Anyone, seeing Mr. Samuel Martin, of Strathroy, Out., for the first time, would guess his age at about 60 years, instead of eighty-four. He is as spry on his feet as a cat and is the picture of health.

Mr. H. J. Crawford, principal of the Riverdale Collegiate, Toronto, makes the happiest kind of a chairman, and his services, consequently, are much in demand.

Not so very long ago he occupied the chair in an Islington hall where an amateur dramatic company was giv-ing a performance, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to a local church. The dramatic company was headed and organized by Mr. Lawrence Anthes, of the Toronto Foundry, a warm friend of Mr. Crawford's, and most of the cast were also wellacquainted with the genial, popular

During the first act one of the church officials held a whispered conference with the chairman, and when the curtain fell the latter mounted the platform and addressed the audience. The tones of his resonant voice reached the actors, and, knowing Mr. Crawford's happy kutck of saying what he had to say in a way to please his hearers, one of the troup fired off a horse pistol and the rest cheered

Toronto Boy for South Pole.

One of the physicists who will accompany Capt. Scott on his British expedition in search of the South Pole this year is Mr. C. S. Wright, an old Toronto boy, who has been working the last two years in Cambridge under Prof. Sir J. J. Thomson in the famous Cavendish Laboratory. Mr. Wright was educated at Upper Canada College (head boy 1904) and the University of Toronto, where he took first-class honors each years, and finally won the 1851 exhibition scholarship. He is the second son of Mr. Alfred Wright, Canadian manager of the London & Lancashire Fire Insurance Co. The work of the physicists, Dr. Simpson and Mr. Wright, will comprise the usual meteorological and magnetic work, and in addition a survey of the currents and conditions in the upper atmosphere will be attempted by sending up specially constructed balloons carrying instruments for egistering the temperature and height. Work on ocean currents, atmospheric electricity, radioactivity of the sea and air, salinity of sea water and analysis of the atmosphere will also be undertaken. Another point to which Mr. Wright intends to devote considerable atpoint of view of its age and past history. Should any simple relation be found connecting the crystal structure and the age of ice considerable light would at once be thrown upon the origin of the great ice barrier-that vast floating ice sheet, 200 feet high, 200 miles long and of unknown width, which has so long puzzled the mind of the geologist.

Where Girls Marry Quickly.

On the prairies of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta are hundreds of settlers who are eager to secure wives from the Old Country, but who, owing to the necessity of tending their farms, have been prevented from visiting the populous centres in search of marriageable girls.

Tomeet this requirement, the Salvation Army Emigration Department has established a marriage bureau, and Army parties are personally conducted by an official, who, while he does not act as matchmaker, gives saluable advice on matrimonial affairs. Out of a party of fifty recently sent out to British Columbia, more than half were wedded in a little over a year. The age of the lady emigrants ranges from eighteen to forty, and they are drawn from all classes— from the factory girl to the lady with a small private income.-London

Improved Lands In West Prove a Big Count Gleichen, Equerry to the King, Is Soldier, Diplomat and Author.

> Count Albert Edward Wilfrid Gleichen, extra Equerry to His Majesty the King, the announcement of whose marriage to the Hon. Sylvia Ed-wardes, maid-of-honor to Queen Alexandra, has just been made in Eng-land, is well-known in official social circles in both Canada and the Unitduring that time traveled all over the United States and came several times to Canada, being squite a frequent visitor at Government House as a guest of Their Excellencies. He made himself quite a hero to the enlisted men of Uncle Sam's cavalry on the western frontiers by his splendid horsemanship. He came across the Atlantic with the reputation of being one of the best horse-masters in the British army, and when he visited some of the U.S. army posts in Colorado, Utah, Nebraska and New Mexico, the cavalry assigned to his use some of the most spirited and un-manageable horses in the barrack stables. He not only showed, however, that he was able to stay with the worst buckers and kickers provided, but he persisted in staying with them until they were subdued. When he came to Canada he used to take great delight in the outdoor sports, and on one occasion he traveled all the way from Washington to Ottawa to see a hockey match between the Ottawas and a Montreal team. Count Gleichen is not only a favorite of His Majesty, but a very near relation, being the eldest son of the late Admiral Prince Victor of Hohenloke, Langenburg. He is well known in Europe as a yachtsman and has made his mark as a soldier, a diplomat, and an author. He saw active service in the Nile Expedition of 1884-85 as an officer of the Guards Camel Regiment and was on special service in the Soudan in 1896. He served in South Africa with Gen. Methuen's division in 1899-00, and was severely wounded at the action at Modder River. His specialty as a soldier has been intelligence work, and he is credited with very valuable services in the Intelligence Division of the War Office from 1894 to 1899. From 1901 to 1903 he was Director of Intelligence in the Egyptian army. His diploma-tic career has been varied, including appointments at Berlin and Washington and service on special missions to Morocco, Abyssinia and Fez. His best known books are "With the Camel Corps up the Nile," and "Armies of
