His Well.

Winsted, Conn., May 31 .- While making improvements at F. M. Trabise's house, in Burrville, E. R. Beckley took measurements of the well for a new curbing. He dropped a pole down the well, and it was suddenly knocked out of his hand by something in the water. Beckley's curiosity was aroused and next day he took his rod and line with him.

The hook had only touched the water when Beckley felt a bite. He soon discovered he had a trout so large that it hardly could turn around in the well. According to one of his workmen, he had to remove the old well curb before he could get the fish out.
