FORCEFUL SERMON.

Pastor's Ordination-Five Years' Service in This Charge.

"For I determined not to know any hing among you, save Jesus Christ and Him crucified."-I Corinthians

Rev. Dr. MacTavish chose the above text, at the service, in Cooke's church n Sunday morning, and a more fiting one could not have been selected for the occasion, as the services of the day marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the ordination of the pastor, and the fifth anniversary of his induction, as pastor at Cooke's church. The services were bright and helpful, the choir particular and helpful, the Mrs. J. Evans and Allan Lemmon. made arrangements for a social, which will be held in the school room, tolight, to observe the pastor's anniversary. A special programme has been prepared, and a most profitable time is being looked forward to by the

It was a most eloquent and forceful sermon which Dr. MacTavish delivered at the morning service—an appeal for the saving of the world, through Jesus Christ,—Christ crucified, to save the world. The speaker had been caffed a iches of Christ, and he hoped that this would ever be the central theme sermons had not been fruitful, the how "Old Bach" fell in love with a school teacher, went to school to win her and got "left." A jolly school pictnot be exhausted. It was like a spring of water, refreshing everyone who par-took of it. There was no other subject upon which a preacher could speak upon, as "Jesus Christ and Him crucified." What other subjects could earers would have become tired of it. If political questions were taken up, at a time when there was no election on, in three months' time, the speaker would have exhausted himself, and the

It was not so, however, in speaking on Christ's great remedy for sin. True, the church attendance might be smaller than it should be, but, nevertheless, there was not a subject a man could discuss, week after week, as this great central theme of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and Him crucified. And it was not difficult to account for this The not difficult to account for this. The character of Christ was so beautiful that it was always interesting. Those who did not believe in Him, felt that it would be better for them if they did. He was the greatest physician of all, one who never failed in His diag-

And here are men hungering for omething the world could not give hem. What a blessing we could poin to Him, Who is the bread of life. Men are thirsting for something the world could not give them, and we could point them to the water of life. Men were groping in the dark, knowing not which way to turn. Was it not a blessing, that we were able to point them to God, so that they might walk in the light, and stumble no more. The gates of paradise were closed to some men, and it was in-deed a great blessing, to point to Him, who said, "I am the Way." One great reason for making this theme the central point in preaching ree-for-All Race, Purse $100 was that there was no other subject so effective. Wherever it was proclaimed, it served to break down the stronghold of sin. Incidents in past history, were related by the speaker,

In his closing remarks the preacher said that to have a beneficial result, the preacher must be listened to sympathetically. If a person came to the service with this attitude, "well, here I am," they could not expect any beneficial result, but if before coming, they prayed earnestly, that the preacher might have a message for them, then he felt sure that God would hear these gravers, and no matter how these prayers, and no matter how aulty the sermon might be, they would not go away from the service without having derived some good.
