

BAD LOOKOUT

Labor is Expecting a New Election.

AND IN THE FALL

ANOTHER STRUGGLE IS PREDICTED IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Fear Shortage of Funds—General Congress Has Opened and Committee is Meeting.

Newport, Wales, Feb. 9.—The labor party must find some way to replenish its depleted coffers or else suffer further loss in its parliamentary representation in the next election. This is the problem that delegates from the party met themselves to solving in a preliminary meeting to a general congress of the party.

The committee is trying to devise a plan for submission to the congress.

The laborites declare that another general election is inevitable within the next six months, and as their funds were nearly all spent in the election just ended a serious situation confronts them. They will do everything they can to stave off an election as long as possible but the leaders are counting on having to do battle again in the fall.

Since the house of lords declared it illegal for trades unions to levy taxes for the support of their representatives in parliament, and to defray the expenses of campaigns, the labor party has been sorely pressed for funds.

In the next parliament it will make an effort to have this decision of the lords reversed.

SOAP STOPPED CITY SEWER.

Tons of the Hot Liquid Ran Into Pipes.

New York, Feb. 9.—The bursting of a tank of soap in a factory at Orange, N.J., has given the sewer department of that city a hard job. Tons of half-manufactured soap got into the pipes, and as they cooled stopped the mains completely.

For a mile from the factory men were working day and night at each sewer manhole, trying to extract the soap. It is as hard as if it had been dried for weeks, and can be taken out of the pipes only in hard lumps. Unless the sewer department makes rapid progress it is feared the health of the city will be injured.

HOOP NETS SEIZED.

Fisheries' Overseer Makes Important Capture.

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 9.—Game and Fisheries Overseer John McEuire, Jones Falls, reports the seizure of five full sets of hoop nets, each set provided with a leader eight rods in length. The nets were set for fishing in the waters of Cranberry lake, Rideau canal, and were owned and operated by a Kingston man who had no license.

In the face of strong opposition from the owner and his brother, McEuire removed the nets from the water and conveyed them to Jones Falls.

CONTROL OF PRESS.

The India Legislature Will be in Charge.

Calcutta, Feb. 9.—The legislative council, yesterday, passed a bill for the governmental control of the press. Two of the native members, recently admitted, opposed the measure. After the passage of the bill, the Earl of Minto, the viceroy, astonished the council by announcing the government had decided to release the state prisoners, deported fourteen months ago, in connection with the sedition movement. He said the adoption of the bill justified the government's confidence that the enlarged representation of the Indian communities in the council would strengthen the British administration.

GARDEN OF EDEN.

And a Narrow Gauge Railway To It—The Spot an Oasis.

Constantinople, Feb. 9.—A narrow gauge railway is to be constructed to the site of the Garden of Eden, which Sir William Wilcocks, British adviser to the Turkish ministry of public works, claims to have located. According to Sir William's measurements the homestead of Adam and Eve was situated in the Harlab district, about 250 kilometers north of the school. The spot is an oasis situated in the center of a vast desolate place, which is traversed by four arms of the Euphrates.

The Cornwall board of health had ordered the church closed because of an epidemic of scarlet fever.

Dr. Page was released on $200 bail.

NAVAL BILL

To Be Further Debated On Thursday.

CALL IS OPTIONAL

NEED NOT STOP AT HALIFAX IF NOTHING DOING.

The Corrected Costs of the Hudson Bay Railway by the Two Suggested Routes—The German Scare Engineered by the Yellow Press of Britain.

Ottawa, Feb. 9.—The debate on the second reading of the naval bill was resumed in the House of Commons, yesterday. To-day, Ash Wednesday, there is no sitting of the house, but when the debate is resumed on Thursday it is expected that Sir Frederick Borden and Hon. George E. Foster will speak.

Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, in reply to a query from Mr. Monk, said that a conference was being arranged between the federal and provincial governments with a view to arriving at some agreement in regard to respective jurisdictions in the matter of incorporating companies.

In response to a question by Mr. Crosby, asking if the Allan line of steamers, which have a subsidy from the government for carrying mail via Halifax, and if under the terms of their contract with the government, they could be compelled to call at Halifax, Sir Wilfrid read a memorandum from the trade and commerce department, stating as follows: "Under the contract with Messrs. H. and A. Allan for the Canada-France service, the call at Halifax or St. John is optional with the contractors. Recently, however, to meet the views of the department and of the Halifax Board of Trade, the Allan had advertised calls at Halifax on east-bound voyages for the remainder of the winter season, in order to carry forward lobsters and other export traffic offering at that point. Such call is, however, contingent on there being something to carry. With reference to west-bound voyages the Allan claim there is little or no west-bound freight offering at Halifax, but they state that should there be a reasonable amount of west-bound freight offering, sufficient to at least pay the cost of such a call, they will make it, but that at other times should they have any freight for Halifax, but not sufficient to warrant a call at that port such Halifax freight will be forwarded from St. John without further charge."

Hon. George P. Graham drew the attention of the house to a mistake in the published report of the estimates of cost of Hudson's Bay railway. The estimate as published in the official report placed the cost of the railway route at $19,108,672, but the correct estimate should be $25,783,672, made up as follows: Railway construction, $11,351,520; railway shops and other accessories of operation, $7,757,152; port work, $6,675,000. The published estimate of the Nelson route was $16,426,340. It should be $21,491,340, made up as follows: Railway construction, $5,987,800; railway shops and accessories, $7,444,540; port work, $8,059,000.

Mr. Burrell thought it necessary, as a matter of national moment, to call attention to an unintentional mistake in the reports of the proceedings of the house, last Thursday as reported in several liberal papers stating that "God Save the King" had been sung at the conclusion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech instead of when the house rose at six o'clock after Mr. Borden had finished speaking. Mr. Burrell asked the prime minister for some explanation of this misapprehension and misreporting of the actual facts.

"I do not know what my honorable friend means. What have I to do with that?" was Sir Wilfrid's reply.

Mr. Middleboro, (North Grey), who resumed the debate on the second reading of the naval bill devoted the first part of his speech to refuting the view taken by Mr. Monk that Canada and the other over-sea dominions were not bound either by a sense of duty or by a sense of gratitude to rush to the aid of the motherland. He maintained that the parliament consideration now was not the question of maintaining our autonomous rights, but rather a question of giving effective and prompt assistance to Great Britain in the presence of emergency. To prove that there was an emergency and the British supremacy on the sea was in danger by Germany's naval programme, Mr. Middleboro quoted from speeches of Mr. McKenna, first lord of the admiralty, Sir Edward Grey and Lord Rosebery. He concluded by submitting that the only way to meet the emergency which he claimed existed was by a contribution of Dreadnoughts.

Mr. Fowke, (South Ontario) claimed that the naval proposal of the government was an acceptance of responsibility to protect Canada's growing foreign trade. He said the chief glory of the British empire was the independence of its over-sea dominions. There had been a German scare engineered by the yellow press of Britain but that had now passed away. Mr. Fowke quoted from the reasons for the statements of the first lord of the admiralty showing that by the end of 1912 despite Germany's hurried programme of naval construction Great Britain would have twenty Dreadnoughts to Germany's thirteen and in other ships in dock yards and in naval force generally Britain would be immeasurably superior.

Mr. Armstrong—"If there is no emergency, why build a Canadian navy?"

"Because," replied Mr. Fowke, "we are carrying out a well-defined policy which has been under advisement for some years, and which was first laid down by the government at the imperial conference of 1902. We are seeking to accomplish the practical and the possible in the matter of providing adequately both on sea and land for the defence of Canada as a part of the empire." The policy of a direct contribution as urged by the opposition, was, he contended, an undemocratic, un-Canadian policy. The navy would be built by Canadian capital, by Canadian labor, in Canada, out of steel manufactured in the dominion, and would be owned and operated by the Canadian people, under the control of parliament. Why should any other control be advocated? Did the opposition place greater confidence in the parliament of Great Britain than they did in the parliament of Canada, and would they deliberately go counter to the cardinal principle of no taxation without representation? He believed that the party was sadly in want of the councils of their old chief, Sir John A. Macdonald, who had steadily advocated this principle, and whose first lieutenant, Sir Charles Tupper, had only recently advised Mr. Borden that duty to party and country lay in supporting the principle of the government's policy.

Mr. Burrell, who followed again, harped on the episode in connection with the signing of the national anthem on Thursday last. He seemed to be considerably worked up by the fact that a portion of the liberal press had unintentionally stolen part of the opposition's calcium effects. He maintained that Sir Wilfrid Laurier have used his influence to have the matter set right in the press.

Mr. Burrell's attention was called to the fact that a correction had been published in the Globe as soon as the mistake was noticed, but he complained that this correction had appeared on an inside page and had not been given proper prominence.

Mr. Burrell's remarks were pertinent discussion of the bill. Mr. Burrell criticized the premier for injecting partyism into the debate by ridiculing the dimensions in the opposition ranks.

WANTS TO BE GOVERNOR.

Will Run on Women's Rights Platform.

Dover, N.H., Feb. 9.—The announcement of Mrs. Marille M. Ricker, a Dover N.H., lawyer, leader in the suffrage movement, and a well-known disciple of Ingersoll, that she is to come forward as a candidate for the governorship of New Hampshire, has, to-day, created a sensation which, sweeping from one end to the other of the granite state, is unprecedented in the history of New England politics.

Wealthy in her own right and just now sojourning in California, her telegram, briefly couched but filled with a volume of meaning, when made public last week in Dover, started a whirlwind of discussion in every hamlet, town and city in New Hampshire which just now is without record.

Mrs. Ricker, who is a widow, announces herself as a candidate on a woman's rights platform. She is the first woman who ever attempted to win the United States in 1870 who has fortified herself by preparing a constitutional argument for the Selection of Dover which closes with these words: "So long as women are hanged under the laws they should have a voice in making them."

GIST OF REPLIES

PROVINCES ACCEDED TO EDUCATION COMMISSION.

Waive Question of Jurisdiction in Plan to Appoint a Royal Commission.

Ottawa, Feb. 9.—In reply to Hugh Guthrie, the minister of labor read replies which he had received from the provincial premiers concerning the appointment of a royal commission on technical education. The gist of the replies was as follows:

Nova Scotia: "Delighted to see such a commission appointed."

Prince Edward Island: "Proposal meets approval of the government. No objections will be taken on the ground of jurisdiction."

New Brunswick: "Entirely agree with the view of the federal government. No hesitation in saying that we will meet with the approval of the provincial government."

Quebec: "In favor of the proposal."

Ontario: "Seeing it is only for the gathering of information, see no objection to the commission."

Manitoba: "Would be glad to see more interest taken in the question of technical education." The Manitoba government was the only one which was non-committal.

Saskatchewan: "No objection to the proposal. Believe that the federal government is the proper party to take action in this matter."

Alberta: "Project meets with hearty approval and endorsement."

British Columbia: "Appointment of commission meets with the approval of this government. It is not the intention of this government to raise the question of jurisdiction."

Talk of Compromise.

Peterboro, Ont., Feb. 9.—Peterboro people are undergoing the experience of going without their local papers. The mechanical staff of the three local papers struck for higher wages on Friday last, and since then no papers have been issued. The publishers and the strikers have so far been unable to come to terms, although there have been several compromise proposals, and the situation remains unchanged.

The increase in typhoid fever cases is causing anxiety in Toronto.

KING WORKED UP

Over Premier Asquith's Telegram of Regret.

New York, Feb. 9.—A special to the World says:

In the smoke-rooms of the big tory clubs and over the teacups at many fashionable houses the story is being told that King Edward is furious about Premier Asquith. The unionists are rejoicing in the hope that this will increase Mr. Asquith's difficulties and lead the sooner to another appeal to the country.

It is said that the head and front of Premier Asquith's offending was that he asked to be excused from obeying the royal command to spend last week-end at Windsor Castle as the majesty's guest. The king, the raconteurs say, wanted to have some news. According to the story, King Edward was playing a rubber at his favorite game, bridge whist, when Mr. Asquith's telegram was handed to him. After glancing at it he rose from the card table in a violent temper and refused to resume the game, although his partner was a lady he is ever wont to favor, and during the earlier part of the evening he had been a substantial winner.

The incident has been described in this way by one who was undoubtedly a royal guest on the occasion.

But the art of lying is being so elaborately cultivated just now by Premier Asquith's enemies in society it may be nothing but pure, or rather, malicious, invention.

King Edward certainly has been irascible of late. But it is his fashion to display ill humor. Probably no man in all the phlegmatic isle has himself under better control at all times and under all circumstances than his majesty.

Moreover, his majesty's consideration is very marked for those whom he likes, and he has not disliked Premier Asquith overmuch, though he has not loved all the members of the liberal cabinet by any means.

Mr. Asquith had just finished one of the most strenuous election battles ever fought in England, and that after one of the most exciting years of office any minister has ever endured. He asked the king to grant him a week's rest before he set about the weary duty of rebuilding his cabinet and reconciling the conflicting elements in his party. He is now taking his rest abroad.

It is the subject of general remark that the king has not seen Chancellor of Exchequer Lloyd-George in more than a year. The Tories are trying to find some comfort in this, too, and to make some capital out of it with the voters.

It is the royal custom to invite to Windsor to "dine and sleep" the minister who has in charge the most important bill of the session. This is in addition to the visits due from the minister "in attendance." In Mr. Lloyd-George's case the custom has been violated.

Besides the name of Mrs. Lloyd-George, the wife of the chancellor of the exchequer, has been conspicuously omitted from the royal visiting list. There is mystery in all this. For, though Mr. Lloyd-George is an extreme radical, he has never been heard to express the slightest anti-royal sentiment. But the chancellor of the exchequer is a Welshman, and if there lingers anywhere a vestige of the strong republicanism that existed forty years ago, here it is in Wales.

His majesty is reputed to dislike Winston Churchill as intensely as he hated the young statesman's father, Lord Randolph Churchill, who gossips say, "drank himself to death because there was one man on account of the exalted position that personage occupied."

The only members of the present government the king really likes are Earl Carrington, Mr. Haldane and Lewis Harcourt, son of the famous Harcourt, of exchequer, Sir William Harcourt, Young Harcourt is a perfect courtier, though one of the extreme radicals in the Asquith parliament.

Oates had taken a key from the box outside and entered the building.
