

Sinking Spells Every Few Days

"At the time I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I was having sinking spells every few days. My hands and feet would get cold; I could scarcely breathe, and could feel myself gradually sinking away until I would be unconscious. Those about me could not tell there was life in me. After these spells I would be very weak and nervous, sleepless and without appetite; had neuralgia in my head and heart. After taking the remedy a short time all this disappeared and in a few weeks all the heart trouble was gone."

Do You Realize What an Important Work the Kidneys Do?

Do you know that every drop of your blood goes to the kidneys hundreds of times every day? Do you know why?

To be filtered and purified from its impurities. That is the great work the kidneys have to do. They filter the blood. Then these impurities go to the bladder and are passed out of the body along with the urine.

Do you think it possible for you to be well, unless the kidneys do this work thoroughly?

It is these impurities—this unfiltered blood—that causes backaches, headaches, rheumatism, diabetes, Bright's disease, etc. They poison and interfere with the whole system.

If you have any kidney trouble let Doan's Kidney Pills do for you what they have done for thousands of others. They cure all forms of kidney trouble, and they cure them to stay cured.

Mrs. Maurice Dorian, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for five years. They were so bad at times that I could not cross the floor for the pain. I went to a doctor, but he did me no good at all. I sent to the drugist and got five boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I am glad to say that after taking them I was cured. I have had no trouble for nearly three years now."

Price 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. M. M. Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

In ordering specify "Doan's."

MEANS LOSS TO SOME

GOING OF THE PIGTAIL MARKS CHINA'S ADVANCE.

Prime Minister Has Abolished His Queue and Wears Military Uniform When Receiving Foreign Ministers.

Philadelphia Record.

Consideration reigns among the Chinese at the announcement of the Prince Regent that he will endeavor to bring about a change in the national costume next year, as well as urging the abolition of the pigtail.

As it is shown that he is quite in earnest, the Prince Regent has himself started to wear military uniform when receiving foreign ministers in Peking.

With regard to the pigtail, the abolition of that characteristic appendage is a much more popular matter than the adoption of customs of European style. It is argued by the anti-queue people that the pigtail is ineffectual, that it is an object of derision among foreigners and that it is not in keeping with modern sentiment, marking, as it does, the servitude of China to the Manchu.

Moreover, it is emphasized that the late emperor was in favor of reform in this direction; and, of course, says the Prince Regent, we ought to respect the wishes of the dead. The power of the "dear departed" is always stronger in China than in any possible argument living.

Up and down the country there is much discussion on the pigtail question, and some students in Canton have been putting their opinions into essays. One young hopeful condemns the queue because it means shaving the head in front. This, he argues, allows the cold to get to the brain and prevent clear thinking.

The Prince Regent's views on the reform of the national costume meet with greater opposition, and one cannot help feeling that it is justified, the present Chinese mode of dress being certainly comfortable, graceful and hygienic. No Chinaman will cut a very smart or dignified figure in trousers and Western clothes become living caricatures, and any change in China's national costume, will certainly diminish the world's sum of the picturesque.

Chinese themselves, who wish things to remain as they are, state that, apart from considerations of sentiment and dignity, the general adoption of Western clothing would mean serious loss to the silk and linen merchants in China, who manufacture the bulk of the material for the "flowing robes" now in vogue.

Still, the Prince Regent seems determined to have his way. At first, he declared that the change of costume should begin among the police and military; but, it being represented that such a step would tend to belittle those services in comparison with the rest of the nation, he has now stated that there shall be a change of national costume in the whole Empire next year.

It is very much to be feared that China, keenly desirous of reforming herself after the example of Japan, has herself set up a sort of a pigtail to power, and, in turning to Western civilization, is in danger, as in the instance of dress "reform," of taking on the outward forms without the essence.

Her bewildered groping for a right is pathetic; and she seems to lack a real leader to co-ordinate and direct the new forces at work since the awakening of her civic conscience. How many "commissions of inquiry" has she dispatched abroad these past few years? How many of their reports have been ignored and forgotten?

If, in the meantime, all these big words and decrees about pigtailed and clothes, and so on, the Prince Regent concerned himself with problems such as that of the currency and its standardization; the establishment of a national bank; putting the finances of the nation in order; then we might hope would soon be on the way toward true enlightenment and prosperity.

Not Only in Bunches

A good story of a specimen of the ordinary theatrical landlady is told by J. L. Shino, one Saturday evening he and a fellow actor purchased a pound of sausages for their Sunday's breakfast. When they arrived at the table there were only five. Thereupon the landlady was called in to account for the missing links.

"Madam," said Mr. Shino severely, "I gave you eight sausages last night; here are only five. What has become of the other three?"

The lady of the house smiled an innocent smile, mingled with pity, and replied: "Well, you see, sir, sausages always do shrink in cooking." Which information had to suffice.

An Obstacle to Success

Utica Globe.

Senator Elkins, deploring at a dinner in Washington the dishonest methods of one type of business man, said with a smile:

"It all brings back to me a dialogue I once heard in a southern school. "Children," said the teacher, "be diligent and steadfast, and you will succeed. Take the case of George Washington, whose birthday we are soon to celebrate. Do you remember my telling you of the great difficulty George Washington had to contend against?"

"Yes, ma'am," said a little boy. "It couldn't tell a lie."

A Man of Weight

The story goes that the great Dr. Norman Macleod, emphatically in Dr. Chambers' phrase, "a man of weight" every day and a brother minister. Little in they and shew, while crossing Loch Fyne in a rowboat, were caught in a sudden and severe squall. His companion, somewhat alarmed, proposed to engage in prayer, whereupon the Highland skipper dryly remarked that "the new man" could pray, but the big one man tak an oar."

AN IMPORTANT OFFICIAL

Clerk of the Senate Ombreux Was Born in the United States.

A lady visitor from the United States who happened to be in one of the Senate galleries at Ottawa a couple of weeks ago, when the deputy of the Governor-General gave the account of the bills passed so far during the present session of Parliament, was very much impressed with the rigidity of formal way in which the business was transacted. As she had never been familiar with ceremonial of the kind she was disposed to consider it all very ridiculous, particularly the solemn way in which the clerk of the Senate, Mr. Chapleau, with a stiff bow to the deputy governor and one not quite so stiff towards the bar of the Senate, whether the Commons or the House, the Deputy Governor, in His Majesty's name doth assent to these bills.

To the former United States lady now living in Ottawa who had taken her to the function, she remarked: "Just fancy an American man going through that performance without laughing. I'll bet he couldn't do it if he tried for a lifetime. Imagine her surprise when she was told by her friend that the very man she had seen perform the duty was not merely a native of the United States, but one who had served in the Union army during the American war. This is a fact not generally known in Ottawa, most people supposing Mr. Chapleau, whose ex-officio designation as Clerk of the Parliament gives him precedence as senior deputy minister in the Dominion civil service, was born at Syracuse, N.Y., in 1838. His father, the late Pierre Chapleau, a French-Canadian, returned a few years after his son's birth to Canada, where he became a well-known builder in the city of Montreal. Major Chapleau, like his elder brother, the late Sir Adolphe Chapleau, was educated at the University of Toronto. In 1860 he returned to the United States, and in 1861, carried away by the prevailing war fever, joined the U.S. regular army. His regiment, the 16th Infantry, came in for much service and he rapidly gained promotion through the various ranks to that of brevet captain, which was especially awarded for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Murfreesboro, Tenn. Later came the brevet of major for gallant services during the Atlanta campaign, more particularly at the battle of Jonesboro, Ga. He also participated in the siege of Corinth, Miss., and the battles of Shiloh, Chickamauga and Chattanooga. He was on service in Memphis in 1868 during the riots in that city, and in 1868 was in command of the troops at New Orleans, during the riots which took place between the white and colored populations on the occasion of the first election of President Grant. He retired from the U.S. army in 1871 and entered the civil service of Canada as secretary of the Department of Public Works in 1872. A few years later he was appointed sheriff of the Northwest Territories, and as such, had charge of the arrangements for the execution of Riel and the others hanged for complicity in the rebellion of the Canadian West. He was also appointed Clerk of the Crown in Chancery at Ottawa and in 1900 he was appointed to his present position. It will be noticed that his career has been a remarkably varied one, and is certainly a bit curious in one respect. He has endeavored to act as the mouthpiece of the representative of the Crown in his most important function should be not only a native of the United States but a retired, pensioned officer of the regular army of that country, and no one could add the part with more decorum and dignity. Mrs. Chapleau is a daughter of Colonel George W. Patton, of the United States army.

The Father of "Bugology"

Canadians at large know very little about the science of Entomology, but it is a very important one in a young agricultural country and has been an organized study in Canada for nearly half a century, and the man who is perhaps more responsible than anyone else for this organization is Rev. Charles J. S. Bethune who, since 1906, has been professor of entomology at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. As early as 1862 Mr. Bethune, then a resident of Cobourg, wrote an article for the Canadian Naturalist published at Montreal, naming thirty-five Canadian devotees of what his vulgar call "Bugology" which he had compiled with the assistance of William Saunders, of London, Ont. The article ended with the suggestion that these nature students in modern parlance "get together." On April 18th, 1883, they did forgather at the Canadian Institute in Toronto and Mr. Bethune figured prominently in the proceedings. For five years from 1883 to 1873 he edited the Canadian Entomologist and resumed the task in 1896 conducting the publication up to the end of last year, when Dr. E. M. Walker, of Toronto, took over the reins of editorship. Mr. Bethune has entered his seventy-second year and there is a just disposition to enroll him on the list of Canada's grand old men.

Bad Feeling in House

The outbreak of temper occasioned the all-night sitting at Ottawa is likely to delay prolongation. Some members think they have already earned their $2,500 which a tolerant public pays them for their ability to perform the gentle operation of doing nothing. The naval bill is stranded high and dry, being docketed for pairs. The insurance bill which is so bulky a document that whenever a member wants one, it takes the united efforts of two page boys to bring it into the House, has made its appearance on the order paper after taking up all the time of the Senate so far this session. Unless the doves of peace begin to hover about the precincts of Parliament soon it will be well on to midsummer before proposition guns boom from Nepesin Point.

Nothing to Squander

Canada has nearly everything she wants, except to be left alone to develop her vast resources. But she has neither land, nor forests, nor mines, nor power, nor trade, nor trade privileges to squander. Her resources are great, but not without limit, and foolish administration could soon commit great havoc. Indeed, there has already been far too much reckless waste.—Halifax Herald.

Election Needed

If the debate on the naval question in the Canadian Commons proved anything, it was that the still fuller and more conclusive consideration of a general election campaign is needed to put that important matter on a round and useful basis.

LAND WITHOUT A PRISON.

Dr. Grenfell Tells of the Eskimos of the Labrador Coast.

"The best-educated people in the country at present are the Eskimo," says Dr. W. T. Grenfell, in his new book, "Labrador," recently published by Messrs. Macmillan.

It is a startling, mortifying sentence, for along that rugged coast, the laborer as a medical missionary, there is a considerable, if temporary population of whites.

And many of the visiting white fishermen, chiefly Americans, do not set a good example to the people of the land. They are a generous, open-handed crowd of men, but they go fishing and working on Sundays among our people, who, though poor and far more needy of material wealth, are wise enough to know that life does not consist in the abundance of things man possesses.

"Almost without exception, the Eskimo can read and write. Many can play musical instruments, share in part-sings, and are well able to do their accounts, and know the value of things.

"I have known an Eskimo called in to read and to write a letter for a Newfoundland fisherman; and I have had more than once to ask one to help me by playing cards at material for us at a service, because not one of a large audience could do so.

"I have heard more than one Eskimo stand up and deliver an excellent impromptu speech. Our white population is still very largely illiterate, though some 'breadway' has been made to the coast.

"There are practically no alcoholic liquors sold in Labrador; not a licensed house exists. If liquor is sold at all, it is in very small quantities, and clandestinely, in what we know as 'she-been'.

"Thousands of our fishermen are absolute abstainers on principle, and a very strong anti-liquor sentiment prevails almost universally. The results are obvious in the fact that we have not one policeman stationed along the whole coast; not one among twenty-five thousand people.

"We have, no penitentiary, and there has not been, to my knowledge, a conviction for drunkenness. During sixteen years I have, personally, not seen one fisherman drunk in the various ranks of the coast.

Dr. Grenfell's chapter on the Labrador missions contains striking tributes to the work of the Moravian brethren. At Okkak, where they have a small hospital, the Eskimo at first would not subject themselves to the necessary hospital regimen, but, carried thither by the first patients in our little hospital steamer. It was a new experience to see an Eskimo trying to accommodate himself to a bed. The warmth of the ward was objectionable; the additional heat of the bedclothes, which were not available of any kind they had long despised, and even then they were perspiring and panting.

"In a terrible fatal epidemic of typhoid I had tried to persuade some of my patients to remain in their tents when very feverish. In one case I had endeavored to enforce my ruling by removing the patient's garments. Such a trifling impediment had not daunted him. Why stay under cover when you are hot? Next morning when I awoke, I found his dead body in the tent, and he had covered in the snow; but as his dogs returned in good condition after a fortnight's absence, all of them were shot.

"Like the dogs who will even eat their masters' whips when hungry, the Eskimo Labrador coast have marvelous digestive powers. I have myself taken three small eel and twenty-seven caplin from the stomach of one postprandial fish, and seen an excellent gold ring taken from another.

"A book in three volumes was taken from the stomach of a codfish off Lynn, England, and presented to the vice-chancellor of Cambridge University. Scissors and oysters testify to the catholicity of the cod's appetite."

A Sure Sign

The Argonaut.

Once upon a time, when Senator Robert Taylor, of Tennessee, was "Fiddling Bob" Taylor, and got off a lecture tour, he picked up an old railroad man who was on the bum and transported him north from Louisiana. The bum was an interesting fellow and the governor enjoyed his conversation immensely.

While the train was rolling along between Lake Charles and Alexandria on a branch of the Texas railroad, it entered a thick pine forest. All of a sudden it stopped. A lone flagman's shanty was the only sign of human habitation. A passenger on the train grabbed a small handbag and got off the train. "Governor," said Senator Taylor's bum friend, "a man that gets off at a place like this is guilty of something."

Eminent Toronto Physicians Failed to Cure Rheumatism

Miss Flora Chapman vividly describes her sufferings and ultimate Cure With "Nerviline."

"After being an enthusiastic user of Nerviline for years, I feel it my duty to tell you personally what year-long suffering has been done for me. I suffered torture from rheumatism and heart trouble, tried scores of so-called remedies, consulted for weeks in months with Toronto's most eminent physicians, but derived only slight benefit.

"A friend insisted on my using Nerviline, and to my surprise a vigorous rubbing of this powerful liniment was of the pain and reduced the stiffness in my joints, I continued to use Nerviline and was permanently cured. I am now perfectly well, and for three years have had no rheumatism at all.

"I know many families who are cured no other medicine but Nerviline in minor ailments like earache, toothache, neuralgia, rheumatism, colds, influenza, and all scintilla. I call Nerviline my 'Life Guard,' and urge all to try its merit."

Dec. 17th, 113 Palmerston Avenue, Toronto.

If you are afflicted with rheumatism, try Nerviline. Large bottles, 50c; trial sizes, 25c, at all dealers.

GERMAN AIRSHIP FLEET

Will All be Used for Regular Passenger Traffic.

The wonderful progress which is being made by Germany's airship fleet is shown by the announcement that four new dirigibles of the Parseval type are being constructed at Bitterfeld.

They will be named the Parseval VI, VII, VIII, IX, respectively. Parseval VI, which will be seventy-five yards long, will have a diameter of thirteen yards and a capacity of 6,700 cubic metres, to be sold to the Munich Aerial Navigation Company, which will start airship cruises in and around Munich for passengers.

Parseval VII is ordered by a similar company in Berlin, which will begin Berlin operations at Whitehurst by initiating regular trips for passengers in the vicinity of the capital. Parseval VIII is ordered by the Imperial Automobile Club, the Berlin members having the use of the vessel as an aerial yacht.

Parseval IX is ordered by the Brussels International Exposition, and will begin passenger cruises in the Belgian capital at the end of April or the beginning of May. It is intended to be one of the principal attractions of the World's Fair there.

An immense airship invented by Herr Schutte is approaching completion. It has a capacity of 19,000 cubic metres, and will be able to ascend with a burden of thirty tons aboard.

Herr Parseval has invented a flying machine which is approaching completion. It is fitted with a 114 h.p. Daimler motor, and the trials will begin at the end of May. Mockingbirds, where a factory for constructing Parseval aeroplanes has been erected.
