THANKSGIVING DAY.
The Canadian government, Christian in its character and belief, has set apart Monday next for thanksgiving to God for His beneficent providences of the year. As loyal, thankful Canadians we should crowd the churches and publicly manifest our gratitude to our Heavenly Father for loving care, bountiful provision and unnumbered mercies. "But," says one, "with thankful hearts, I daily acknowledge my dependence upon God for goodness and mercy." This is well, but when the government calls upon the nation to gather in the houses of worship and with one voice acclaim praise to the Creator for unlimited manifestations of regard, it is the duty of every true citizen to do so. Will it be done?

It is well to pause for a moment in the busy rush of our ever-multiplying activities and thoughtfully review the way the Lord hath led us. In every church some minister will recall the past, will tell of God's bountiful provision, "drawing us closer to the Divine, and the thrill arousing a song of thanksgiving in our hearts."

Sydney Hope, of Bloomfield, Ont., in this week's Guardian, has put into poetry a fitting tribute of thanksgiving to the Almighty:

How rich the year in fruit and grain,
To nourish well the inward part;
Nor rained soft showers, nor hoarded heat,
That drew a harvest from the heart.
The cruel word that broke our pride,
The death that brought the living near;
The hope that withered in its bloom—
Were seed whose harvest crowned the year.
For these the tears, the loss, the pain,
To mourn the road of prayer or praise;
The fire that burned the dross away,
And made sweet incense of our days;
Food, flowers, friends and sun-lit air,
All drew our mind of praise for gain;
But after in the valley and low,
"Dear God, we thank Thee for the show."

The pain that made us love Thee more,
That drew us from the world's embrace,
That made us one with those who weep,
And in each form Thy image trace.

THE JUDGES AND TAXATION.
The high court judges have notified the Toronto court of revision that their salaries, being paid by the Dominion government, are not taxable, and that they propose to appeal against the assessment of the same.

Under the Assessment Act of Ontario the salaries of bankers, lawyers, clerks, accountants, all and sundry who receive or earn more than the sum exempted by the law, are assessed for municipal purposes, and pay their dues accordingly. Why should a judge or federal official escape this tax? Why should a federal salary be exempt from the levy any more than the salary of the city or provincial official? The World gives the summary of the case for and against thus:

"In a memorandum filed with the court, it is stated that in the case of Leproux vs. Ottawa, it was decided that a provincial legislator had no power to levy a tax upon the income of an officer of the Dominion government, or to confer such power upon municipalities. This decision was given in 1878, and it is declared that never up to the present time has an attempt been made to assess a judge's official salary."

"The city assessment department, in rebuttal, presents a memorandum prepared by J. S. Fullerton, K.C., when corporation counsel, citing an instance where the privy council, in a case carried there from the appellate court, decided that the provincial legislator had the right to tax a salary paid to an officer by the Australian commonwealth."

"The judges are pursuing a sensible course in inviting an appeal which must eventually reach the privy council. The matter has been in doubt long enough. It is time it was settled and by a court whose decision is final."

REPUBLICAN THING CLOSED.
It is not remarkable that some of the politicians of the day in the United States, and some very "knowable ones," do not understand what Mr. Roosevelt means by the "new nationalism." The great radical is usually very anxious to be understood, and he has on certain times been very particular about defining his meaning. But the title which describes his movement, for the movement he leads, is not very expressive. One man interprets it to mean that Roosevelt is against "bossism" and "trustism," in all its forms.

It can stand a further elaboration, and this is supplied in the definition by Dr. Shaw, in the Review of Reviews, of the policy of the progressives. It is that they are "opposed to the domination of the republican party and of our public life by private interests." Further the thing that makes them chiefly in their power against tyrannical methods, "They do not propose to be bound or to accept orders without knowing the reason why."

One effect is outlined in the New York Herald, which says that the republican party need expect no contributions towards election expenses, that "the big noise has scared off the campaign cash." Appeal is even being made to the disgruntled republicans for aid, and to the end that the democratic candidate for governor may win. Scores of men who have always contributed from $50 to $500 for each campaign have "this year declined to give a penny."

The new nationalism is, therefore, having a unique experience. It is being forced to direct a campaign without funds, practically, it may be disastrous, but the election will be pure. Col. Roosevelt wants this, but he also wants his man to win.

VOICE OF THE DISSENTERS.
A section of the Presbyterian church, the executive committee of the Presbyterian church, which dissents from the proposed organic union programme, has issued what is called "A Study of the Situation." This committee disclaims any desire to raise any grievances or speak with authority for the church as a whole, but it is so convinced that the time is not ripe for church union that it projects a proposal which it thinks should invite at once serious consideration.

To begin with it is assumed that any union which leaves out of account any considerable number representing any sects or denominations would imperfectly represent Protestantism in Canada. It, therefore, suggests a substitute, a federation, which "while preserving to every church its individuality and history, would remedy any evils that result at home or abroad, from unwise denominational zeal, and concentrate the united Protestant opinion of Canada upon the great social and moral questions of the day."

The argument of the pamphlet is that the union committee has not offered any evidence to show that a new denomination would be more effective than the three negotiating churches federated so as to work harmoniously.

The federation so recommended and approved by the dissenters means the definite agreement of certain denominations so that there will be a perfect understanding between them as to the manner in which church cooperation may be carried on. Finally there is a protest in the usual emphatic language, against "the way in which some sections of our church are trying to force the rest into organic union."

It is the privilege, of course, of any church body in the minority to dissent from the action of the majority, but the question arises, What good purpose is to be accomplished by an appeal to the people and to many who are not directly interested in the subject? Each church, in each presbytery, must vote upon the subject and it is assumed that the vote will not be taken until there has been an impartial review of all the facts. Federation or a good understanding has been already tried in Canada to a limited extent. Has it been an entire or complete success? If not can it be considered a fair substitute for church union?

EDITORIAL NOTES.
A New York woman had two trained dogs for bridesmaids at her wedding. The question naturally arises, "Was the bridegroom a puppy?"

Crippen was the first prisoner in England to give evidence in his own behalf under the new law. It is likely he injured his case.

The Union of South Africa is going to pay Canada the compliment of taking as an example for its mint the act passed by our parliament in 1901.

By a majority of 24,000 votes Switzerland has rejected the proposal to adopt proportional voting in the elections to the national council. A good man had hoped that it would be adopted, so that it might be tried in favorable circumstances.

It is now said that Mayor Gaynor of New York, is responsible for suggesting Mr. Dix for the democratic nomination for governor of New York state. The sponsor is good, adds the Waterbury, N.Y., Times, but the suggestion had to be endorsed by Mr. Murphy before it became effective.

The states of New York, Connecticut,

New Jersey and Indiana form the centre of the line of battle in the elections on November 8th, and if they should be carried by the democrats, it will mean the nearest approach to a political revolution in the United States since the great democratic collapse in 1894.

There has been a coldness between Vice-President Sherman and President Taft since the latter sent that letter denouncing the vice-president as a betrayer of confidence. It has gone so far that when Mr. Sherman was in Washington, this week, he refused to call at the White House. A happy family, indeed!

Ontario conservatives must feel humiliated over the alliance of their party in Quebec with the Bourassaites. The attack on Sir Wilfrid Laurier down there is that he is too loyal to Great Britain, that he was a traitor to his race in taking part in the South African war and in founding a navy. The alliance is not one that we should imagine a follower of Sir John Macdonald could stomach.

The Winnipeg Tribune says a citizen driving within twenty-five miles of Winnipeg, met six youths, belonging to different families, ranging in years from twelve to eighteen, and not only could speak or understand a word of the English language. He finally communicated with them in their native tongue, and ascertained that they had been attending bi-lingual (?) schools. This is only one illustration. Is it a remote one?

Stories Less Than Cent Each.
In the fifty-two issues of a year's volume The Youth's Companion prints fully two hundred and fifty stories. The subscription price of the paper to Canada is but $2.00, so that the stories cost less than a cent apiece, with-out reckoning in all the rest of the contents. Anecdotes, humorous sketches, the doctor's weekly article, papers on popular topics by famous men and women.

Although the two hundred and fifty stories cost so little, they are not cheap stories. In variety of scene, diversity of incident, skill and truth in character-drawing, they cannot be excelled.

The announcement for 1911, beautifully illustrated, giving more detailed particulars of these stories and other new features which greatly enlarge the paper, will be sent to any address in Canada, free with sample copies of current issues.

Every new Canadian subscriber receives free The Companion's Art Calendar for 1911, lithographed in twelve colors and gold, and if the subscription is received at once, all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1910.

The Youth's Companion, 144 Berkeley street, Boston, Mass.

Col. Hughes' Criticism
Canadian Courier.
Col. Sam Hughes was in command of the militia camp at Kingston last summer. He gave both officers and men a regular back-breaking course of training, but so long as they showed intelligence he was not economical of praise.

One major, though, got on the col- lect's nerves and Brigadier Hughes allied him down good and plenty. Finally the indignant commanding officer interceded for him with the brigadier.

"You're pretty hard on him, eh," he said. "Yet he's a decent fellow."

"Decent?" roared Sam. "He may be decent. What I want to know is how he mixed up that wheeling movement to-day?"

"It was pretty bad, I'll acknowledge."

"Bad?" howled Col. Sam. "Bad! That fellow hasn't sense enough to know how to wheel around in a swivel chair!"

Berlin Savant Employs Distinct Modification of Ordinary High Frequency Electricity.

Berlin, Oct. 29.—Dr. F. Nagelschmidt, of Berlin, has just demonstrated before the Electro-Therapeutic section of the Royal Society of Medicine his discovery of a method of performing surgical operations without shedding blood by employing a distinct modification of ordinary high frequency electricity. In Dr. Nagelschmidt's apparatus, which gives a greater current than the high frequency apparatus, but with a lower generator, the electrodes placed on each side of the part to be operated on, and on the application of the current the flow of blood in the region between the electrodes is stopped by the coagulation of the albumen in the blood and the widened or narrowed by using broader or narrower electrodes. Dr. Nagelschmidt believes the method will be particularly useful in dealing with large surface cancers, especially the type called "en cuirasse."

He has successfully operated on three fatal cancers, and has also removed tonsils without loss of blood. There is, however, difficulty and, except in very skilled hands, danger in the operation, because there is some risk of the blood coagulating in the large veins in the area between the electrodes, thereby forming clots. This difficulty is met by the application of vaseline ointment, containing two per cent. of pyrogallic acid, which retards the otherwise too rapid healing, the result of which would not only mean the encouragement of clotting, but the creation of redundant proud flesh and ugly scarring. If this is properly guarded against, the method is declared to be an enormous advance on any existing as obviating shock from loss of blood.

The barber turned on the blarney faucet at once. "Bistall, yo' is a congressman, ain't yo'?" he asked.

The remarkable resemblance of Vice-President Herbert Hoover to the subject of comment, also happens that both gentlemen possess decided opinions, are not averse to airing them and rigidly refuse to yield a point taken in argument. The other day they were standing on the pavement in front of the Lamb's club, loudly discussing some matter of immediate interest. Another member of the Lamb's stepped in. Looked at them and then retreated to the club's interior. He went to a telephone and called up William Mulholland, the real cure man.

"Come get me, Billy," said he. "I've had a rest, I know I've been hitting it lately, but I didn't think I was hot head. What's the matter? Why just now Victor Herbert standing in front of himself quarreling with him?"

"Did you get a picture of it?" he asked the visitor.

"Did we get a picture?" retorted the editor, straightening up and putting himself on the chest. "I should say we did. We got a picture showing every drop of blood."
