NATURE SPARES

The Stricken Rose From Grippe.—What a fortunate provision of nature it is that deprives the rose of mental suffering; for how poignant would be its grief to discover, in the height of its blooming glory, that a canker had at its heart, and that its beauty and fragrance were doomed forever. Nature always spares the suffering; she is a veritable store-house of pleasing rewards, for those who seek her, and in the years gone by failing hair and graysiness have cast a gloom over the lives of thousands of young women, but thanks to the investigations of scientists the true cause of hair destruction is now known to be a germ or parasite that burrows into the hair follicles. Newbro's Herpicide absolutely destroys this germ, thus permitting the hair to grow as nature intended.

Daily Whig.KNOWING TOO MUCH.

Sir Alfred Cripps, who has travelled considerably in Canada, finds a great deal of praise. But he finds something to criticize in the wildest kind of way. The Canadian journal did not publish anything, or did not publish anything that he saw, about the British crops, while all through July and August there were bulletins respecting weather conditions in the Canadian west.

The Whig has a complaint of a different sort, and one that helps to balance the account from a Canadian standpoint. A young man, travelling west on a Grand Trunk train, some time ago, asked suddenly, in the smoker, which club won the baseball championship? He was told, and then one of the company enquired, courteously, where have you been that not until now have you heard the news? "Until this night, I was in England," said he, "and the papers there have no regard for baseball. They tell about cricket, and golf, and other games, but about baseball they say nothing. Only yesterday I struck Canada on my return."

It would be a great paper, in England or Canada, which contained all the news, and so provided for every wondering son of Adam on either side of the great divide. Sir Alfred Cripps did not drop into any stock exchange or he would have got the information he wanted about the British harvest. The men who are concerned about the wheat market, who visit the agriculture of the world, as it is pictured in cablegrams every day, know all about the crop, but the average man does not know and probably does not care.

Every system of municipal government can be abused. There is no exception. When aldermen are elected it is alleged that they are narrow or parochial in their views; then they are figuring all the while upon what they can get or what they can do for a section of the city, namely, that which they represent. When the aldermen are elected by the city as a whole, the political parties are accused, and not without cause, of managing the campaigns and of making the election a party one. When the board of control does most of the business, and the council is a supervisory body, the complaint is that the people's feelings are not duly considered, and a controller of Toronto is one of those who advocates government by commission. When a commission is suggested the bogey is raised. Now look out for the one-man power.

The ideal system has not yet been invented. Any one is good, and any one would give satisfaction, if those who were responsible for its success had no thought of anything but the public interests. Where there is no grafting there is indifference, and in almost every case the city is the sufferer.

A Very Expensive Trial.

Joseph Mervin.

In London, a good many years ago the Robinson house was started as a temperance hotel on Bay street.

Temperance people throughout the province ignored its existence when in the provincial capital and continued to stay at the licensed hotels, with comparatively few exceptions.

For want of patronage it at length degenerated into a fourth-rate lodging house, and, if we are not mistaken, it was finally closed. They do things in a more generous way in the west, and a number of Regina people have just bought the King's Hotel, which is the finest in the Saskatchewan capital.

The main office on the ground floor is a very grand room panelled in teak, with inlays of light-pink ebony, and a fine rug all around, painted by Frank Bawden, R.A., representing the genesis of Canadian life from the wild life of the Indian to the building of the railway, and influence of the white man on the country.

The new quarters are not merely an office building, but a meeting place for Canadians and Americans and their English friends, "a social, commercial, eminently industrial information bureau" to supply the public with accurate and complete information concerning the Dominion of Canada, and especially invited to make use of the facilities that offered.

Reception rooms are also provided for the use of visitors to transact business. On the second floor is another large reception room for visitors and friends to meet in. This room is supplied with Canadian newspapers and journals and a reference library, and Trans-Atlantic passengers visiting London, Eng., are cordially invited to visit the handsome new offices, their exact location being 17-19 Cockspur street, London, S.W. They are very easily found, the building in the middle of the business centre of London, in fact it is at the very hub of the world's metropolis and within five minutes walk of the leading hotels, and near the intake to the tube at Tramline street station.

to cover the cost of transportation, and this, added to the cost of living, reduced the sum at their disposal, for educational purposes, very much.

The British side of the case has been discussed by Mr. Pincombe, a leading official of the London Teachers' Association. He says the teachers in the old land are the sons and daughters of those who cannot provide the £30 which it takes to convey one from England to the Canadian North-West; that free or assisted passages should be afforded, or passages, the expenses of which would be repaid in installments within a reasonable time; that the teacher-migrants should be supplied with appointments by the education department, and that they should not, as now, be left to the tender mercies of the employment agencies; that the imperial education department has done enough when it has equipped the teachers for service; and that Canada should, besides affording schools and salaries, see that in their vacation they can get an outing at a reasonable outlay.

The subject is a live one, but its solution does not depend so much on Canada as on the mother country.

The teachers are like the union men—they look to the government for service, for a chance to make a living, and the chance is not at home because the schools are not there. Canada is a young nation—it is expanding much faster than any one is aware of and it wants those who must follow close after the pioneers, the teachers. They should be helped to the scene of their activity, and the departments of Alberta and Saskatchewan should have some plan of receiving and assigning them to service. At the same time the plan should be one that will apply equally to all, for Canada's teachers are worthy of as much consideration as the teachers of the old land. The boom for the teachers is on at present. How long will it last? How long could it last if the thousands now employed in Britain—four thousand in London alone—were to swarm over into Canada and take possession of its schools?

A PROPOSAL TO ARMHALF OF PARIS TO WIPE OUT CRIMINALS.

Paris is Terrorized by Apache—Under Scheme Proposed, it is Believed Marauders Would be Killed Off.

London, Nov. 11.—A proposal to arm all honest men and disarm the apaches is under serious consideration by the Paris police, who are at their wits' end to suppress that criminal fraternity. M. Honnorat, chief of the first division at the prefecture of police, is occupying himself particularly with this. He points out that the law forbids the carrying of arms, but in practice every apache is armed with a revolver or two and a couple of daggers, while respectable folk rule go unarmed. M. Honnorat proposes that for a year prefects, subprefects, mayors and police magistrates shall be authorized to issue a permit to every man of respectable character to carry arms, and that the police shall have power to search suspected persons for arms. In addition, he would arrange that, except during working hours, no one should be allowed to carry tools or implements that might be used as weapons. In order to simplify the issuing of the permits certain classes would have the right to bear arms by virtue of their office, such as the elected members of any public body, all servants of the state, whether civil or military, and all persons entitled to wear a civil or military decoration. In this way M. Honnorat believes that the apaches would soon be compelled to cease their criminal activities or else would be destroyed by the government a bill will be submitted to parliament to give it form.

WOLVES MENACE ELK.

Government Urged to Employ

Hunters to Run Slayers Down.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 15.—Sherian timber wolves are rapidly wiping out the largest herd of elk in the Northwest and protectors of this fine game are striving to make an effective campaign to reduce the numbers of the destructive animals.

In 1905 the United States government declared a dead season on elk for ten years, which means that no hunters can kill this animal until 1915.

Everybody knows about the elk except everybody excepting what is finding there would be to keep deer in 1915.

But there will be no elk at all on the Olympic Mountains in Washington, which is the greatest elk range in the country. The mountains form a great peninsula in Northwest Washington that cuts into the Pacific Ocean and the Strait of Juan de Fuca. Part of this peninsula is a government forest reserve, wild and picturesquie.

Book after book stresses of the mountains, elk, grass. A few years ago there were 4,000 in these ranges. Now it is estimated that although they have been saved from guns for five years the numbers have decreased to less than 3,000. The Sherman wolf is the cause.

The Sherman wolf preys entirely on elk. Deer are too swift for him and moreover deer stay too close to the foot hills.

Though a full-grown elk has no chance with a wolf, five feet from nose to tail and weighing 400 pounds, the wolf almost invariably goes after the calves.

Sportsmen in the north-west states and Canada are urging their governments to place hunters in the preserve to shoot down the wolves. There is a bounty of fifteen dollars for this wolf, but it is not enough to entice men to venture into the mountains.
