WORLD'S OLDEST JONAH
THE MALIGNANT MUMMY IN THE BRITISH MUSEUM.
The Hoodoo, however, is a Lady and Her Name Was Princess Hetare—She Put a Curse on the Man Who Should Disturb Her Remains and Has Won Out—Ordered Out of the British Museum.
What is perhaps the oldest hoodoo on earth was still very recently in the British Museum. After some 3,000 years of misadventure the history of the first 30 and the last 30, of which are now known but of which the intervening 2,940 are not, the spirit of the Egyptian Princess Hetare, priestess of Amen-Ra, has won a very signal victory. She has forced the directors of the British Museum to remove her mummy, case from the vitrine case of the museum in the Egyptian hall, and to take it far away in seclusion. It took thirty years of appalling misadventure, and the mummy came in contact with 1,600,000 people, plus to bring the Britons to this state of mind. While they will admit that the misadventure which have overtaken the mummy have anything to do with the hoodoo, they have in no way indicated a decision, ever so cogent, in the action as a tribute to the departed Hetare.
Through the researches of certain savants who became interested in the mummy, the hoodoo was early a story of the original hoodoo, and the hoodoo has become known. The Princess Hetare, it appears, was one of the daughters of Amen-Hetep III, perhaps the most famous Egyptian King of the 18th dynasty. Her father was a powerful and successful ruler, a great son of god, Amen-Ra, and the beautiful Hetare was brought up in the same faith. At the age of 21 she was ordained a priestess of Amen-Ra, and earned the favor of that deity by the earnestness of her ministrations. She had a half-brother, who, on the death of his father, became Amen-Hetep IV. In his youth this young man became a warm devotee of the god Amen, and rejected the cult of Amen-Ra, the god of his father, and Hetare resigned from the priesthood to follow the faith of her half-brother. From that time she incurred the hatred and wrath of the great god Amen-Ra, who, according to the ancient story, decreed that trouble and woe should pursue her through all eternity.
The power of Amen-Ra soon manifested itself on the followers of Atef, the desert tribes began to harass the Egyptians, and Amen-Hetep IV, lost most of the territory his fathers had won. The shrines and temples which he had built at Thebes, his new-found god were pulled down, and the stones were used to rebuild the temple of Amen-Ra. Hetare was killed by a fanatic worshipper of Amen-Ra. Her body was mummified and placed in a rich case, but received none of the honors to which her royal birth would seem to have entitled her. For centuries afterward the Egyptians attributed the famines and droughts which from time to time oppressed them to the wrath of the god and the defilement of Hetare from his priest-hood.
The exhibition in the British Museum to-day is not a mummy. It is only an unadorned mummy case. Unadorned? Well, that's the question. Some there are who hold that the box is as empty as a vacuum. But others, more familiar with the ways of the Egyptians, solemnly point out that while the corpse of the priestess is indeed no longer to be found in the case, her soul has returned and now occupies it, and to the affronted soul of the unfortunate Hetare they attribute the long chain of disasters connected with the unanny exhibit. Inhibited or not, the case has had a very interesting history during the thirty years it has been in the possession of the British Museum, and has earned for itself the name of the "Malignant Mummy."
About thirty years ago four wealthy young Englishmen went for a holiday along the Nile. Bent on pleasure they had no fear of Amen-Ra and did not hesitate when the opportunity came to secure the mummified priestess of Amen-Ra. They made plans to take it back with them as one of the most interesting souvenirs, and put it on a boat on their way up the Nile. Believing it to be of great value, they kept constant watch over it. Judge of their surprise when, on disembarking, they found that the mummy had mysteriously disappeared, and only the case was left! The members of the boat crew were examined, but were able to prove their entire innocence of the theft, and finally it was decided to give up the chase, and to sail off to the east, at least left the boat.
But the grievously offended Hetare was not satisfied. Whether she had left the case of her own accord or had been stolen, she did not propose to let the matter rest there. The mummy case was her home, and it had been stolen. Right away she began to be active.
The following-piece of one of the four exploded and shattered his right arm. The accident was particularly unfortunate because the young man had intended to enter the Life Guards, and the loss of his arm, of course, made a military career out of the question. But that was only the beginning. Shortly after they arrived in England another was killed in a street brawl. Within a year after the termination of the trip a third lost his entire fortune and died shortly afterward, and the fourth likewise died in dire poverty.
With the death of the last of the case passed into the hands of his sister. Right away she passed it into the hands of the British Museum. A photographer secured permission to take a picture of it. But when he developed his picture he found it showed within the box the figure of a woman in long white draperies, and instead of the painted face on the case a face of a particularly malevolent expression. Only a few of these photographs were stricken off, and these have become extremely rare.
Within a year the photographer committed suicide.
Then it was found that the man who had taken the case to the museum, Wm. Fumes, of Farling, had lived in a week, while John Black, who lived at Whitechapel, and who had helped carry it into the building, had been run over by a train and had both legs cut off. The authorities of the museum tried again to have it photographed, and the camera man fell, smashed his camera, and cut his face open. The same day one of his children had a narrow escape from drowning.

All of these things happened before 1905. Since then the story of the famous hoodoo has been well circulated, and the British Museum have generally avoided the Egyptian room altogether. The English papers soon became full of letters from indignant citizens who had looked up the history of the famous Hetare and wanted to know how much longer the trustees of the museum were going to fly in the face of fate by submitting the ancient lid to the profane gaze of the public, thereby incurring the evident resentment of the departed priestess.
How far the authorities of the museum place credence in these theories may be a matter of doubt, but it is a fact that they have at last directed the removal of the uncanny box where it will no longer be offended by the public, and where it will no longer be a source of trouble to the trustees of the museum. It is a fact that they have at last directed the removal of the uncanny box where it will no longer be offended by the public, and where it will no longer be a source of trouble to the trustees of the museum. It is a fact that they have at last directed the removal of the uncanny box where it will no longer be offended by the public, and where it will no longer be a source of trouble to the trustees of the museum.

GUARDIAN OF 384 CHILDREN.
Public Trustee Managing Estates of Tramp and Millionaire.
A most interesting address was given at the Society of Arts in London recently by Mr. C. J. Stewart, the Public Trustee.
In summarizing the extraordinary area of responsibility to which he has been entrusted, Mr. Stewart said he is concerned already with the estates of seventy-nine already deceased persons; with 300 people still living; with 1,000 settlements affecting about 5,000 beneficiaries, and £38,000,000 worth of estates; and is in some measure responsible for the upbringing of no fewer than 384 children.
His duties concerned the estates of testators who varied in their wills from the formula, "I bequeath to my wife 5s." to the millionaire, the average value of the estates being not less than £4,000.
The experience of the Public Trustee is not limited to one class or to the strictly academic and formal cases was shown. An applicant was devious of securing his savings for his little daughter, nine years old. He added, "I have no permanent address or occupation—I am a tramp." From this the range of variety mounted or fell to the "tragedy that is sometimes behind great riches," as Mr. Stewart phrased it grimly.
The Public Trustee has been invited to reconcile husbands and wives. One client, seventy years of age, considered it would come within the purview of the department to "assist him in finding a sporting antagonist of similar age, whom he wished to box, run or jump for £100."
In another case a lady required the department to look out her trains for her, and when everything had been done to make her comfortable reported that "the guard was most attentive, and had a carriage for us labelled 'Ladies only.' My daughter, however, did not appear to appreciate his attention."
Who'd Be a Teacher?
What is wrong with the scholastic profession? Something, evidently. For even the British National Union of Teachers has issued a strong manifesto warning parents of the risks of their children becoming teachers.
The manifesto after two years as a pupil-teacher, the money earned is insufficient to provide board and education; that residential colleges entail great expense; and that a child may remain in a secondary school till sixteen, and then be rejected.
In 1908, 4,836 teachers left the training colleges; three months later 1,235 were without employment, and a year later 259 were known to be still unemployed. And of 4,836 students who left training colleges last July 1,528 were still looking for work in October.
A Linguist on the Bench.
Judge Bacon, of the Bloomsbury, Eng. County Court, is well known as a linguist to settle the disputes reaching his court from the foreign quarters of London over which he has jurisdiction. "Let a man speak the language he understands, and if we do not understand we will have it interpreted," said the judge the other day. Yet there is hardly a European language with which his honor is unacquainted. He is a somewhat severe critic of interpreters, and on one occasion remarked, "Interpreters are those who try to interpret a language they do not know into one of which they know less."
Blythe's Practical Joke.
According to David Denton, the Yorkshire cricketer, who has been touring South Africa with the English team, Blythe, the Kent bowler, likes a practical joke. Previous to one match he had a man come and carry a wicket with a handful of nails and a hammer to tighten the matting. Charlie Blythe took him to the centre of the matting, and told him to put half-a-dozen right on the blind spot, which he did, and he had not the slightest idea but that everything was right. Of course, they had to be removed before a start could be made.

Deformity in Chronic Rheumatism.
JOHN A. SMITH AND HIS REMARKABLE REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM. CURED HIMSELF FIRST, AND NOW OFFERS 50,000 BOXES OF HIS REMEDY FREE.
I will give away 50,000 fifty-cent boxes of my remedy for rheumatism to demonstrate its great value in rheumatic conditions.
My remedy is not made of obscure ingredients. It is made of such well known remedies as Potassium Iodide, Pepsin, Glycerin, Resin, Sulfuric Acid, and Sarsaparilla, and anyone familiar with drugs will at once realize its great value in rheumatic conditions.
Some people seem to think that rheumatism is an incurable disease. I know it is not, because I was told years ago when I had it so bad that I could never be cured. But I was cured by the above ingredients, named the remedy "Gloria Tonic" because I experienced such glorious relief from its use. "Gloria Tonic" of course, did not cure me in a day, nor in a week, but my own case proves that rheumatism can be cured.
There are some rheumatic sufferers who will never be cured, even if their cases are slight and easily curable. This is due to the fact that they do not understand what rheumatism really is. They try a remedy a short time, and if relief is not felt at once they discontinue its use, and call it a fake. This class of rheumatic sufferers usually take their affliction to the grave.
Bear in mind that rheumatism never forms in the body over night. Sometimes it is in the system for years before it makes itself known. It is not

Could Not Sleep.
DOCTOR SAID HEART AND NERVES WERE RESPONSIBLE.
There is many a man and woman tossing night after night upon a sleepless bed.
Their eyes do not close in the sweet and refreshing repose that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system that it cannot be quieted and causes nightmare, bad dreams, starting in the sleep, twitching of the muscles, restlessness, etc.
Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are a specific for all people troubled in this way. They have a soothing and calming effect on the nervous system.
Mrs. Calvin Stark, Rosemore, Ont., writes:—"About two years ago I began to be troubled with a smothering sensation at night when I would lie down. I got so bad I could not sleep in the dark and would have to sit up and rub my limbs, they would become so numb. My doctor said my heart and nerves were responsible. I saw Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills advertised and got a box to try them. I took three boxes and can now lie down and sleep without the light burning and can rest well. I can recommend them highly to all nervous and run down women."
Price, 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Millard Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

$3.50 Recipe Cures Weak Men --- Free
Send Name and Address Today— You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.
I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened memory, falling memory and loss of sleep, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the filices of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge; in a plain ordinary sealed envelope to any man who will write me for it.
This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men and who is convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure—yet not together.
I think I see in my field many men who are everywhere who are weak and discouraged with repeated failures in trying to drug themselves with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest-acting restorative, rebuilding, SPY-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: "Dr. A. E. Robinson, 3032 E. W. Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain ordinary sealed envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $5.00 to $10.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free."
It will not be long before we will all be fretting over the heat of the "good old summer time."
