BEGAN HIS CAREER

RECALLING ROBERT PINKERTON'S FIRST CASE.

How the Founder of the Famous Detective Bureau Began His Career as a Sleuth—It Was a Political Issue.

Even many years back politics in the United States, and especially in the neighborhood of New York city, seem to have been pretty rotten. In the Newark Evening News, George Quarr, tells how Robert Pinkerton—who was a hero with most of us in our tender youth—began his career as a detective. Here is the story:

It was a tremendous sensation when every office-holder in Warren county was indicted and held before the grand jury to answer for dishonesty in office. There were no protests of innocence heard from the accused. The proofs of their guilt were far too palpable and direct for that. But they weakly whined a request that the investigators should extend their search back for fourteen years and prosecute their predecessors in office.

"That might not clear us of blame," they pleaded, "but it would show that we are no worse than others who were in office before us; for they did the same thing we have done. We have simply followed in their footsteps," they said.

Although their plea for retrospective justice could not be granted, seeing that indictments were operative for offences committed beyond the space of two years, yet the investigators did probe the accounts away back as requested, and they found the statements true, that the same rottenness of maladministration had been sapping their country's foundation for over fourteen years.

All the accused officers were arrested and lodged in jail, but admitted to heavy bail. And, of course, most of them had no difficulty in finding sureties ready to go upon their bail bonds, and were liberated pending trial. But one of them, a prominent professional man, finding himself unable to procure bondsmen, had to remain in durance.

Not being disposed to submit to this indignity, he foolishly resorted to the vulgar plan of breaking his way out of jail, and fled through the fields and over the Oxford mountains to his home in Washington, Warren county.

His heart yearned, however, not for his home and beloved ones there, but for his wife's pocket money. He stole into his home like a burglar, extracted $100 of his wife's savings from her little private cupboard, and, sneaking away as he had come, went cautiously to another woman he had been supping there. His escape from jail, together with the money he had stolen, as well as his mysterious flight when it was found that the fugitive had not been seen at his home. But the public prosecutor was an astute man, and, being put upon his wicket, he sent for a young man of whom he had the highest opinion in such matters.

"Bob," he said, when the young man came, "you're the very man for this job. I mean—," said he, naming the prison-breaker. "He has been foolish enough to break jail, and has taken to his heels. He did not go home, I find, but in his hiding, somewhere. You bring that man back here to his cake and milk, and your fee, whatever the amount, will be ready, waiting for you."

Bob, who was almost entirely without a clue, started first to ferret out the woman in the case. It was an intricate and difficult piece of dovetailing disjointed facts into one another that led him to the then highly fashionable London Terrace, between Ninth and Tenth avenues in New York. In a select boarding-house, about the middle of the row, a tall, sub-cut haired, elegantly attired woman had been residing about a week when she came under Bob's close observation. At the old Fog Horn Inn, on the corner of Twenty-third street and Ninth avenue, where the young sleuth, Bob, put up, the lady in whom he was so interested was much discussed in the bar as the "strawberry blonde." She often walked up and down Twenty-third street, and the "toys" over their cups were enthusiastic over her charming appearance. Bob joined with zest in the conversation, but all the time was not in despair because his man did not put in his appearance along with the woman. Suddenly, however, the strawberry blonde rolled away in a cab with trunks on top, and though the "boys" did not have even an inkling of it, Bob promptly bowled away in the same direction in another cab.

The result was that two mornings later when the lady left her hotel in Richmond, Va., for a walk, accompanied by a dark, smooth-shaven man wearing green glasses, Bob came sneaking up behind, tapped the man on the shoulder, and addressed him as "—the man he wanted."

NEW NATIONALISM

OLD-TIME MORALITY APPLIED TO CONDITIONS OF TO-DAY.

Creed of Mr. Roosevelt—The Colonel Takes a Whack at Metropolitan Newspapers That Bear False Witness.

Oyster Bay, Sept. 15.—Theodore Roosevelt said, to-day, that he is not talking revolution, in declaring his new political creed. Neither is he making an appeal to mob rule. In a staunch defence of his doctrine of the "New Nationalism," he declared that he was merely urging the application of old moralities to modern conditions. At the same time, he replied with spirit to those who have been opposing him and hotly denounced newspaper editors who had attacked honest public men.

Col. Roosevelt's address was delivered at the Suffolk county fair, at Riverhead, Long Island. His exposition of "new nationalisms" came at the close of a speech in which he also denounced dishonest corporations, dishonest men of wealth and political bosses. He made no reference to the New York state political situation, although he was asked to do so by some in the crowd.

"I wish to see a greater movement of efficiency, because we live and deal with greater business efficiency. Simple laws are all that are necessary in small communities where there is no big business and each man works for himself. When you get masses of wealth gathered together and great corporations developing, conditions become so changed that there must be an increase in government activity to control the wealth for business efficiency."

"I would not do any wrong to the great corporation, but I don't intend to rely only on the big corporation's spirit to see that the corporation doesn't do harm against me. I want to see that control of the wealth now gathered for business uses is in favor of the honest man who does his work genuinely for the service of the public, and to make the dishonest man who has to do what is right, and if he doesn't feel it shall go to it that he does."

"That is my whole creed. That is all there is in it. There is no revolution in it. There is no appeal to mob rule. On the contrary, I recognize more and more as an enemy of the public good, and as a lawless man, the politician who makes promises that he does not keep and it has to do with newspapers which say what they know is not true. Mark Twain said that there are 569 different kinds of lies, but the only one which was essential to his body was that of being false witness against your neighbor. There are one or two metropolitan dailies which would do well to print that at the head of their columns, and then try to live up to it. I withhold their names, but the omission is easily supplied."

SHOULD LOWER THE DUTY

On Canadian Butter and Cheese to Three Cents.

Brookville, Sept. 16.—At the cheese board meeting the offerings were 1,865 colored and 525 white, and the board was cleared in a few minutes, when 11c was reached, a figure, as the Lovell & Christmas representative, which the other buyers quickly took up.

M. K. Everetts, one of the leading dairymen of the province, brought up at the meeting Canada's coming reciprocity conference with representatives of the United States government, by stating efforts should be made to have the States lower the duty on butter and cheese from six to three cents a pound. He claimed that never during this season has cheese sold in New York state lower than 14c a pound, and while in Canada it had only on one or two occasions gone as high as 11c. In the States, with the tariff reduced, he saw an opening for better prices and instances the lowering of the duty on cream as a basis, several hundred pounds having been sent from this section during the present season.

J. H. Singleton, Smith's Falls, a director of the Eastern Ontario Dairy-men's Association, said he would bring the matter before that body by asking that a deputation be appointed to work on the Canadian representatives to the coming conference and lay the matter before them.

ENTOMBED 24 HOURS.

Second Fall of Roof Killed the Miner.

Mahoney, City, Pa., Sept. 17.—After being entombed for twenty-four hours in the Knickerbocker colliery, and on the point of being rescued alive, John Koriake, a miner, of Shenandoah, was crushed to death by a second fall of the roof. All yesterday the entombed man talked to the rescuing party, and was confident of being taken out alive. Towards morning the second fall cut off communication, and when he was reached the rescuers found him buried under a great pile of coal.

Population of Cleveland.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The population of Cleveland, Ohio, as announced by the census bureau, is 590,653, an increase of 178,895, or 43.9 per cent, as compared with 381,758 in 1900.

LADY SERVANTS HAVE CLUB.

Congenial Society of Londoners in Reduced Conditions.

A club for "lady servants" is soon to be opened in London. The main object of the club, according to the secretary, is to give such servants an opportunity of enjoying the social life of which their position often deprives them.

People would be astonished, she says, if they knew how many ladies have gone into domestic service in the last few years. Many of them belong to distinguished old families, and others are the daughters of doctors, engineers and lawyers.

The chief hardship in the career of a lady who becomes a servant, it is pointed out, is the lack of congenial society, but she will be lonely no longer. In future she will spend her evenings out at the club.
