DAYS OF THE GIANTS

REMINISCENCES OF BIG MEN OF CANADA.

Who Lived and Exerted Great Influence in the Dominion—The Best Debater Was Hon. Alex. MacKenzie.

"There were giants in those days. How often does the old thought come to mind as we dip into the political annals of the past, or listen to the reminiscences of veterans who can go back to the good old times which we are so frequently reminded, have long since gone, never to return!

It was with some such reflection that a gathering of members of Parliament of both parties heard one of Canada's most distinguished judges, Sir Louis Davies, recall some of his political experiences the other evening in Ottawa. The occasion—unique of its kind—was an oyster supper tendered in the House of Commons restaurant by the representatives of the Prince Edward Island to their fellow members, with whom were associated the members of the Press Gallery.

The feast was an eye-opener to all present who had never appreciated the qualities of Prince Edward Island's famous product, the Malpeque, fresh from its eastern bed, and served up in a variety of forms, proved a delicacy that completely captivated the Parliamentary diners, and gave a boost to the right little island that should materially hasten the construction of the long-talked-of tunnel.

Sir Louis Davies, himself a Prince Edward Islander, was one of the guests, and, as was natural in one who found himself addressing a gathering within the walls of Parliament, he was tempted to indulge the reminiscence vein. As one of the most active members of the old Liberal Opposition under Hon. Edward Blake, he came into close contact with the political giants of those days, and had many opportunities of appraising their worth.

"I used to regard Sir John A. Macdonald as the incarnation of political evil," he declared, "but I have lived to change that opinion"—a frank acknowledgment that none would have appreciated more than the late Conservative Premier himself, coming as it did from the man who was one of his most persistent and troublesome critics.

To Hon. Edward Blake, Sir Louis Davies paid a striking tribute. "In my time," he said, "I have had the privilege of meeting some of the most distinguished men of both Britain and the United States, but for sheer intellectual power, Edward Blake was in his prime, the peer of the very greatest."

It may surprise many of the younger generation to know that, in Sir Louis' opinion, the best debater the Dominion House of Commons has ever known was Hon. Alexander Mackenzie. Few require to be told of the sterling character of Mackenzie, but an anecdote related by Sir Louis may be repeated as showing the profound religious convictions of the Scotch statesman who became Premier. One night, after a late session, Sir Louis and Mackenzie left the House together. It was one of those glorious nights, which, as Sir Louis put it, Canada has made her own. Overhead, in cloudless sky, the stars glittered like a myriad of gems; the air was sharp but exhilarating, and all nature seemed asleep. On leaving the Parliament Buildings, Mackenzie led his companion to that part of the hill from which a view can be obtained of the Ottawa Valley—admittedly one of the most charming prospects to be seen anywhere—and there for several minutes he stood, gazing on the magnificent scene, as if under spell, the silence of the night broken only by the eerie roar of the Chaudiere Falls in the distance. Eventually, after what seemed like a period of silent prayer, Mackenzie, with head bowed, looked heavenwards and murmured, "And yet they say there is no God."

"It was one of the most impressive moments in my life," said Sir Louis, "and the finest sermon I ever heard delivered."

Western Methods. The members of the Saskatchewan Legislature have set an example for business-like procedure and despatch which the lawmakers, who gather in the older provincial capitals and at Ottawa might well follow. The Saskatchewan House is an organization of comparatively recent birth, and its members have not yet adopted the time-killing tactics which prevail in most of the other Legislatures in the Dominion. There is less talk and more hard work. Prorogation took place recently after a session lasting just one month. Many important measures were passed, and even the big question of naval defence, which hung fire in the Commons throughout the entire anti-Christmas term, was dealt with in a resolution. There must be something in the much-advertised virility of the West, when it even invades the legislative halls. The tendency towards longer sessions is becoming more and more fixed in the House of Commons and in Toronto and Quebec. Nine months is about the usual period for the former, chiefly because many M.P.'s insist on making unimportant speeches on unimportant subjects. One can easily understand why the British House in a fit of desperation decided to resort to this closure. That is not wanted in this country, but some modified form of shutting off long-winded bores might be evolved by our political leaders without working hardship on anyone.—Saturday Night.

CHASING CRIMINALS.

Stern Pursuits Into the Arctic by the Mounted Police.

Several thrilling stories are given in the "Century Magazine" of the recent way in which the criminal traces down by "Canada's Watch-dogs," the men of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. Many adventures in the lonely lives of these keepers of the outpost of the Empire are vividly related by Miss Agnes Dean Cameron.

Here is the story of one of the unconsidered adventures in the ordinary round of police duties in the far Northwest.

A Lorrain Indian, who is now serving a life sentence in a Canadian prison for the murder of a two-year-old child, had to be tracked down and captured. This is how the work was done:

A mounted policeman followed the wretch to a point nearer the Pole than many explorers reach, and got his man.

"The policeman stocked a canoe with provisions, and the long and hazardous journey up the Mackenzie River began. For 1,200 miles the little procession pushed its way along that silent stream.

"At the bow sat the Indian, a maniacal murderer, looking forward to a lifetime within prison walls. In the stern, paddling the lonely policeman, representing outraged Pax Britannica.

"The pair arrived eventually at Regina, where the constable handed over his prisoner, saluted, and fell back the narrow trail he had followed to make; there were no commendations, no fireworks."

Another incident shows a grim police chase which lasted six months.

"A fugitive having fled from a ghastly murder committed in the Klondike, Major Constantine sent out his sleuths on the track, and for half a year they followed their man. South from White Horse the constables dogged their murderer, picking up their first clue in a little logging camp on Puget Sound.

"The bad man was trailed from Seattle to Butte, thence to Spokane, north to Rossland, British Columbia; then at Ogden, Utah, we see Canada's watch-dogs, and on the Nevada-California line.

"Finally the hunted man was run to earth at Laredo, where, waiving extradition, he was carried to the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, and was put on board a British vessel."

A Woman of Importance. Mrs. J. H. R. Bond, who is considered one of the cleverest women in Winnipeg, about two years ago conceived the idea of establishing a Children's Hospital in that city. She wanted it placed in the foreign quarter, where the sick children of the ignorant poor could be cared for. Mrs. Bond is not a rich woman, and although many sympathized with her project, some people interested in the General Hospital argued that the children's ward of that institution was all-sufficient. The first step in her campaign was a literary tale, at which, perhaps ten talented Winnipeg women, read or sang original compositions, a fee of fifty cents being charged. This plan so popular that another of similar nature was arranged.

With the money realized in this way a small Children's Hospital was started last February in the poorest quarter, and has cared for hundreds of cases. In November a bazaar was held, at which seven thousand dollars were realized, and this sum will be used as a payment upon a permanent building site. The founder of the Children's Hospital has made it a pet charity of Winnipeg.

Mrs. Bond has had a remarkable career. She was one of the first nurses appointed by the British Government to care for the wounded soldiers in the Zulu war. A few volunteers preceded her, and Mrs. Bond went first in an official capacity. It was only after the Egyptian campaign that the incapacitated soldiers were nursed by women.

Mrs. Bond was one of the first women decorated by Queen Victoria with the Order of the Royal Red Cross, and the late Khedive of Egypt made her the recipient of a medal for distinguished services in caring for the Egyptian troops. Mrs. Bond has been decorated with two other Orders for bravery, and devotion to the defenders of the Empire.

Parole System a Success. That the results of the prisoner parole system continue most gratifying is the statement made by W. P. Archibald, Dominion parole officer.

Mr. Archibald is on a tour of western Ontario in connection with his duties. During the year 468 prisoners were so released, and since the method was adopted ten years ago, there have been 2,515 prisoners paroled. Out of the entire number, there have been only 84 licenses revoked for subsequent convictions, and 99 for non-compliance with conditions which demand a monthly report. The number of completed sentences of parole is 1,487, and there are 879 men now reporting.

Mr. Archibald said that while jail prisoners should be taken proper care of, he was opposed to the "mawkish sentiment" which sought to make such confinement as comfortable as possible, thus encouraging men to return to the hospitable walls.

The low percentage of paroled prisoners who violate the conditions of release is attributed by Mr. Archibald to the care taken to allow freedom only to men who are not genuine criminals. Experience has shown that the reform of the habitual criminal was little to be expected.

Goes With the Name. Ex-Mayor Payment of Ottawa says Canada should start her naval policy by giving a Dreadnought to Britain "to settle overdue accounts." An opinion like that comes naturally from a gentleman of the name of Payment.—Hamilton Herald.

What is a Briton. Wherever born, a child is considered a British subject if its paternal grandfather was a natural-born Britisher. The nationality of a remoter ancestor has no such effect.

ANCIENT MONTREAL FORT.

Forgotten Military Structure Is Laid Bare by Workmen.

The ruins of an old French fort or outpost have been discovered near the corner of St. Catherine and Mountain streets, Montreal. The fort, or rather outpost, was built of heavy cedar timbers. Originally it had a frontage of about twelve feet, a depth of about ten feet, and a height of ten feet. The flooring of the building was found in good condition, the side walls were somewhat shattered, and the greater part of the roof was missing.

It is thought that this was the western entrance to the settlement, and that here a party was always stationed to be on the lookout for possible enemies. The building was constructed of heavy timbers, part of the bark being hewn away and the remainder left as a covering. In the centre of each of the timbers on the side walls were large wooden pins. No nails were used in the construction of the building. The marks of the axe are still plain on those which have been hewn. Many opinions prevail as to the age of the fort, but it is certain that the building is one of the first put up on the island.

In the soil directly above the fort stood, until recently, a giant elm tree over a century old. Some of the roots of this tree had spread around the side walls of the fort so that the building was well over the century old. The workmen who made the discovery were not aware of the probable historical value of the building. They tore down the side walls so that now only the flooring remains in its original position. The other timbers being saved, however, and further investigation regarding the fort, it is probable that it will be reconstructed. A number of authorities on the history of old Montreal, have been consulted, and the consensus of opinion is that this was the most western point of the settlement. It is expected that further research will bring forth some relics which may determine more accurately the age of the little building. Near at hand a number of sea shells have been found in the soil and some distance away a large boulder of "blue stone," weighing about twelve tons, was found embedded in the clay. The discovery was made by workmen excavating for the new railway building.

SLEEP WAS IMPOSSIBLE

ALMOST DRIVEN TO DESPAIR UNTIL CURED WITH USE OF Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

No symptom of nervous prostration is more to be dreaded than the inability to sleep. Man can exist for comparatively long periods without food, but without sleep, and the restoration which it brings, he soon becomes a mental and physical wreck.

When you cannot sleep and rest look to the nervous system and remember that lasting cure can only be obtained from such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which naturally and gradually restores the exhausted, nervous to health and vigor.

William Graham, Atwood, Ont., writes: "My wife had been ill for some time with nervous prostration and we had two of the best doctors we could get, but neither of them did her any good. She gradually became worse and worse, could not sleep and lost energy and interest in life. She was almost giving up in despair when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"From the first box my wife used we noticed an improvement and after using six boxes she is completely cured, and as well as she ever was, eats well, sleeps well and feels fully restored. I cannot say too much in praise of this valuable medicine for I believe my wife owes her life to its use."

Every dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes to the formation of so much rich, red blood and is, therefore, certain to do you good.

LABOR MAN WINS.

James Simpson of Toronto Now Holds Important Post.

An incident of interest to labor men throughout Canada occurred when James Simpson was elected to the position of chairman of the Toronto Board of Education.

James Simpson has certainly won his spurs by his own endeavors. He is only 36 years old, but he is well-known, especially among labor men from coast to coast.

Coming to Toronto at the age of 14 from the north of England, his birth-place, he had no schooling in Canada, but was for over three years employed in the Kempton works. For seven months he was employed at the General bicycle works, in the paint shop, and often left for home in the evening hat dazed from the mechanical of the rectorial department of his paper and for years he has been the Star's labor and municipal reporter.

Years ago, the local Typographical Union showed its faith in him by electing him to the highest offices in its gift and from that he graduated into the high places of the Toronto District Trades and Labor Council, becoming its president. He has also been vice-president of the Dominion Trades Congress and many times delegate to the A. F. of L. and other important gatherings.

It was through his energy and resourcefulness that the Labor Temple now exists in its present prosperous condition.

He was in the old school board before the creation of the Board of Education.

As an adherent of the Socialist party, he has encountered a great deal of opposition that would otherwise have been avoided from the Socialist banners, he has been an unsuccessful candidate for majority and Parliamentary honors. He is active in church and temperance circles.

As has been intimated, Mr. Simpson always has a speech ready, but it is not his oratory that wins him a following. It is simply the lever that gets him into the limelight. Once they come in contact with him, people like him. His face has a mask of the comedian but he is no imposter. Despite his constant good humor, for his countenance conceals a vast fund of native shrewdness.

But He Hadn't Any. The marriage recently in Nebraska of Mr. W. E. Knowles, M.P. for Moose Jaw, recalls to The Ottawa Free Press an amusing incident in which the new bridegroom interrupted a couple of investigations ago, and which illustrates the lighter side of life at Ottawa, of which the public here little.

It was during a debate upon the Grand Trunk Pacific, says The Free Press, and when Mr. Knowles interrupted a Conservative who was speaking, the retort came back that the member for Moose Jaw would do well not to interrupt, and that if he were wise he would hold his peace and advise his wife to buy G.P.F. stock as an investment.

Mr. Knowles did not say anything in the House; but, proceeding to the Parliamentary cafe, in a state of simulated indignation, went up to a crowd of Conservative M.P.'s, who were enjoying a midday supper, and expressed his anger at the statement of the man who was orating upstairs.

"How dare he drag my wife's name into a political discussion?" he said. "He must apologize or there will be trouble."

Mr. John Stanfield, of Colchester, N.S., who was among those at the supper table, and who is a stickler for the proprieties in debate, sympathized warmly with Mr. Knowles, and said that he would see that an apology was made. Forthwith he hid himself upstairs, and proceeding to the desk of the man who had been speaking told him that he had "made a bad break" and must apologize. The stalwart expressed his regret and promised to tender an apology, and did so when the House adjourned in the wee sma' hours of the morning.

But the joke came next day, when the man who had apologized learned, to his amazement, that Mr. Knowles was not married, and had never been married. Then there were "wigs on the green."

"ORANGE LILY SAVED MY LIFE"

These words or expressions having the same meaning are contained in hundreds of the letters I have received during the past year. Many were from women who had suffered agonies from falling of womb; others from women who had escaped dangerous surgical operations, as the tumors and ulcers had been removed by the action of Orange Lily; and others who had suffered from suppressed menstruation, leucorrhoea, painful periods, etc. For all these and the other troubles known in general as Women's Disorders, Orange Lily furnishes a positive scientific, never-failing cure. It is applied direct to the suffering organs; and its operation is certain and beneficial. As a trial actually proves its merit, I hereby offer to send, absolutely free, a box worth 50c., sufficient for ten days' treatment, to every suffering woman who will write for it.
