A CROWN OF GLORY.

As Well as a Mark of Beauty is Luxurious Hair.

It has been truly said that the crowning glory of our race is a luxuriant head of hair.

It used to be thought that this was one of the blessings which the gods bestow capriciously, and it is only recently that scientists have discovered that its beauty is dependent upon the presence of a minute germ which flourishes in the hair follicles, where it destroys the life of the hair.

To restore this life and kill the germs which cause the mischief is the mission of Newbore's Herpicide.

Herpicide surely kills the germs, and the best hair dressing on the market.

It contains no grease or oil, neither will it stain or dye. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. $1 bottles guaranteed. G. W. Mahood, special agent.

RICH LANDLORDS HAVE DRIVEN MANY FROM LANDS.

Picture of Conditions Which Budget Aims to Alleviate—Country Depleted and Filled With Poor.

What a spectacle, says the London (England) Daily News, would the Home Counties present revealed from a balloon hung over London! Below would be the greatest city on earth; the financial centre, the metropolis of the world, and the Thames, matted with ships, from every part of earth, in chief bringing food for the people. Not corn and meat alone, but butter from Sicily, from little Denmark, from bush farms in Australia, fourteen thousand miles away, from Canada, from six months under snow. Of butter, cheese, bacon, fruit, eggs, and other minor products of the farm Britain imports each year tens of millions of pounds worth, and the bulk of it comes to this wonderful market beneath us. The Duke of Devonshire, the Earl of Devon, the London prize proper men who cut their way with an axe into the Australian wilderness, and fill with the lap of Our Lady of the Snow. At the uttermost parts of the earth the soil and grow rich by selling the produce in London.

And now what a picture is this we see below us? Round the north of the world, right at our gates, stretch the rural districts of the Home Counties, so desolate, the villages decaying, the people passing away, driven out of the paradise into which they were born, not by an angel with a flaming sword for having disobeyed a Divine command—but by peer and plutocrat to make way for the game preserves and pleasure grounds. Could the nation so visualize the Home Counties there would be revolution in England. Let us come to earth. The Petworth estate of Lord Leonfield typifies the conditions prevailing in the Home Counties at the gates of London. Here is an estate of about 40,000 acres containing many parishes, every one of which is shown by the census returns to be in process of decay. Under the walls of his deer park, lies Petworth, that during the last thirty years has lost twenty-five per cent. of its population—a township strangled by the looked-up acres of the lord.

Recently there appeared before the magistrates at Petworth a labourer charged with having his wife and children in the workhouse. He pleaded that he had obtained work, but had been unable to find any cottage at Petworth in which to house his wife and the children she had brought into the landlord's world.

So the unemployed are manufactured out of men driven from the countryside, where work is offering. The peer's bread is safe, and his water sure, as owner of over 100,000 acres, and recipient of a mighty tribute by way of royalties, as owner of the ironstone land of Cumberland. Such are the ways of life in the Home Counties within fifty-five miles of London. Lord Leonfield voted for the rejection of the budget.

"I have travelled England—north, south, east and west—investigating the land system and I wished to stagger any man with its folly should take him to Hatfield and show him the vast empty expanse, and remind him that it is within half an hour's run of King's Cross," says R. L. Outwaite, writer of the article. "If from abroad, he could not but exclaim, 'What fools these English be! Here ten peers hold over 82,000 acres, and with fifteen great landowners, nearly half the county."

"When I was at Hatfield I was shown enclosed land which once had been the village green, and this recalls the fact that 53,494 acres of commons, or about one-eighth of the county, were stolen by enclosure acts when the peers ruled parliament. The census returns show the inevitable result when the curse of the peer is heavy on the land. Of the twelve rural districts, eight had a smaller population, in 1901 than in 1891, and of the ten registration districts, Watford and St. Albans are the only ones not showing a loss by migration."

Before passing over into Buckinghamshire, we may note on the border Lord Rothschild at Tring, which marks the beginning of the Rothschild-Cum-Rosebery territory—the land of the deer.

Here resides in royal state the financier at whose bidding the lords threw out the licensing bill, who has led the city against the budget, and who, in the brave words of the chancellor of the exchequer, has erected a sign-post on all the paths of reform, "No thoroughfare." By order, Nathaniel Rothschild.

As we pass over into Buckinghamshire we find Rothschild estate lying by Rothschild estate in tens upon tens of thousands of acres, and Lord Rosebery, amid the fraternity at Mentmore. Here, again, we have depopulation within forty miles of London, the life squeezed out of the countryside by the monopolist and plutocrat.

beneficial influences after a single year's trial? He adds that Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, the Tory Chancellor of the Exchequer, who put on the tax, said, on November 5th, 1903: "I thought that my duty, last year, on corn was so small that it would not increase the price of bread. I made a mistake. I found that in not a few cases it had the effect of giving an excuse to the baker to raise the price of bread; and, therefore, I must confess my belief that doubling that duty, and also adding new duties upon meat and dairy produce, must increase the cost of food of the working classes."

And Mr. Ritchie, the Tory Chancellor of the Exchequer, who took the tax off, said, in the House, on April 23rd, 1903: "Mr. Chaplin says the corn tax has not increased the price of bread; but that is an impossible thing. To say, 'Undoubtedly the price of bread has increased to the amount of the tax, and a good deal more; and, as a good many people make their own bread, the cost of the latter must have been increased.'"

Be Free From Rheumatism. Many people who have suffered more or less from this affection for years, and who have tried ordinary remedies without avail, are apt to drift into the idea that they can't be cured. As a matter of fact many people who have been crippled and almost helpless for years have been thoroughly and permanently cured with Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. Don't be content to suffer. You can be entirely freed from rheumatism and all its complications by the use of this remedy. Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure is a great blood purifier and spring tonic. In bottles, 50 cents, at J. B. McLeod's drug store, corner King and Brock streets (Wade's old stand), and corner Prince and Montreal streets.

A New Graft Game. Manchester Guardian. Dwellers in the suburbs who possess a three-yard by two grass lawn have lately been receiving the attentions of an artist in bluff. The operator sets to work boldly on the grass with his shears, and after mowing with much show of industry comes respectfully to the door and announces that "the job's done, and it's nippin'." Much concern is expressed when it is pointed out by the owner of the lawn that the "job" was done without invitation—request. "Wasn't you the gentleman as met me yist' at the gate?" "No, sir. Generally the nippin' is paid, especially if the work really wanted doing."

Prevent and Relieve Headache "It gives me great pleasure to be able to refer to Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills as the best remedy we have yet had in our house for the prevention and cure of headache. My wife who has been a constant sufferer for a number of years with above complaint joins me in the hope that they may fall into the hands of all sufferers."

JOHN BUSH, Waterville, Me. Used Them Four Years.

"Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are the best I ever tried for the relief of headache. I have used them for nearly four years and they never fail to give me relief. I have tried many other remedies, but have never found any better."

JOSEPH FRANKOWICK, 854 Trombley Av., Detroit, Mich. There is no remedy that will more quickly relieve any form of headache than

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. The best feature of this remarkable remedy is the fact that it does not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects.

BANK NOTE MISTAKES.

Shown $50 on One Side, $100 on Other. Rarely do imperfect or misprinted bank notes evade the vigilance of Uncle Sam's inspectors in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Perhaps the most extraordinary misprint that ever slipped through was a $50 national bank note. This, it appears, actually found its way into circulation.

The manner of its discovery was odd, says the Chicago Tribune. A clerk in a western hotel, in making up his accounts one day found a discrepancy he could not explain. He placed the pile of bills at his left hand, and as he counted each one, turned the note over and deposited it on a pile at his right.

He found that when he counted from left to right his cash balanced, but when he counted it back again a shortage of $50 was shown. He consumed two hours in vain endeavor to find out what was the matter, and finally was obliged to call on the manager for assistance.

The manager himself had no better success. Again and again he counted the bills, always with the same result—one time the cash balanced and the next the shortage was developed. Finally each bill was examined separately, both obverse and reverse; whereupon the mystified men discovered the cause of their trouble. One of the bills had the design of $50 on the obverse and that of $100 on the reverse. It further appeared that the clerk had received the bill as $100.

Communication with the Treasury Department was had and it was found that that department had a record of the bill. It was discovered in 1890 that one sheet of bank notes printed for a national bank of Kansas City had been reversed in the press. One plate bore the obverse of a $50 bill at the top and the obverse of a $100 bill at the bottom. The other plate bore the reverse of the two notes. After each had been printed it was laid aside to dry before being run through for the obverse printing. In some way the pressman had turned one sheet upside down, with the result that two misprinted bills came forth—one with a $50 obverse and $100 reverse, the other with a $100 obverse and a $50 reverse.

The cashier of the bank was the first to become aware of the error. He found that something was wrong after he had paid out the note with the $50 face and the $100 back by coming across the one with the $100 face and the $50 back. The note held by the cashier was returned to the treasury and destroyed, a perfect note being issued in its stead.

Errors were discovered in the design of the 1880 silver certificates. These were more the fault of the engraver than the printer.

On the 1880 notes is found a treasury seal entirely different from any other ever used by the government. The key, which is one of the most important symbols of the seal, shows a handle at the left hand side instead of at the right, as on all others.

The shield is of different shape and the stars are larger. The two ends of the band surrounding the symbols are fastened with a buckle, which in no other instance plays a part in the design of a treasury seal. This is the only issue of notes on which the peculiar seal of the government and collector's paper money include, them among the errors or freaks.

The $1, $2, and $5 silver certificates and the $10 legal tender bills of the present issue occur with what are known as inverted backs. As a matter of fact, this is an erroneous invention, inasmuch as they are really inverted fronts. These bills are sought by collectors, who pay a premium for them when in fine condition.

Another curiosity is a $1 note of the Second National Bank of Fall River, Mass., also lacks both signatures, which seems not to have interfered with its being offered and accepted as money. Still another $1 note of the First National Bank of Indianapolis, Ind., lacks the signature of the president only.

Slight as are these errors or omissions, they give additional value to such bills in the eyes of collectors of paper money, who are glad to pay a premium for them.

It is not known how many of the bills of the present issue are in circulation with inverted design, but it is not thought there are many.

A legal tender note of 1860 shows an oddity. On the face of the note is a portrait of Webster, while on the right is a representation of Rolfe presenting Pocahontas to Queen Elizabeth. At the bottom of the centre is a small eagle. Upon inverting this bill the eagle presents a facial resemblance to the head of a donkey. Whether this was intended by the engraver as a joke is not known, but the resemblance is so close as to indicate premeditation on his part.

A Famous Country House. Milton Abbey, where the king was recently the guest of Sir Edward Alexander Hambro, is one of the most attractive seats in a part of England famed for the scenic beauty of many of its old ancestral homes. Erected, in most part, during the eighteenth century, by East of Dorchester, upon the site once occupied by a Benedictine Priory, Milton Abbey still retains many interesting features of its early days. An appanage of the original monastic foundation is the ancient chapel of St. Catherine, situated on the west side of the abbey, and sheltered by an eminence, timbered and sheltered by the late Baron Hambro (father of Sir Edward), was visited by King George III, in the early part of his reign.

Was No Hurry. Speaking some time ago of a Shakespearean subject, Sidney Lee, whose name figures prominently in connection with the National Theatre movement, told an amusing story of a scorcher who was riding through Stratford-on-Avon. He was bent over the handle bars, and beads of perspiration were trickling down his face. "Hi, sonny," he called to a passing youth. "Am I right for Shakespeare's house?" "Yes, you're right, mister," was the dreamy reply; "but you needn't hurry, Shakespeare's dead."

TAIL OF THE COMET.

"The Earth Must Go Right Through It." Halley's comet, after December, though rapidly approaching the sun, will be getting further from the earth in consequence of the latter's motion, and the distance will have increased by March from about 100,000,000 miles to 176,000,000 miles. It will then be on the far side of the sun, and will become invisible till it bursts into view in the morning sky towards the end of April. Earth and comet will then rapidly approach each other, and on May 20th the distance between them will be only 14,000,000 miles. On the night of May 18th, the earth and comet will be in practically the same straight line as seen from the sun. Since the tail of a comet is directed away from the sun, should it be 15,000,000 miles in length (and it is practically certain to be more than this) the earth must go through it. There is no reason, however, to anticipate any bad results, as the tail of a comet is of exceedingly rarified materials, and it appears that in 1861 a similar occurrence took place without disaster.
