IT HAS DESERVED SUCCESS.

The Montreal Witness had, on the 13th of August, its fiftieth anniversary as a daily newspaper. It fittingly looked back over its remarkable career, thankfully, happily, and glanced forward with the spirit of the optimist, expressing faith in Canada and its people, and in the birth of better things each new day.

"This," said our contemporary, "characterizes every issue of the Montreal Witness." No paper in the dominion has been more esteemed, no journal has had a more honourable record. It has been true to certain principles, the principles of its founders, and then it has shown that it can be uncompromising in its attack on social and political evils, and win and retain the respect of those whom its action affects. The Witness has a unique place in Canadian journalism. It is a clean paper, giving the news of the day without sensation, and dealing with public questions in a vigorous, incisive and independent fashion. More power to it.

CRISIS ACROSS THE WAY.

It looks as if the republican party in the United States may be wrecked in the next election. It was clearly a mistake to try and snuff out the insurgent movement when it showed itself in the last congress. The spirit of unrest early manifested itself, and the old guard should have seen what was coming. Instead of conciliating those who were opposed to the ear-ly proceedings of the speaker, and of the political combine of which he was the working head, the disposition of the regulars was to contest every act of the insurgents and to force a fierce and relentless conflict.

This war has extended outside of congress, has spread over the country and has resulted in several victories for the insurgent forces. Incidentally Mr. Roosevelt has been dragged into the fray. He has tried to avoid participating in it, as the friend of the party and President Taft, but he has suffered nevertheless and will eventually find himself engaged in an attempt to straighten out the tangle.

The significant announcement is made that Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of Mr. Roosevelt, has repudiated Cannonism, and all that it implies, and it is added that he does this with the concurrence of the president and vice-president. This means that the republican leaders have awakened to the fact that Uncle Joe must be sacrificed if the party would be saved. A desperate disease necessitates a desperate remedy. Further it is announced that Mr. Roosevelt will be a candidate for the presidency in 1912. It seems to be inevitable. "He may be the saviour of the party."

A MAN OF CHANGE.

The Toronto Globe and News are exchanging compliments and with regard to the virtues of Laurier's biography. In 1903, Mr. Willson published "Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Liberal Party." Of the premier he must indeed have had a sincere admiration. No one could have pursued the subject as Mr. Willson did, or collected the material for two good-sized volumes and elaborated their contents with such care, unless he were carried away with the conviction that the object of his praise was about as perfect in manhood, in morals, and in methods as it was possible to be.

The change from ultra liberalism from the editorial direction of the Globe, and its advocacy of all that was vital and virile in the party—to independence, with a conservative leaning, and later to complete apostasy, is difficult to imagine. Men may change their allegiance suddenly for a cause. Disappointed ambitions, may make a sad wreck of many a one's political faith. But disappointment has not been changed or suspected in the case of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's biographer. At first, in a new sphere, there seemed to be the opening for a treatment of political issues on an exalted plain. The News was to be a journal of ideals. It was to set the pace or example for the profession in Canada.

Alas, there has been a fall from grace, gradual, deep, irrevocable. At the outset the Ross government was attacked. It was bad, and the pen that had defended it produced, with amazing celerity, the articles that were savage in their nature. For a time Laurier was spared. It was impossible, of course, that the man could drop at once from the pedestal on which the editor left him, but by degrees the transformation has been going on, and now Sir Wilfrid is about as wicked as he really can be. The later portrait of him has invited the contrast between 1903, when the biographer extolled his virtues, and 1910, when the editor defamed him. And the extent of this surprising change is that the biographer has kept the faith while the gris has shamefully deserted the party and its programme of 1903.

It is meant by this that the liberals have gone astray, and reached political perdition, while one man, generally believed to have lost himself and his political creed, is safe and sane and sound? Surely not, for that would be a deduction that the facts and experiences of the last seven years do not justify.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The clover fields now look their best. They are in blossom, thick, luxuriant, sweet smelling. The perfume is wafted across the country, and those who ride are breathing in the delicious odour.

In Montreal a man, jealous or crazy, shoots his wife and then himself. He did this with a third revolver he had purchased. It is illegal to carry firearms. It should be illegal to buy and sell them. Big knives and revolvers are not made for any useful purpose.

CONGRATULATIONS are in order upon the settlement of the Toronto street railway company's labour difficulty. The issue was local, but it was important, and the success it had again demonstrates the place and power of conciliation. The virtue of diplomacy cannot be too highly extolled.

The Toronto News has said many bitter, hostile, partisan things against Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and shows some repentance in its laudation of his speech on the immigration question at Vancouver. The tribute, which the Whig quotes in another column, is an evidence of returning society.

The little animals, whose skins, deodorized, become sable, and are cherished by our women, seemed to be numerous in our country at present. They are being continually scared, especially at night, by the flying automobiles and their head lights, and the people for miles around are made conscious of the fact.

He Popped the Question.

It was an unconventional manner in which Lord Kelvin "popped the question," and in the doing so won his wife. The question of simplifying the method of signalling at sea was then occupying his attention. His plan seemed simple to him, but to ordinary folk it was rather puzzling. He was staying with friends in Madeira at one time, and one day the subject was under discussion at the dinner table, but the only person who seemed able to grasp it was his host's daughter, a young woman whom he greatly admired.

"I quite understand, Sir William," she said. "Are you sure?" he questioned, half doubtfully. "If I sent you a signal from my yacht, do you think you could read it, and answer me?" "I believe I should succeed in making it out," was the reply.

The signal was sent, and the recipient did succeed in making it out and transmitting the reply. The question was, "Will you marry me?" and the answer was, "Yes."

Denies Engagement.

Don Jaime, legitimist, pretender to the throne of Spain, has issued from his chateau of Frohsdorf, in Austria, says the Marquis De Fontenay, an official denial of the reports of his engagement to Miss Ana Morgan, daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan, which have obtained a great deal of publicity in the European and American press, and which have been a source of much annoyance to herself and to her family. Don Jaime declares in his denial that he has only had the honor of meeting Miss Morgan once in his life, and that he is not engaged to anyone. It would be operative, from a dynastic and political point of view, that he should wed, not only a Roman Catholic, but also a princess of one of the sovereign houses of Europe. A matrimonial alliance with a woman of lesser rank would put an end, once and for all time, to his prospects and pretensions to the throne of Spain.

When an Editor Moves.

A country editor, who was not supposed to be rich, built himself a modest cottage, says the New York Journal. The neighbors were all interested, and, naturally, made enquiries as to how the building was progressing.

The editor became tired of being asked whether the plastering was dry yet, whether he expected to move in this week, and so on. As he expressed it, he could not appear in the street with out somebody's asking: "How's the house getting along?"

One day he was quite out of patience and just then a subscriber asked: "Well, Mr. Barnes, have you moved into your new house yet?"

"We began this morning," answered the editor, "we carried over a chair and a wall cellar and left the dog in the yard."

"Well, well," said the subscriber, "you must be glad to have your moving so nearly through."

Continued Danger.

A nurse had been called as a witness to prove the correctness of a bill of a physician.

"Let us get at the facts of the case," said the lawyer, who was doing a cross-examination. "Didn't the doctor make several visits after the patient was out of danger?"

"No, sir," answered the nurse. "I considered the patient in danger as long as the doctor continued his visits."

Some men would give if given a chance, but there are others who refuse to take chances.

FIGHT OVER WOMEN

OFFICER CUTS OFF HIS RIVAL'S HEAD.

Latter Tried to Horsewhip Him on the Streets, and Loses His Life—The Murderer Arrested.

Bucharest, Aug. 22.—Captain Grigoric, an artillery officer, yesterday cut off a man's head in the street at Botoshani, Roumania.

He had a violent quarrel with Dr. Frunzescu, an advocate, about a woman, and the lawyer had challenged him to a duel. The captain, however, refused to fight him, on the ground that Dr. Frunzescu was not a man of honor.

When Dr. Frunzescu next met his adversary on the street he attempted to fog him with a horsewhip. Captain Grigoric at once drew his heavy artillery sabre, and with one blow cut off the head of the lawyer, which rolled in the gutter.

Witnesses of the scene tried to lynch the captain, who after a struggle at bay with sword until the police arrived, when he allowed himself to be arrested.

WAS NO WARRANT

For Using Several Names in the Scandal.

VICE-PRESIDENT SHERMAN.

Sulphur, Okla., Aug. 22.—The committee, appointed by the House of Representatives to investigate the Gore bribery charges, issued this statement, Saturday night: "The committee has carefully considered all of the testimony submitted, and it is unanimous in the opinion that there is and was no warrant for any person to use the names of Vice-President Sherman and Senator Charles S. Curtis in connection with any improper relation with any Indian contract whatever."

MORE PROFITS IN DAIRY.

Poor Crops Will Drive Scores Out of Business.

Brandon, Aug. 22.—E. W. Hanna, one of the big farmers of Western Manitoba, states, after an inspection of his farms in the frigid district: "It is now evident that early crop predictions were too pessimistic. We will have the slightest crop we ever had in this part of the country, but not a losing yield. It will go ten or twelve bushels to the acre and will show up well. Late barley is as fine as the country ever produced.

"The farmer will profit, too, by the light yields, for they will serve to turn his attention to stock raising and other side lines. Scores of farmers, including myself, are going into dairy work. There will soon be a noticeable increase in the production of beef and butter, the demand for which now exceeds the supply. This unfavorable season has done more than anything else in the past to convince the farmers that the one-crop plan must be discarded and more attention given to side lines that are open for development on the farm."

A GOLD MINE DEAL.

A. H. Gracey Interests the Guggenheims in B.C. Property.

Gananogue Reporter.

Arthur H. Gracey, who has for some ten years been engaged in mining in British Columbia, secured a gold mining property some three years ago, called the Nugget mine, in the Sheep Creek district, near Nelson. The company was composed of Nelson men. Mr. Gracey undertook, as mining engineer, to open up the property, and had several tunnels cut. From the very first the ore was promising. The company therefore erected a small mill (four stamps) and found the yield of gold very satisfactory. In one year from the time the mill began running gold enough was got to pay for the property and all improvements made to it.

All development work continued to show valuable ore and in large quantities. Then about three months ago a specially rich vein was struck, which old timers seemed to indicate that this might be the richest mine yet found in British Columbia. But to secure results it was necessary to have a larger mill, and the company not having sufficient capital to make the necessary improvements, it was decided either to interest more capital in the property or to sell out. Mr. Gracey succeeded in getting the Guggenheims, of New York, interested, who sent their engineer to examine the property, and after looking very carefully over it, they decided to buy a controlling interest in the Nugget mine after they had secured options on several other promising properties in that section. This was a very profitable transaction for the Nelson company, and Mr. Gracey is congratulated upon his success in getting such a wealthy firm interested in a very promising British Columbia gold mine.
