A Tribute. Old Kingston mourns a Friend And one whose life was wrapped In daily sympathy, With every note that struck In tune with City's good.

Few men go down to death With such a record clear, Few men can carry off So full a mead of praise Why? Every boy could stop And say with truth "My Friend."

His day is done, but we Are left to mourn his loss; To gather round and help Those near and dear to him. We'll not forget his name, So full of thought it is, We'll keep it always like A cherished Memory.
