Love all trust a few,

Do wrong to none, All's Well that Ends Well, Act I., Sc 1. Man, in his search after happiness, could not have a better guide than been slow to obey. It is found in the instruction to "love thy neignbor as thyself," in the command to "love one another."

For two thousand years Christianity has been endeavoring to establish the kingdom of love, and during these two thousand years the world has been rent with feuds and bloody wars. There is the opposite of love in hearts of the nations. Each looks with jealous eve on the other. German philosophers and divines have been preaching the doctrine of undversal love, English poets and thinkhood of man. The love they bear each wrong to others because they have can which was buried in the yard $5,other is evid need in their warships idea of Christianity, that they should Mr. Rice was known for his eccentrical and standing armies. individual find it as difficult. He is in a world where business success usually comes to the shrewdest, and the wicked frequently flourish like green bay tree. It is not "As would that men should do to you, do ye also to them." The command has been shortened In business it too often is, "Do others." while this state of things exists universal love is an impossibility. It will be necessary to cast out the devil of selfishness before the angel of love can reign in the heart. The armed feets patrolling the seas, the armies learning the art of war in every counry, the policemen in the cities-are all proof that love is not the ruling force on earth.

But there is another side to the question. It is two thousand years since the doctrine that 'God is love' was first taught. It is only necessary malady can fully appreciate what it thousand years to see that love has been at work. Tired? -- Nature's Sweet Restorer

Abounding in stimulating goodness, a most healthful and pleasing beverage. Its sustaining and invigorating qualities are beyond dispute.

O to your grocer, buy a package of Aseptoit will cost you five cents—take it home and dissolve a single teaspoonful in a pan of dishwater.

That's what you do-then see the result. Note how it cuts the grease-how it leaves your china and glassware bright and shining-how clean and wholesome it leaves your pots - your pans - your cooking utensils.

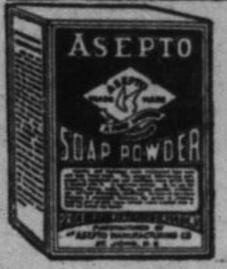

It does all that—and more. It destroys every trace of the germ life that exists wherever there is sustenance for these microscopic trouble breeders to feed upon-it sterilizes and renders everything antiseptically—surgically, if you will— clean. That's why you should always wash glass, chinaware, cutlery - any article used for eating or drinking with Asepto. It makes contagion impossible.

Perhaps the very quickest way for you to realize how it cleanses is for you to note the way it sweetens your dish-cloths.

Tell your grocer to send you a package of Asepto -all good grocers sell it at five cents.
