

URGING REFORM IN VIVISECTION.

REV. DR. ROBERT COLLYER

J. D. WARNER

JOHN HENRY USSSELL

New York, Jan. 8.—Messrs. John De Witt Warner and John H. Ussell are emphatic in declaring that needless vivisection must be stopped. The enforcement of laws against such offenders is favored if such steps are necessary. A committee to make inquiry is urged, and they declare it time, in name of common humanity, to spare dumb animals unnecessary pain. Rev. Dr. Collyer is another who urges reform in this direction.

THE TORTURE OF BOILS

Many Cases of This Painful Disease Have Been Cured by Using Stewart's Calcium Waters.

A Trial Package Sent Free. Furuncles, or boils, is one of the oldest diseases of history. Every one familiar with the case of Job, of whom it was said in the Bible, that the surface of his body was completely covered with them, and the disease is referred to by many people nowadays as "Job's Disease." The boils consist of large, projecting points of inflammation situated on the skin, and extending into the connective tissue. They usually terminate in a suppuration and the formation of a central slough or core; and when the boil comes to a head and breaks, the abscess tends to heal, leaving a cicatrix or scar.

This disease occurs most frequently on the back of the neck, although they may occur anywhere on the surface of the skin. Boils seldom occur singly, but usually come in considerable numbers, and frequently succeed one another in rapid succession for a considerable period, and their presence always indicates a lowered state of vitality, and a depraved, depleted and impoverished condition of the blood.

The pain attendant on a single boil is prolonged for three or four days, and no sooner is the pain of one gotten rid of, than that of another begins, until the person is completely worn out with suffering. When the boil involves a nerve filament, the pain is most excruciating and almost insupportable. The treatment for the cure of furuncles or boils should be directed to warding off errors of nutrition, improving the general health, eliminating poisons and impurities from the blood, and toning up and strengthening the kidneys, bowels, and other eliminating organs. The preparations of sulphur have the most pronounced influence in curing boils, and of these preparations the sulphide of calcium is by far the most powerful and effective.

STUART'S CALCIUM WATERS, which contain calcium sulphide, have been exceedingly successful in the treatment and cure of boils, as they diminish the inflammation and suppuration, and besides, act so powerfully upon the blood that the impurities which are the underlying cause of boils, are completely eliminated, and the disease having nothing further to keep it going, rapidly disappears.

Stuart's Calcium Waters not only cure boils, but all other blood and skin diseases, except leprosy, which is incurable by any treatment, and if suffering from any of the various skin manifestations, dependent upon impure blood, you should give this celebrated remedy a fair trial.

was producing it, she had it whispered about on with her. "You understand, don't you? Thank you, so much," Ransom heard her say. She took the card and, crossing off the "Miss Louise Elting," wrote "Miss L. Preston." Then she hesitated a second and gave her address in Chicago, in care of another aunt. "My mail will be forwarded from there."

Further argument being useless, Ransom gave himself up to such impersonal conversation as happened to come into his head, and when he left the two at Philadelphia, he thought he saw a look of regret come into Lucy's eyes, and then, just for a moment, something seemed to linger on her lips, as if she were saying, "Good-bye," he said, "I'll write soon."

For the next two days Ransom was in a state of great perplexity. "Perhaps I've offended her," he thought, as he realized how often during the last years in the west her letters had gone unanswered for weeks. "But surely," he added, "she knows how I dislike the letter writing. Anyway," he concluded, "if she cares a little, she might care more."

With this optimistic conclusion, Ransom sat down to one of the hardest tasks he had ever undertaken. Writing was a burden at best, and any conventional expression of devotion that he could think of seemed to him exceedingly cheap. At least, by dint of much self-control, he wrote a letter so frank and open in its declaration that even the doubting Lucy would have to be convinced of his sincerity.

The letter—written, Ransom sought the little card that Lucy had given him, for the necessary address. "She ought to get this in three or four days," he thought, "if she is near Chicago, and if she writes me I can be with her on Christmas after all." As Ransom made these observations, he fumbled the card in contemplation.

"Hello," he said aloud as his eyes caught the reverse side of the card. "It looks as if Lucy's aunt had given away a memorandum." He read the notes on the back, written in a delicate feminine hand. "The Sign of the Blue Teapot, 1679 Hemlock street, Luncheon 11-2. Tea 3-6. Fancy articles. Home-made delicacies. Special list of Christmas pies and puddings."

During the next four days Ransom was in a mood of expectancy and perfect confidence as to the outcome of his proposal, but when Christmas eve arrived with no telegram he began to have misgivings. Suddenly it dawned upon him that he would have to spend Christmas alone, and then with a distinct impression as to what sort of Christmas dinner his French cook at the club would probably produce, he recalled the notes on the back of Miss Elting's card.

"I'll get some home-made things and have them sent over," he thought as he walked toward the new tearoom in Henlock street late that afternoon. "Ransom never had been in a tearoom before, and he felt singularly out of place in the Sign of the Blue Teapot. The feminine would be Japanese atmosphere of the place, the hanging paper vases, the slight bamboo chairs and tables, the cheap Japanese prints and pottery, and the inappropriate array of holly and evergreen struck him as being awfully pretentious. He walked with careful steps past the cases filled with home-made, half-baked pastry. Then, as he pulled the desk, his eye caught sight

LOCAL TREATMENT FOR WOMEN'S DISORDERS

The health we enjoy depends very largely upon how the blood circulates in our bodies. In other words, if we have perfect circulation we have perfect health. It is a constant wearing out of the tissues in every part of the body. The blood flowing through the veins carries off this waste or old blood, and the blood coming from the heart through the arteries brings the fresh new living tissue. The essence of the blood is thus digested, to replace what has been carried off. This constant wearing out and expelling of the dead matter and the replacing of it with new matter, atom by atom, goes on day and night, until in about 7 years a complete change has been effected. Thus every man and woman has an entirely different blood in every particle of it from what he or she had 7 years before.

It sometimes happens, however, from a variety of causes, that the blood becomes congested in certain portions of the body. This means that the blood vessels in these parts become weakened, and the circulation in that section of the body becomes sluggish and stagnant. The consequence is that the dead matter in that part of the body is only partially carried off, and that but little of the new, always present, introduced there to build up and strengthen the tissues and nerves.

This condition invariably exists in all cases of female disorders. The dead matter retained in the circulation, which should have been expelled, causes irritation and inflammation of the delicate membrane, and depresses the nerve centres. This condition is the cause of the grievous physical and mental suffering that so many women are afflicted with.

To obtain relief it is evident that the first thing to be done is to get rid of the dead matter which is retained in the circulation. If this dead matter is allowed to remain there a species of blood poisoning will result and nature will endeavor to get rid of it by forming ulcers, tumors, etc. The above explanation will also show why Orange Lily is so successful in curing this condition. It is a local treatment, and is applied direct to the affected organs. Its curative elements are absorbed into the congested tissue, and from there are discharged. A feeling of immense relief, both mental and physical, accompanies it, and the improvement is constant. This feature of the expelling of the dead matter, which is so marked as to be amazing, is the case described in the following letter is not exceptional.

Dr. Cooney—I am thankful to Mrs. E. Currah, your Canadian representative, for my health restored by your wonderful remedy. I have suffered for 17 years, but not so bad until 3 years ago. Then I had a doctor, who told me I had a tumor, and could live no more than a year. If I went through an operation I would not live through it. A year later I sent for him again, and he gave me up. My husband then sent for another doctor, who performed an operation, and I was cured. I was cured with him 3 or 4 months after an operation. I would not have been cured if I had not had your remedy. I was cured so long ago that I did not think of it until I read of your remedy. I was cured so long ago that I did not think of it until I read of your remedy.
