WALKING INTO TROUBLE.
Mr. Monk has got himself into trouble. He taunted Sir Wilfrid Laurier with the statement that some of his party had said that the Canadian navy might be used to attack England. The premier asked him to name one who had been guilty of this indiscretion, and Mr. Monk hesi-tated. Pressed to substantiate his charge, if he dare, he gave the name of one Begin, a notary, and at once a French-Canadian member declared that Mr. Monk lied about the man.
The expression was unparliamentary, and had to be withdrawn. But it is said that Mr. Begin was at once telegraphed to, and replied that he had not been in Drummond and Arthabaska during the campaign, or had not participated in the contest. The end of this incident has not been heard. The conservative party, as reorganized, is alleged to be in splendid fighting trim. It is one thing to be ugly and vicious and unscrupulous, and another thing to be clear and candid and courageous. Nothing is to be gained by misrepresentation, and especially by reviving some of the bitter memories of the late anti-British campaign in a constituency in Quebec.

THE TROUBLE IN MEXICO.
The Mexican revolt may not amount to much. It concerns a republic which is ruled by a masterly man, one Porfirio Diaz, who is elected by the people, but whose rule is as despotic as that of any hereditary monarch.
He has been the head of the government for twenty-five years, and has been instrumental in introducing and carrying through many reforms. They represent his ideas of what the country needs, however, rather than the ideas of the people, who appear to be illiterate to a remarkable extent, nine-tenths of them being unable to read and write. Where ignorance is so apparent it is impossible to conceive of enlightened legislation.

Just what the revolt is about is not well understood. At the bottom of the trouble lies the unrest which has its origin in the social condition of the people. They are not happy and they are not satisfied. A change for the better will only come with universal education, for then the people will be discriminating, and they will exercise a power which they do not possess at present. They have rebelled before, and since Diaz has been the president, but he is an old soldier and he resorts to arms as a means of suppressing the insurrection.
His methods have been depicted as exceedingly severe, but it may be that they are the only methods that will prevail. The masses are not able, through any representative government, to direct their affairs, and if Diaz went down he would be only succeeded by one quite as dictatorial, since his force of character would be the only salvation of his government.
Mexico is in a bad way, but it will not be any better until there is a general elevation of the people. This cannot take place at once.

TREASON IN POLITICS.
The conservative French-Canadians, like the nationalists with whom they are allied, are striving to convince the people, that they have been misrepresented, that they are longing for some opportunity on which to display their loyalty, some occasion when they may be entitled in the Union Jack.
"Canada is our country," says Mr.
Bernier, the Bourassa of Manitoba.
"We have no other. In Canada we were born and in Canada we shall die.
Canada shall be the object of our love, our work and our aspirations. But Canada also belongs to the British crown. Our flag is the British flag.
We are British citizens, and if we wish to be worthy of the protection of the Union Jack we must be ready to defend it at the cost of our life and our blood. If the security of England, of the British empire, in the face of the armaments and the preparations of other nations, claims the participation of the colonies spread over the entire world in the work of defense, we have only one thing to do, that is to give to England the help she needs, and this to show to the world that she shall not stand alone." Mr. Lavergne is giving expression to the same twaddle, because the evidence is accumulating that while he is yearning for some chance to show how he can bleed and die for the sake of Britain, during the last bye-election in Quebec he declared, in the presence of Mr. Percival, the liberal candidate, that Canada owed nothing to England, that the Laurier government had sold out to the imperial government, and that any liberties granted to French-Canadians had been forced from Britain in the rebellion of 1837.

The climax was reached at one place, a church, where a member of the Le Devoir staff, stated, in the presence of Mr. Lavergne, that British troops had left their bullet marks on the sacred edifice, and that their horses had been driven into it and made to drink out of the holy chalice.

And in Toronto Mr. Lavergne uses language to conceal his thoughts and poses as one who is willing to suffer in any way so that he may display his love for the throne and crown of Britain. A conservative paper notes incidentally that the students cheered Mr. Lavergne when he referred to Sir John Macdonald and one recalls that in his last campaign the deceased statesman uttered this as his slogan:
"A British subject I will die." One cannot imagine Sir John Macdonald applauding the Bourassa-Lavergne campaign and sending congratulatory messages to the men who had made treason as their stock-in-trade in their appeal to the people.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
The French are terribly afraid of conscription. It is not provided in the Militia Act, nor in the Naval Bill, and until parliament authorizes the same it cannot take place.
Fancy Monk rising in his place in parliament, and challenging another member to go out into the lobby and fight. And the conservative papers, which apologize for him, say he is a perfect gentleman!

So some American settlers in the fewer provinces of Canada object to their children singing "Rule Britannia" in the public schools? Let them object. Is Canada not British to the core? Are its teachers to falter in cultivating the patriotic instinct?

An official announcement has been made of the reorganization of the federal opposition, and Mr. Foster's name disappears. Neither he nor Mr.
Monk are entitled to recognition. Perhaps now they will see the wisdom of going away back and sitting down.

The next appeal to the people of England will probably produce the desired effect. What any country needs is a strong government. Then it can do things. A good opposition is all right, but it should not be able to block the way to all useful legislation.

How is it that Kingston cannot have an enforcement of its by-laws? A citizen put it fairly, yesterday, when he said that it should not be necessary to force the city officials to do their duty. They should walk out occasionally and see what is apparent to others every day.

The opposition of England and the opposition of Canada are alike in one respect. They are weak in leadership.
Mr. Borden's attempts to profit by the new nationalism, without committing himself to it, are attracting attention. They are not contributing to his political power.

The suffragettes will eventually for-fit the respect as well as consideration of the people. They are acting the rowdy part at present, and are getting the treatment of rowdies.
Those who smash windows and assault people because they cannot buldoze parliament deserve the roughest kind of treatment.

The Spectator compares the management of the printing bureau by a government department with the management of the Temiskaming railway by commission. There would be something in the comparison if all the public business were run by commissions, and the Whitney government is by no means perfect in its plans. If it were there would be no quarrelling in Kingston over the patronage.

WILL BE INVESTIGATED.
Case of Youth Arrested on Charge of Drunkenness.
A boy in long trousers, appeared in the police court, this morning. Drunk-ness was the charge, and as he appeared to be so young, the magistrate questioned him about his age.
He first said that he was nineteen years of age, but afterwards stated that he was eighteen or nineteen years of age. The magistrate asked him to be very careful to tell the truth, as it was most important, and the accused then said that he had always been given to understand that he was eighteen or nineteen years of age.
The magistrate said it would be an easy matter to secure his correct age.
The magistrate then questioned him as to where the liquor had been secured, and he gave the name of a well-known hotel in the city. A young man gathered in for drunkenness, he said, was with him at the time.
The magistrate adjourned the case for a day and gave orders to have the hotelman summoned, on a charge of selling liquor to a minor.

THE TALK ON NAVY BRODEUR SAYS LIBERALS WILL STAY BY POLICY.

The Drummond Election is a Lively Theme of Debate—Blondin Says He Was Loyal in the Campaign.
Special to the Whig.
Ottawa, Nov. 24.—Hon. Mr. Brodeur, minister of marine and fisheries, was in the limelight in the house, yesterday, for a considerable time taking his innings at discussing the speech from the throne. Perhaps, naturally, he devoted most of his time to the portions of it relative to the navy. But a large proportion of his remarks were replies to queries concerning the Drummond-Arthabaska election. He strongly contended that it was to the interests of French-Canadians, in Quebec, to maintain the supremacy of the British navy, and the programme laid down by the Lan-rier government was one to that end. He reviewed many details relative to the recent bye-election and claimed prejudices had been appealed to that should not have been appealed to. "We are not scared by those appeals," said the minister, "and we will stand by our policy." Mr. Blondin, M.P. for Champlain, and who has been one of the most prominent conservatives figuring in the Drummond fight, also had much to say relative to it. "I claim," said he, "that in the whole Drummond and Arthabaska campaign we remained true to our king, our country, and to the liberal-conservative party." Mr. Blondin emphatically declared that he had made a disloyal statement, and quoted, at length, from several newspaper articles. He acknowledged, though, that when a speaker had said "all they (French-Canadians) had they owed to Great Britain" that he had answered as Sir Charles Tupper, as Sir Richard Cartwright and as others in the past year had done, that that was not true.
He accused liberals for trying to exploit the race cry in Quebec and claimed French-Canadians were not disloyal. He recalled that people of that province had for eighteen years supported the government of the late Macdonald and had been shown that they could give their support to an English-speaking candidate as well as a French-Canadian one.
As the debate continues it seems surprising the amount of space devoted on both sides to the question of Drummond election. It has so far taken up more time than any other subject.

Many Questions.
Among a number of questions that members want asked in the house are the following:
Mr. Blair—What amount of money has been lost to Canada, caused by the irregularities in the printing bureau?
Mr. Sproule—Has the government reached a conclusion as to the assistance they propose to give the international exposition it is contemplated by the people of Winnipeg and the west to hold in Winnipeg in 1917?
If so, would they make an announcement to that effect so as to serve as a notice to all interested parties or countries that the exposition is to take place, and the date thereof?
Mr. Sproule (Ontario)—What was the number of depositors in the government savings departments, on November 1st, 1910? What was the total amount on deposit on November 1st, 1910? How many persons have purchased the twenty-five year government bonds at three and one-half per cent?
Mr. Monk—For a statement showing: The names of all those engaged to date by the government in connection with the new naval department, whether for service at sea or for work connected with the department, either inside or outside service. The domicile or origin of those thus engaged, their previous occupation, rank or grade in the British navy or elsewhere, and previous rate of pay or remuneration. The duties assigned, rank or occupation of those thus engaged in the service of Canada, and present salary and allowances?
Mr. Smith—For a return showing the total number of accidents on railways in Canada since April 1st, 1909, and up to date; the number of fatal accidents, the number on each railway, and the causes of the same. Also, the number of accidents on construction work, fatal or otherwise, on the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific railways, and the causes of the same.
Mr. Monk—For a copy of the report of the imperial defence committee of the privy council in England concerning the defence of the empire, communicated to the Canadian government, and of the despatches and correspondence exchanged between the imperial and the Canadian governments relating to the said report.
