whatever my personal inclinations might be, I must prove myself true to that statement, and try to consider every appeal and every suggestion from the point of view of the city as a whole, and not of the representatives of any special body of opinion in it. I felt that you had elected me to do my work, and not to throw back my responsibility on you whenever any difficult or embarrassing question was presented to my judgment. Gentlemen, I feel that still, and I am prepared at all times and on all subjects to shoulder the responsibilities attached to my position."

Just now, Mayor Couper said that Kingston was on the eve of a boom, and there was no reason why Kingston should not be a city to be proud of. He called upon the people to be boosters and not knockers. If they did there was no reason why the city should not progress more rapidly. It was advancing now, and he thought a great future was in store for it.

In conclusion his worship said: "Having given you a summary of the city's finances for the past year, and given this brief expression of my views, I do not feel that it is necessary to trouble you any further. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for the kindness you have expressed to me in the past, and wish you and yours all the best that the New Year has to bring."

Applause followed the speech of Mayor Couper, who was freely congratulated by citizens who advanced to the platform and among whom was the veteran William Glidden, who went forward to tender the mayor-elect his best wishes.

MISS MADELE WILSON VICTIM OF A HOLD-UP

SPEAKS IN THE SALVATION ARMY CITADEL.

It is Just Twenty Years Since She Became an Army Officer—What Her Father Thought Best in Life.

There was a very large congregation present at the Salvation Army citadel on Sunday afternoon to welcome and greet Miss Madele Wilson (ensign) of New York, who celebrated her twentieth anniversary service in the ranks of the Salvation Army on that day. Ensign Smith, in introducing Miss Wilson, said it was a pleasure to him to have her with them, and it was no doubt a pleasure to her to meet so many dear friends of herself and her lamented father.

Ensign Wilson said she was "only present as a visitor, and was glad to know that she was not growing out of the people's memory as the army, in Kingston, would never be forgotten by her. She extended to all a happy Christmas and a bright New Year. She expressed her heartfelt thanks to those who contributed to the handsome portrait of her dead father. This portrait was the dearest Christmas gift that could be given to her, and that gift was mainly owing to the kindness of the people of Kingston. It was a bright and happy Christmas they had given her, and she hoped she would be able to spend other Christmas days here in the future.

Miss Wilson asked the gathering how they would like to have Christmas in their hearts always. What does Christmas mean to the Christian? It means Christ in the flesh. What was the unmistakable part of this Christmas? It was the transforming power of God on the lives of men and women. What was the meaning of the transforming power of Christ? Think of the drunken man and women whose lives have been uplifted by the work of the Army. Men whose lives have been touched by that transforming power owe it to God Almighty that God touched their hearts. Is it any more remarkable to them that the drunkard should be reared from the gutter than the worldling should be converted to Christ. Because God called them to do the work and the joy in their hearts in doing His work, was because they came to realize the wonderful power of God. Life was beautiful before they joined the Army, but they found life more beautiful in doing God's work. Salvation made the bad good and the good beautiful. Her father found nothing more beautiful than to bring men and women to God. The Army work was that of a soul winner. The people of God stood loyally by her father in his dark days. There was no one more loyal and true to the Army and its work. When he lost his church did he not turn to his God, and ask for strength to bring people to Him. There was no comparison between the forms of religion and the Army. If this Christmas time has brought to their hearts this wonderful transformation and peace that God promises to them who sought Him, what happiness it must be to them. The peace of God, no money can buy it, no honors can take it from her, and she hoped by God's grace to persevere till the end. God had chosen the hearts of men and women to shine through them, and that is what the transforming power of Jesus does. What the world wants is a reality and the knowing of Christ in their hearts. God will give us a chance to know what this reality is. Christ in the flesh exemplifies this reality and power.

After twenty years of service Miss Wilson said she could recall the day when she was sent abroad, and her life and work in Whitechapel, London. God revealed Himself as her friend, and that was in her severest day of service. Her father thought it an honor to make his daughter a soldier of God, the king, and she hoped to continue so till the end of her life. She prayed God that all might find that reality an everlasting Christmas joy in all eternity.

Miss Wilson conducted and addressed a great Salvation meeting in the evening.

On next Sunday afternoon Miss Wilson will speak on "Her Personal Work in the Salvation Army."

A quiet wedding took place at Kingston, when Stephen Clapsaddle, Belleville, was married to Miss Etta Sleith, Kingston. Rev. W. Tompkins was the officiating minister. Mr. and Mrs. Clapsaddle will reside near Belleville.

The citizens' committee asked Mayor Kyle to stand as a candidate for the Brockville mayoralty again, but the mayor has been compelled, by the advice of his physician, to refuse and to announce his retirement.

The Kilties' band are holding an at home in the New Orphanage dance hall on Tuesday evening.

HENRY WADDINGTON WAS ROUGHLY HANDLED

By Two Men Who Were Secreted in His Stable—Struck on Head by The Men, Who Made Their Escape.

On Friday evening, about 8.30 o'clock, Henry Waddington, butcher, was the victim of a daring hold-up, right in his own barn, back of his home, on the Bath Road, and was very roughly handled by the robbers. Mr. Waddington left his store about eight o'clock, driving straight up Princess street to his home. The barn is quite a distance from the house, and the owner drove into the yard and up to the stable door. As was customary, he unhitched the horse, and, opening the stable door, stepped inside. The horse is a well trained one, and knowing what was required of it, stopped as soon as it was well inside, waiting until the owner had removed the harness and blanket, before going to the stall.

The man turned around to lift the harness of the horse, and was dealt a crushing blow over the head with a club, and before he realized what was the matter, he received two more blows, which fairly staggered him, but he had presence of mind enough to try and get outside the door. He rushed for the closed door and stumbled outside, at the same time calling loudly for Charles Friedship, his neighbor, to come to his aid. Mr. Friedship ran over, and just before he arrived, saw two men dash out of the barn, run to a rig on the Bath Road, and drive quickly away.

Every one of the three blows received by Mr. Waddington left a mark, and a good one at that. One, on the side of his face, left a bad bruise, the skin being broken, and the other two left large ugly lumps on his skull. It was indeed fortunate that the victim had a heavy cap on his head, as it likely saved him from being knocked unconscious.

Mr. Waddington was seen by the Whig this morning, and said he had no idea who his assailants were, but it must have been some one that knew his habits very well, and knew he would come to the barn before going to the house. The police were notified of the hold-up, but as yet have no clue to work on.

The highwaymen certainly had their plans well laid from beginning to end, and were quite sure of knocking their victim out, and securing his money, but just one little slip occurred and the plot fell through.

Do You Have Headache

TAKE ONE OF THESE LITTLE TABLETS AND THE PAIN IS GONE.

"My first experience with Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills was a sample package handed me. They relieved the pain so promptly that I have never been without them since. I have given them to many friends when they had headache and they never failed to relieve them. I have suffered with neuralgia in my head, and the first one I took relieved me. They have cured me of neuralgia. I would not be without them."
