IN A FOOTBALL GAME

R. J. McARTON RECEIVED FATAL INJURY.

Bright Queen's Student Met With Untimely Death—Football at Ottawa on Oct. 8th—Some College Notes.

Peculiarly pathetic, was the sudden and untimely death, of Robert J. McArton, of Carleton Place. A young man in the full vigor of health, and an arts graduate of Queen's university he went west, this spring, to teach school.

Internal injuries sustained while playing football two months ago brought death last Saturday. As one of the "Macs," he was familiarly and favorably known, at Queen's. He was one of the men of the college taking an active interest in every department of school life. For several years, he played with the senior association football team, and excelled in all athletics. As a student, he always stood well up in his class and his death will be deeply deplored by all whose privilege it was to know him.

MADAM MELBA HERE

SHE ARRIVED IN HER SPECIAL PULLMAN CAR.

She is Pleased With Kingston—Heard Her New Singing Records for First Time—Sings Here Monday Evening.

Madame Melba, the great Australian soprano, and one of the world's greatest, arrived with her company here from Ottawa, on Friday afternoon over G.T.R. Her entrance into the city was quietly effected. No one, except the railway officials knew the time of her coming, else the great singer would have received a welcome. Melba never leaves her private car, except to go for a drive, or a walk, or to proceed to the theatre. She travels in a magnificently furnished Pullman, and has a cook, who has been with her for six years. She also has her waiter.

Melba's car was sidetracked at the junction in a picturesque spot. She said that she intended to enjoy the sights about Kingston, the beauties of which old city she had heard much about. Madame looks like one of thirty-five. She is certainly charming.

Heretofore, Melba has sung only in Montreal and Toronto, her last visit to Canada being five years ago. On this tour she is filling fifteen dates in Canada, she has been heard in Canada only twice before. Kingston is the smallest city in which she will sing, and the people here are favored by her presence. She likes the Canadian climate very much, and says it is very much like that in New South Wales.

Perhaps every one knows that Melba took the name of the town in Australia in which she was born. Her maiden name was Nellie Mitchell, and very early in life she developed a remarkable voice.

Her Canadian tour so far has been a phenomenal success. She has sung in Halifax, Quebec, Montreal and Ottawa, and in each place the high-water financial mark was reached by her concert.

On Monday evening she will sing in the Grand Opera House, and a great audience is expected to be present. A special train will be run from Brockville and Gananoque. The return rate from Brockville is one dollar. The special will leave here at 11.30 o'clock, just after the concert.

With Melba are Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Shipman, Canadians, who are dissecting the great singer's tour. They lived five years in Australia.

Mr. Child, manager of the Victor Talking Machine company, Philadelphia, is in the city, having come here with Melba's new singing records, made just after her arrival in New York three weeks ago, and which the company claims to be the best of any voice ever turned out. This morning, Melba heard these records in her car for the first time, and was greatly pleased with them.

John Lemorne, flutist with Melba's company, has also made some records for money, alleged to be owing for the flute. Mr. Lemorne is said to be the greatest living flute soloist.

A limited number of $2 gallery seats will be on sale, Monday, at the box office.

The death took place, suddenly, at St. John's, Que., on Friday evening, of Gabriel Marchand, member of the Quebec legislature for St. John's and editor of Canada-Francaise. Mr. Marchand was stricken with heart failure in his office, and died shortly after being removed home. He was fifty-one years of age and was the son of the late Hon. F. C. Marchand, at one time premier of Quebec. Madame Dandurand, wife of the senator, is a sister.

A BIG MAJORITY

Accorded to Nationalists in South Africa.

Johannesburg, Sept. 17.—With nineteen constituencies still to report, the nationalist party stands with a strength of 25, just two more than the other three parties. It was reported, yesterday, that General Botha had taken his defeat so much to heart that he purposed resigning, but this report is not confirmed.

The premier was untrusting and suspicious for several minutes after the confirmation of his defeat. Right Hon. F. E. Moore, the minister of commerce, and the former premier of Natal, has been defeated, making three ministers who have lost their seats.

This has thrown the nationalists into confusion. The election, however, terminates the fear that the nationalists will rule. Hertzogian, probably, has received a death blow.

The unionist majorities are large, sixteen, or seventeen seats in Orange River Colony having gone solidly for them.
