BORDEN AND THE FRENCH.

Hon. Dr. Reaume, a member of the Whitney government and a French-Canadian, appeared at a Borden political picnic and spoke so as to show how sweet was the communion that existed between the races in the conservative party.

YOUNG MEN IN CAMP.

Some comment has been passed upon the number of young men who compose the camp. It is the tendency of the day, that the various branches of the service are filled with the younger men, but there never was so large a percentage of them in camp as at the present time.

A reason for it may be found in the manner in which the militia are rewarded for their service. The ordinary rate per day is low, and it can be supplemented only by efficiency pay, and it is dependent upon the shooting at the butts.

The marksmanship is not developed without patient and persistent practice. Indeed one may never become proficient and for the reason that he has not the nerve and sight which are the distinguishing characteristics of the successful shot.

The cause is not far to seek. The average member of a rural corps does not get the rifle practice, does not score well at the butts, and so does not get the efficiency pay. Without it he does not get enough to warrant him in going into camp at this season.

The New Zealand plan may be better, and ultimately it may be adopted in Canada. According to it every youth must be drilled until he is eighteen years of age in the schools and colleges, and they must take their turn in camp until twenty-five years of age.

SHOULD BE VERY THANKFUL.

Mr. Parr, the deputy surveyor of New York City, is not satisfied with the $100,000 which the federal government gave him for his exposure of the Sugar Trust's dishonesty.

Protecting Skilled Labor.

The labor market of the dominion must be protected against overcrowding, but our industries should not be throttled for an absolute lack of help. The immigration regulations should possess some elasticity, and be administered with some sort of discretion.

he escaped the toils, that he has his liberty and conscience and $100,000, ought to make him profoundly thankful.

TIME TO WAKE UP.

The officials of the Ontario government may be very clever fellows, but it is doubtful if they have any justification for an abuse of civic cancellors under certain circumstances.

Dr. Sheard, of Toronto, is just now storming about the blunder which Lindsay made in a filtration scheme, and he may be warranted in his censure.

The town had an outfit which its council believed to be very superior. It was called an Ozone plant, and its alleged merit lay in the fact that the bacteria was killed while the water was passing from the source of supply to the reservoir through electrified pipes.

Then something happened. The Philadelphia engineer, who superintended the installation of the plant, admitted, according to Dr. Sheard, "having doped the water two days before the tests were made."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Jefries, the prize fighter, cannot believe that the church people will not let a contest go on when a fortune has been spent in preparing for it.

There is no demand just now for the immigration of skilled laborers, or labourers that will not go on the farm. The immigration that fills up the towns and cities with surplus labour is not the kind that Canada needs.

A filtration plant costing $20,000, according to Edmonton's commissioner, "going to the menagerie of white elephants which the city now possesses." It is time some central authority defined the filters the cities should purchase in order to save them from a fearful waste of money.

Joe Martin, the hero of Manitoba and British Columbia government, has redeemed his reputation in England. Though elected as a liberal he is out against the Asquith government on the veto question, and will make a scene when he can.

The Brockville Times does not see that there is a difference between conditions in England and America. In the old country people cannot get on the land, to own and work it, and in the other they can and fail to appreciate the privilege.

FLAT CITY YOUTHS

MAYOR GAYNOR HAS FAITH IN COUNTRY BOYS.

Cites Glen Curtiss as an Example—Accomplish More Because of Their Time.

New York, June 21.—Mayor Gaynor is inclined to be a little worried about the young men of New York. He says they scarcely have time to think. If they go into any business after they leave college they are in a hurry all the time, he says.

It is different with the country boys, or the young men of the small towns, says the mayor. They have time to think, and they do think and accomplish many of these things which the young man of the city, or of New York City especially, never accomplish.

Mayor Gaynor expressed his views on this subject a few evenings ago while presiding at the dinner given by the World to Glen H. Curtiss, shortly after the aviator's flight from Albany to New York. Mayor Gaynor, in his customary way of getting down to the bottom of things and spying out the causes which lead to certain great results, explained what he believed to be the reason why Curtiss had succeeded where so many others had failed.

"How does it happen that a young man away up at Hammondport, up in the state of New York, did this great thing when no man in the 5,000,000 down here in New York City did this thing?" said Mayor Gaynor.

"Why, Hammondport sounds to me like Oriskany—that happens to be near where I was born up in the state, the little village of Oriskany. Mr. Curtiss tells me that Hammondport consists of about 1,500 people, and they call the village trustee 'mayor,' and they have very high talk up there and consequential people, and it was so when I was a boy up the state."

"We had a little village of three or four hundred people, where we settled every problem in the whole universe. We used to meet at the post office or the tavern, and whatever was rife, we settled the whole thing; and they are still that up at Hammondport yet. And how does that happen? Well, we have a lot of people from Hammondport down here in New York City, that is to say from all the Hammondports of the state and all the Oriskams of the state. The young man up there did this thing when out of five millions of people down here nobody has tried to do it. That is, except a few people possibly who have come here like Mr. Harmon and Mr. Hamilton and others who are experimenting here."

"The reason is that these people up there have time to think. They not only have time to think, but they are willing to think, and they are willing to think—I don't know how I will say that they are willing to think because they are thinkers, and those who bore them were thinkers. That is about as well as I can express it."

"If they go into any business here, why, they are in a hurry all the time, they are hurried all the time. Those that want to work are hurried all the time, and those who don't like to work, why, they are looking at the clock all the time to see when the time to quit comes, and, of course, those chaps don't accomplish much."

"That in the history of things down here. Our life is artificial. We don't breed exactly the same kind of people, and yet we breed good people—people that could accomplish much if they had the time to do what Mr. Curtiss and his neighbors do up in Hammondport—sit around and talk about two-thirds of the time, and that is just what they do. They are never in a hurry. Dear me, they know they will get a meal of victuals, even though they don't do anything at all. 'But we people down here know

"Otherwise, Mrs. Longworth fairly blazed with jewels at times. A diamond necklace and a diamond studded bracelet are especially conspicuous. 'Frank Kellogg appears to have the president's ear as much as anybody on board. From her lips she blew a faint smoke wreath around her father's head.'"

Growing Unpopular.

New York, June 11.—"Rag-time songs and music have about served their purpose and are gradually going out of popular esteem," according to J. L. Tindale, president of the Music Publishers' Association of the United States, holding annual session, who declared that public taste will henceforth require compositions of more solid nature.

"Rag-time of the trivial sort and the ordinary slangy music of the current popular song will be a thing of the past in five years, he said. It is hard to understand why barroom quips and the slang of the streets should be perpetuated in music, and such goods ought not to be offered for sale or taken into our homes for fire-side entertainment."

Whence the Hot Air.

Guelph Mercury. There is a suspicion abroad that this sudden hot spell is due to the hot air Mr. Borden is giving out at the conservative picnics.

might well that we won't get a meal of victuals except in the almshouse unless we actually earn it. And, therefore, we are alert—just to earn the daily bread that we consume, and alas! too few of us have the time to think over these things, that the people have in the sparse communities. As a result they are achieving these great things. Here is a specimen of it in Mr. Curtiss."

VICTOR NAPOLEON TO WED.

Will Make Princess Clementina His Bride.

Rome, June 18.—The news that the marriage of Prince Victor Napoleon the Bonaparte pretender to the throne of France, and Princess Clementina, the only unmarried daughter of the late king of the Belgians, will take place in Turin some time this month, aroused much comment all over the peninsula, but especially in the ancient capital of Piedmont. The Princess Clementina has been stopping for some time with Princess Clotilde, Prince Victor's mother, at the Castle of Moncalieri, just out of Turin.

Until recently the situation at this town forcibly reminded one of opera bouffe, and it is remarkable that the theme has never been used. Here wed Princess Letitia, cousin of the Bonaparte pretender, and cousin of the king of Italy, and here also resided the Duchess d'Adeta, sister of the Orleans pretender, and also cousin, through her husband, of the king. To them came from time to time the two pretenders on visits, and thus in the intimate of family ties, drinking toasts to each other and apparently on the best of terms, while their supporters glared and spurred in secret.

Between them stood King Victor Emmanuel, always cordial, always the same, extending the same hospitality to both, but desiring the situation intensely. Thus both the Bonaparte and Orleans pretender have in Turin their respective supporters, and because of its vicinity to France—only three hours away by rail—they consider this town a rallying point in case of action. This does not disturb the Turinese in the least, as the "action" is such a dream that even the pretenders themselves scarcely think it worth while to pose any more.

It is hoped that this marriage of Prince Victor Napoleon and Princess Clementina will reinforce a family which has very few members left. It was a big house to have died almost out in so few generations. Besides Napoleon the emperor, whose was Joseph Lucien, who had seven children; Maria Anna, Louis' three sons; Jerome, who had both American and European children; Carlotta, and Pauline.

Prince Victor Napoleon is descended from Jerome. His mother, Princess Clotilde, was the daughter of King Victor Emmanuel the Great, and at sixteen was married for political reasons to Prince Napoleon, son of Jerome, and thus grandson of Napoleon. There are now only nine other members of the family, of which the men are nearly all unmarried, so that a generation or two will probably see the end of this wonderful house.

MRS. LONGWORTH'S FAID.

Doesn't Wear Wedding Ring and Smokes Cigarettes.

Boston, June 21.—Clifton Carberry, managing editor of The Boston Post, who came across the ocean on the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria with ex-President Roosevelt, has the following wireless despatch in his newspaper: "I hear much comment among the women passengers over the fact that Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, the ex-president's daughter, who was Miss Alice Roosevelt before her marriage, does not wear a wedding ring. This fact especially pleased the suffragettes. They regard it as evidence on her part of the revolt against 'woman's bondage to man.' On the other hand, most of the married women appear somewhat shocked by the omission."

"Otherwise, Mrs. Longworth fairly blazed with jewels at times. A diamond necklace and a diamond studded bracelet are especially conspicuous. 'Frank Kellogg appears to have the president's ear as much as anybody on board. While Kellogg and other friends have been sitting on deck, engaged in warm discussion, Mrs. Longworth has been sitting opposite the party. In her hand was a cigarette. From her lips she blew a faint smoke wreath around her father's head.'"

"This is not the first time she has been seen in public with a cigarette, and the tongues of women who observed the event are busily wagging over it."

It is hard to understand why barroom quips and the slang of the streets should be perpetuated in music, and such goods ought not to be offered for sale or taken into our homes for fire-side entertainment."
