

BOYHOOD AND ALCOHOL

There are some things too awful to contemplate—one is the giving of alcohol in the guise of medicine to boys.

Scott's Emulsion

is the only preparation of Cod Liver Oil that contains absolutely no alcohol, drug or harmful ingredient of any sort.

THE Underwood Type-writer is now so generally used that it is a difficult matter to get operators for other type-writers. If you have an Underwood you avoid the difficulty.

THE GERMAN NAVAL SCARE.
The New York Herald claims, and with some reason, that it has given definite information with regard to the German naval policy, and that there is nothing in it which can alarm England or any other country. John Leyland, an Englishman, was commissioned to go to Germany, and study and write upon the naval programme. He seems to have gone openly upon his mission, to have presented his credentials to the representatives of the government, and to have been given the entry to every office or naval yard which he desired to visit.

The result is a series of articles in which he shows that Germany is pursuing a policy which concerns itself, and that it in no way suggests trouble with any nation. There is no hurry about the building of warships. The work goes on apace, for home and national purposes, and when 1912 has been reached the present work will cease, and proceedings thereafter will be of a different character. The story is quieting, but it is in strong contrast with that of the socialist Blatchford, whose writings to the Daily Mail, during the last British election, were so disturbing. He was alleged to have founded his articles on what he saw in Germany, but not under direction of the German government as in the Leyland case.

Letter than any assurance of the newspaper, better than any independent policy, of any nation, would be an agreement between the great powers to curtail their naval schemes, and get out of the competition for naval supremacy. The proposal to spend $400,000,000 in Britain is a huge naval outfit—the greatest in the world—is not very comforting.

THE CRISIS HAS PASSED.

The Mexican revolt or revolution is over. At least the forces of the government have been instrumental in making the Madero government futile and of no effect. Francisco J. Madero is one of the wealthiest men in Mexico, one of a family who have vast possessions in lands, and money enough to have bank connections in New York and Paris. He was either overly ambitious, or he had grievances against the government, and so became a candidate in the last election against President Diaz.

In a speech at San Luis Petosil he denounced Diaz in unmeasured terms. An enlightened or tolerant person would have let the matter rest with the people on the ground that they would have been able to pass upon the issue and choose between the men. It does not speak well for Diaz that he had Madero arrested and cast into prison, and from there he could not conduct his campaign. Practically the election was seized by the president, since it is alleged that he commanded the votes of the people, so largely illiterate, and used his military contingents to man or manage some of the polling districts.

Madero was released on bail later, and escaped to Texas, where he began the insurgent movement which has failed so signally. He attempted one scheme which, had it succeeded, might have resulted disastrously. He appealed for support, outside of Mexico, as the defender of vested interests. About two billions of foreign capital has been invested in Mexico, and the plan was to bring foreign pressure to bear against the Diaz government. This programme failed, and it is well.

The Diaz dynasty lives. It will go on for another term. It is the ideal which perhaps Roosevelt envied. Mexico is a republic the electors of which elect a president periodically. The terms were originally two years each. Then they were lengthened at Diaz's suggestion. Now they are eight years. In effect the man is the monarch as long as he lives or likes.

BORDEN WILL NOT LEAD.

The conservative opposition in the federal parliament has undertaken a justification of the anti-British campaign, which they supported in Drummond and Arthabaska. They do not deny that they joined forces with the Bourassa-Lavergne faction, but they say that they were not to blame any more than the liberals, who, in previous elections, labored for a solid Quebec. This province, many years ago, was best in politics, and Sir John Macdonald, the mastermind, never failed in his management of the political forces through Cartier, Langevin, Caron and Chapleau. The liberals had their leaders, and the last and most notable bilota Laurier was A. A. Dorion, who later became a judge of the superior court.

The French are a peculiar people, somewhat emotional and demonstrative, but they like brilliancy in leadership, and once Sir Wilfrid caught their admiration and affection he held them, and holds them still. It was because the French-Canadians voted as they felt, in evidence of their confidence in the liberal premier, in successive elections, that the Borden party talked of abandoning Quebec to its fate. The succession of Mr. Monk made the situation more awkward, and it was at the early stages of his apostasy that the party proposed to rid itself of him and Mr. Foster.

There is now a disposition to endorse the rebellion of the Quebecers on the naval question, because that seems to be one way of weakening Laurier's hold on Quebec. Hence the apologies that have been offered for the indications of conservative members who participated in the bye-election, or who telegraphed to the nationalist leaders an approval of their work. It is to be hoped that they will go on with their performances, and deeper and deeper commit themselves to the follies that will sooner or later merit another defeat. The defect of the opposition is that the leader will not lead.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Another experience like that of Saturday with mud streets and the pavement question will take a different turn.

Kingston has some attractive spots, said a visitor. Indeed it can be called beautiful in all respects save its streets. They are simply terrible.

The St. Thomas Times does not see any necessity for endorsing the nationalists. But they cannot help it, seemingly. Some one has blundered, and Mr. Borden dare not call him to task.

In Brantford the farmers and gardeners preempt their space in the market by depositing some of their goods upon it on Friday night. It is a remarkable practice, and one that does not seem to be followed anywhere else.

Britain cannot afford to occupy the position that is charged against it, namely, that it is responsible for the failure to suppress the opium trade. The mother country usually reads in all needful reforms. It should lead in this.

Mr. Monk disdains the overtures of the federal opposition. If its members want to get under his umbrella they will have to accept such protection as he may choose to give. In other words his motions will have to stand without any of Borden's amendments.

Some days ago the Montreal Gazette warned the opposition that all depended on what its members did to injure the government or give it strength for the next election. Is this counsel being acted upon? Read the addresses of some of the knowing ones in parliament.

Who Gets the Profit?

Industrial Canada.
Last year we shipped to the United States pulpwood to the value of $6,074,628. It was delivered to the mills of United States paper manufacturers and turned into paper, some of which later found its way back to this country at many times its original value. Canada was denied of about a million cords of timber, in return for which we got the prices of the timber and the wages of the lumbermen, with the local portion of the transportation charges. The big profit, as it was represented in national wealth, the cost of the skilled labor, in turning rough timber into finished paper, went to the United States. In the United States the big mills were established, there the thousands of workmen resided, there the wages were earned and spent. Of what value was that timber to us? Did the farmers of Canada get any benefit from the thousands of workmen who were engaged in the United States in turning it into paper? Did the trade which such a number of men develop help us to build our railways and support our schools? Wherein did we profit except for the mental wages of buyers of wood for our enterprising neighbors?

Castling Off the Yoke.

Brantford Examiner.
The Grand Trunk was worked by the party party for all it was worth: for thirty years, a liberal being hardly able to find a position on the line. Then the C.P.R. came along, and it was worked on the same lines until the company decided, a few years ago, to throw off the yoke. The truth is that there has been less politics in railway matters in recent years than ever before in the history of the country.

YOUNG and OLD Are Attacked.

Everyone is liable to be attacked with kidney trouble, young and old are seized. Pains in the back and aching limbs are sure signs of kidney trouble. Girls that ought to be bright and lissome are languid and nervous. Women worry and suffer torments. Strong men do not escape the ravages of kidney trouble and disease.

"Superiority" of Women.

Pall Mall Gazette.
Men have never believed in the superiority of women, that she is in any way a stouter or greater being, for they have never initiated her in anything. Men admire generously, but they only honor success, and a successful woman—whatever that is—not less than a successful man. If historians had only told us when talking off the hat to a woman was invented, the whole puzzle would be solved. Perhaps it began in the Crusades, to show the wearer was not a Saracen or an Oriental. Erasmus, we knew, used to salute the ladies of his country by kissing them; perhaps the celebrant took off his hat to prevent it falling off—just as, probably, the origin of taking one's glove off to shake hands was to prevent the other party to the dialogue involuntarily pulling it off, or otherwise damaging it. We may be sure the movement was utilitarian and not romantic. To-day it is a mere survival, like the old-fashioned signatures to a letter.

A TOLERANT DEED

KILKENNY CONFERS AN HONOR ON A WOMAN.

Unique Distinction for Jewess, Whose Husband, a Landlord, Had Never Been Boycotted.

Dublin, Nov. 22.—The honorary freedom of the City of Kilkenny was conferred, a few days ago, on Ellen, Countess of Desart, the widow of the fourth Earl of Desart. This is the first time that the freedom of an Irish city has been conferred on a woman, and it is the first time that any city in the world has conferred such an honor on a Jewess.
Lady Desart is the daughter of the late Henry L. Bischoffheim, a famous London philanthropist, and her good works on the Irish estate of her husband have made her the idol of everyone around Kilkenny. The late Lord Desart was just as popular as his wife, and he used to boast in the darkest days of the Irish land war that he had never been boycotted and that he always received an Irish welcome when he visited his home at Desart Court. Lady Desart, in thanking the corporation for the honor conferred on her, declared that it was doubly welcome to her because it offered the best evidence in the world that Ireland, as she had always contended, was a country in which the broadest religious toleration prevailed.

DEATH AT GANANOQUE.

The Late William C. Wheeler, an Aged Resident.

Gananoque, Nov. 23.—Another of Gananoque's aged and esteemed residents passed to rest at his home, on Tanner street, late Friday evening, in the person of William C. Wheeler, a victim of pneumonia, in the seventy-fourth year of his age. Deceased spent the major portion of his life in this vicinity. For a number of years he held the position of postmaster, in which capacity he gave entire satisfaction. He leaves a widow, three sons, William, James and Herbert, all residents of the town, and three daughters, Mrs. W. H. Carson, Kingston; Mrs. J. Mallo, Deseronto, and Mrs. William Whittingham, of this town. The funeral took place, Sunday afternoon, to Willow Bank cemetery, and was largely attended.

The congregation of St. Andrew's church was favored with a service of song, last evening. Solos were rendered by Miss Bamford and William Cotton, also an instrumental duet, cornet and clarinet, by Messrs. W. Rees and E. Parker.

During the past week Gananoque public library has added 100 new volumes.

At the public meeting, on Friday evening, it was decided to hold a poultry fair here December 14th, when prizes will be offered, along the various lines of dressed poultry.
Mrs. C. F. Verity and Mrs. (Dr.) Frank Hanna, Brantford, spent the weekend here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Emery, having been summoned here to attend the funeral of their brother, Dr. George F. Emery. Miss Nellie Hayes, a young lady from the motherland, located here for several years past, was united in marriage to A. M. Wheeler, on Wednesday evening last, Rev. J. T. Pichey performing the ceremony.

H. Ford, Berry, Queen's, spent the weekend here with his parents, Dr. E. A. Ferguson, Meliackow, Alta., was the guest of his aunt, Mrs. J. De Witta, during the past week. Mr. and Mrs. Byron Boyce, Halstead Bay, spending last six weeks in Winnetou, have returned. E. H. Hurd spent the weekend in Kingston, guest of his son, E. H. Hurd. Miss Gertrude Byron, spending the past few months in Dundas, with her sister, Mrs. A. A. Alford, has returned home. Miss Gertrude is the guest of Mrs. John Fairlie, in Montreal. Miss Grace Kennedy, Perth, guest of her sister, Mrs. J. A. Jackson, for several weeks past, has returned home.

They Obeyed the Orders.

One of the professors in a university not a thousand miles from Philadelphia has a lazy but faithful Newfoundland dog that has made a practice of following his master, to the classroom. Daily, Bruno ambles into the room, stretches his big length under the professor's chair and goes to sleep.

One day a week or two after the opening of the fall term a freshman took his bulldog with him to the classroom. What followed was sad. It was also disturbing. The next day the professor caused his Newfoundland dog to be detained at home, and also posted upon the walls of the classroom the following notice:

"Hereafter no dogs allowed in this room."

At the lecture each student appeared solemnly leading a Maltese cat by a violet ribbon—Philadelphia Times.

How to Tell if Your Hair is Deceased.

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. Ninety-eight per cent. of the people need a hair tonic.
Pull a hair out of your head; if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want every one whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and cure baldness.
It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c. and $1. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store, G. W. Mahood.
