LEFT GOODS BEHIND

AFTER BREAKING INTO PRINCESS STREET STORE.

Thieves Entered Store of New York Dress Reform, But Were Frightened When Going Out With Their Booty—Made Thorough Search of Place, and Left Small Sum in the Cash Register.

After making a thorough inspection of the store, and picking out four pairs of shoes, which suited their fancy, burglars, who visited the store of the New York Reform, at 209 Princess street, got the stolen goods collected near the back door of the shop, and then took to their heels, leaving the goods behind. There is no doubt that the job was pulled off by some amateurs.

The store was visited some time between 9 and 10 o'clock. Entrance was secured at the rear of the store. A piece of netting was torn off the top of one of the windows, and the window was raised by the thief extending his arm on the inside. It was a long reach, but it was made all right.

Once inside the store, a thorough search was made. The boxes on the shelves were found to be in disorder, and there was every evidence that the place had been well looked over. There were fifty coppers in the cash register, but the thieves allowed this to remain. No doubt, they were in search of bills, but luckily the people in charge of the store, well looked after the financial end of the business and had the money in safe keeping.

Frank McCue, of the Windsor hotel, evidently was the person who frightened the would-be burglars away. The store is next to the hotel, and when Mr. McCue was out in the yard, about 9:30 o'clock, he heard a noise at the back of the store as if some people were at work around the packing cases. A call was sent to the police, but when a couple of constables appeared on the scene, the offenders had made good their escape, but the four pairs of shoes were found near the back door.

Had not Mr. McCue gone out, the store, no doubt, would have suffered a loss. Some are inclined to believe that the people who broke into this store, also committed the theft at Prouse's drug store a few days ago.

DESERVES A BETTER OFFICE.

Yankee Visitors Condone With the Yankee Consul.

Consul Johnson receives scores of United States visitors at his office every day, and most of them condole with him over the fact that the government at Washington is too parsimonious to furnish an office that would be worthy of his representation in this city. To-day a Whig representative was in the consul's office when a party of New Yorkers expressed surprise that the government had not spent a couple of thousand dollars in making the representative's headquarters here attractive, as there are so many thousands of American visitors staying here during the season. Some of them were old-time visitors, and they made the remark that Kingston always did have room for the furnished quarters for the United States consul.
