SUES PRIEST FIRE IN KILN LATEST NEWS A NEW OFFICE POLICE FIRE IN A VISION

Woman is Seeking Divorce From Him.

'TIS STRANGE CASE IN A DRYING KILN

THE ACTION HAS BEEN TAKEN AT RENO.

Brooklyn Woman to Prove Secret Marriage With Father McGinn—Brings Suit for Desertion in the Far West.

New York, Nov. 3.—Alleging that her husband, Louis T. Hare, is in reality the Rev. Louis T. McGinn, for years widely known as a Roman Catholic priest in Brooklyn, Mrs. Helen F. Hare will sue for divorce in Reno, Nev. The plaintiff, whose father was Mendrick Hare, a wealthy butcher of Brooklyn, will charge desertion and non-support.

Mrs. Hare's story of love and bitterness is stranger than any of the Reno courts have divulged. It begins thirty years back, when she and her husband were pupils in St. Joseph's parochial school. Greenpoint, and ran on through his education for the priesthood at St. John's College, to his appointment as assistant pastor of St. Anthony's, Greenpoint, in 1895, and his assignment to the church of St. Mary, Brooklyn, in 1900. All this time, Mrs. Hare says, their affection for each other continued, and on November 13th, 1902, the priest persuaded her to go with him to the home of the Rev. Dr. Frederick Mortimer, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, by whom they were married.

Because of his vows, the adds, Father McGinn assumed the maiden name of his mother, and she became Mrs. Louis T. Hare. Dr. Mortimer, she says, had no suspicion of the identity of the man whose marriage he was solemnizing.

Mrs. Hare went to live two blocks from St. Edward's church, St. Edward's street, to which Father McGinn had been transferred. One night her younger brother discovered the priest in her company. She took her brother into the secret and begged him to keep the knowledge to himself.

By and by a baby girl was born, and to avoid detection by her other brothers and her aunts, her parents being dead, Mrs. Hare moved to another part of Brooklyn. There she lived until May, 1904, when the relations that existed between her and Father McGinn were disclosed in such a way that they were brought to the attention of Bishop Charles E. McDonnell.

Bishop McDonnell took immediate action, Mrs. Hare says. On May 14th her husband received $100 and was placed aboard a steamer for Europe. He went by direction to a Trappist monastery in Ireland and remained for several years. Then he returned to the United States, being sent, Mrs. Hare says, to a parish in the South. How long he remained there she does not know, but she believes he is now somewhere in the West. In a visit it is said he came back for a visit not many months ago.

Mrs. Hare, who is now forty years old, has been in Reno since last April. She has not seen known as a member of the divorce colony, and even among the friends she made there her story was not known until a week ago. At the time of her marriage she was about to go on the stage, she says. She had taken a course at the American Academy of Dramatic Art and had signed a contract to play an ingenue part. But she had taken part in only a few rehearsals before she became the wife of Father McGinn, her story runs.

The charges in her suit for divorce will be restricted to desertion and failure to provide. Depositions from friends of hers in Brooklyn will be offered in evidence to show, she says, that even before her marriage became known she was compelled to support herself. Her baby died within a year after birth.

Father McGinn was a wide circle of friends in Brooklyn. His power over children was especially marked, and his first great success came when he was placed in charge of the Sunday school at St. Anthony's. He was popular, too, as a preacher. When at St. Mary's he took great delight in driving a speedy horse. When he left St. Edward's unexpectedly, his parishioners were told he was going into retreat in Ireland. Father McGinn was tall, slender, dark-haired and bright-eyed—altogether a striking figure. But on his last appearance in Brooklyn, it is said, he had changed so greatly that many who had known him intimately did not recognize him.

A Disastrous Fire at Gananoque.

THE LOSS WILL BE LARGE—SEEKING HELP.

Kingston Asked for Aid, Which it Readily Granted—Went East on Special Train—Working Hard to Save Surrounding Factories.

Special to the Whig.

Gananoque, Ont., Nov. 3.—A disastrous fire broke out in the drying kiln of the Ontario Wheel company's works about six o'clock this morning. An alarm was at once given and the fire brigade was promptly at hand, but considerable headway having been made among the stacks of dry livery rags and rags, nothing could be done to save that part.

Zevy Clark, the absconding broker, the main part of the works and surrounding factories. At 8:30 a.m. the fire was still raging and just eating its way into the main building. The loss will be heavy, but cannot, as yet, be estimated.

Later—Fire in hand about ten o'clock. Kingston engine and brigade arrived at 9:30 o'clock, and relieved the locals. The offices only are saved; works an entire loss. They were well insured in different companies. One hundred men are thrown out of work.

Kingston Eiremen Summoned.

The Kingston fire department was called upon for aid, Mayor Couper receiving word from Gananoque for assistance, about eight o'clock this morning. He immediately communicated with Ald. Rigney, the chairman of the fire committee, and the latter lost no time in getting the men ready. Chief Armstrong went to the scene, with four men, the Chatham steamer and a foot of hose. The men who accompanied the chief were Engineers Way and Firemen Craig, Smith and Cockade.

As soon as the word was received, Chief Armstrong had his men on the jump, and in record time they had the steamer, and a foot of hose, ready to go, out to the outer station, which contained the hose, and everything was put on board a flat car in good time, and without any mishap whatsoever. The local train was held over a short time, so as a special train could not be necessary, and at 9:15 o'clock the train, with the local fire ladders on board, pulled out, and, twenty-five minutes later, they were at the scene of the blaze.

Chief Armstrong returned home from Toronto yesterday, where he was attending a convention of the fire chiefs of Ontario.

The news that there was a big fire in Gananoque, and that Kingston firemen had been called to give aid, soon spread around the city, and many were the anxious inquiries made.

Gloucester, Mass., fishermen report the mackerel catch this year has been the most dismal failure in the history of the industry.

John McNaughton, Tay Mills, N.S., was found in the woods with the top of his head blown off. It is not known whether it was accident, suicide or murder. The municipal elections throughout England and Wales show a considerable growth in the labor and socialist parties. The women candidates fared badly.

SOCIETY WOMEN CONTINUE TO DO PICKET DUTY

And Are Not Afraid of Likely Battles—A Citizens' Investigating Committee is in Session in an Effort to Get the Trouble Settled.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Reports that many of the 45,000 striking garment workers in Chicago had armed themselves in anticipation of battles with the police, caused re-doubling of caution on the part of the police to-day. The reports, however, failed to frighten the society women and working girls doing picket duty for the strikers. They were at their posts early for the first time, and declared no matter how much fighting took place they would stay where they were. Following an attack on the police reserves at West North avenue and Wood street by a girl, the officers found it necessary to use their revolvers yesterday for the first time. Several of the rioters also fired, but the "gun men" escaped. Seventy-five strikers were arrested. Members of a citizens' investigating committee are in session, to-day, in an effort to effect a settlement of the trouble.

CAUTION REDOUBLED

JUDGE ANDERSON

VISION REVEALED WIDOWHOOD OF MISSOURI JUDGE'S EARLY SWEETHEART AND WEDDING FOLLOWED—A TIME OF REAL JOY.

Judge Anderson dreamed a few months ago that his erstwhile sweetheart was a widow and that if they ever met the old romance would be renewed. He wrote to his old home in Ohio, told a cousin of the dream and asked what had become of her who had been Mary Wiggins. His cousin told him that the sweetheart was a widow and that her name was Davis. Then the judge wrote to her. He received so kindly an answer that he hurried eastward where his early hopes finally were realized.
