NO EVIDENCE OF APOSTASY.
One reads a very weak and faulty story in the Toronto Telegram—a story treated with grave and stately language in the editorial column—and to the effect that because the university students invited Armand Lavergne to address them, and applauded his address, the queen city will not get new armories. The story is really too silly for even a "passing consideration," but it is given the place of honour in the Telegram, and it is meant to be soberly taken.

Political animus carries some people to extraordinary lengths, and the critic of Sir Frederick Borden, so unfriendly, will believe anything of him and assume that any statement that is printed of him, and reflecting upon his ministerial sense, is true. The minister of militia may have his faults, but he is not lacking in sound sense, and no one who is inclined to be fair or reasonable could believe that he made any threats, such as the Telegram imputes to him. The students would be very apt to like Mr. Lavergne's performance, because somewhat spectacular, without in any way committing themselves to his political heresies.

As for Toronto. It is tory overwhelmingly and if given consideration only as a sort of quid pro quo would not be entitled to much attention from the liberal government. Still Toronto gets many favours from the government, without much seeking or pleading, and, as a matter of justice, because of its size and growth, not as a bribe. The pity is, then, that an honest acknowledgment of this fact cannot be made, and without giving any evidence of political apostasy.

SAD CASE OF NEGLECT.
Does public life pay? Many are the instances in which public men have impoverished themselves and without inviting any sympathy from the people. The saddest case of late is that of John G. Carlisle, who was the secretary of the treasury in the Cleveland government of the United States.

He died in New York, and it is recorded of him: "The casket containing Mr. Carlisle's remains arrived in Cincinnati from New York Saturday morning on the way to Covington, just cross the river, and was hauled about town in an express wagon with an ordinary load of miscellaneous packages before being deposited at an undertaker's establishment. No committee or individual was on hand to take formal charge of the remains. The body of Mr. Carlisle's wife, who died in New York city several years ago, which has been since then in a receiving vault, arrived later in the day, and both bodies will be buried to-day or Tuesday."

A story like this is enough to banish from the mind of every young man the thought of serving the people in any capacity. It may be said, of course, that Mr. Carlisle had the opportunity of making money and that it is remarkable he should die in poverty. The fact is forgotten that if the public man is not a grafter he will find his salary small enough to meet his needs, and the drafts upon his resources, for political purposes, are constant. If he shows any disposition to profit by his position, and particularly by making use of knowledge that comes to him confidentially, he is regarded as a political crook.

Whatever the cause in Mr. Carlisle's case the fact is that he died without money, and that his remains were treated with the utmost indignity. The statement affecting his funeral is a serious reflection upon the government and people of the United States, and some steps should be taken to atone for the failure to respect the memory and service of Mr. Carlisle.

A CHANGE OF FRONT.
The later reports from the old land, which is now in the throes of an election, indicate that the situation is somewhat mixed, and that some changes in the representation will probably take place. The unionists are fighting against disadvantages, and it is not conceded as possible that they can win. They hold now 273 seats. They would have to gain 63 seats in order to have a majority of one, and they would need at least twenty more in order to be able to do business.

Where are these votes to come from? The editor of the Telegram went through the last British election and is in a position to offer an opinion. The conservatives will not draw power from Scotland, Wales or Ireland, and the editor adds: "A miracle will be needed to give the unionists a working majority in the next parliament. The present is not the age, nor is Britain the land, of miracles." A notable feature of the campaign is the abandonment by Balfour of tariff reform.

Austria Chamberlain launched the scheme in Edinburgh, in an elaborate speech, but he is not the Joseph Chamberlain, with the arts of the public speaker, and he failed to make an impression. The party was hopelessly divided on the question, and the leader shelves it with the assurance that if his party wins he will make tariff reform the subject of a referendum. The unionists will gain something by the concentration of their energy upon the lords' issue and home rule. The Lansdowne scheme may not be practicable, but it is plausible, and is likely to win some support from those who think the upper house needs reform and do not see that it will come through the abolition of the lords. This has been understood as equivalent to the abolition of the lords, since without the veto power the chamber would be as useless as it would be powerless.

The one remarkable thing about the election is the disappearance of the German scare. War with England—the possibility of an invasion from Germany—was the bogey in the last election, and it had its influence in the result. The situation has not changed very much in nine months, and the fact that the scare has ceased to merit comment shows how vicious was the agitation in which some alleged patriots indulged for political effect.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
The opposition in Ottawa is said to be very much strengthened. And the evidence of it is the return to the house of Mr. Foster and his attempts to bulldoze the speaker.

J. F. Watson, the English journalist who is keeping the Globe posted on the trend of events in England, alleges that the liberal gain in the election will be between twenty and thirty seats.

Not fifty per cent. of the people of Toronto are churchgoers. This, in addition to the record of bibliolists—20,000 on the rampage each night and 2,000 of them going home drunk—is "the worst ever."

That bold, bad man whom the Tories wanted to get rid of, Mr. Foster, is leading his majesty's opposition in the commons. When he kicks Mr. Borden surrenders. It's a nice position for a leader to occupy.

The gamblers of New York complain that the police blackmail them, and when they resent it they are pulled and punished. They are in bad business when they are up against the law all around.

The members of the house are learning to behave themselves. The man who called another a "liar," and the one who called his opponents "scoundrels" have had to withdraw the words and apologize. The lesson will not be forgotten.

Abraham Rueb, San Francisco's star grafter, has had his sentence of four years in the penitentiary confirmed by the court of appeal. The mills of gods grind very slowly in the United States, but they grind exceedingly sure.

Mr. Foster is very jealous of Mr. Monk's honour. It was he who insisted that an opprobrious term used toward the nationalists, should be withdrawn. Mr. Borden only acted when he could not help himself. Poor Foster. He knows what it is to be the under dog in a fight.

The Mail is urging the farmers to demand a lower tariff on the goods that they buy. Which is curious. The Mail used to represent the high tariff party, and it deceived the farmers by trying to make them believe the N. P. was the panacea for every ill. It has taken the Mail over thirty years to get wise.

The Tories of Canada and the Tories of England are great on the referendum. The one party, if elected to power two or three years hence, will submit the naval question to a vote of the people. The other party, if elected to office, will refer tariff reform to the electors. Both are dodging their responsibility.

It is declared on behalf of the prohibitionists that twenty thousand men go into bar rooms in Toronto every night and that two thousand of them come out intoxicated. And Toronto is called the Queen City, because of its morals and its reputation for high respectability. The words of the Golden Text for next Sunday school's lesson seem to fit every fourth man. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take hold lest he fall."

FINED $10 FOR A POSTER.
Lithograph Depicted a Woman Stabbing a Man.

New York, Dec. 1.—The manager of a local theatre was fined $10 in police court for violation of an ancient ordinance, which prohibits the display of posters depicting any act which could be classed as criminal. The fine was paid under protest, and the manager's counsel gave notice that he would appeal. The poster in question depicted a woman in the act of stabbing a man.

YARKER VILLAGE.

Surveyors at Work for C.N.R. Bridge.
Yarker, Nov. 30.—Companies of boy scouts could be formed in this village. Edward Joyner has moved to Yarker and has entered the employment of the Benjamin Manufacturing company. The chief speaker, Rev. Mr. Fairwell, did not arrive to address the institute held here last week, which put somewhat of a damper on the meeting.

Rev. Mr. Sexsmith, of Newburgh, spoke on the modern Sunday school in place of Mr. Fairwell.
The pulpit in the Methodist church was draped in black in memory of the late Mrs. C. L. Jones. Mr. and Mrs. Jones, while residents here, were earnest workers in all church work, he as leader of a well-trained choir, and Mrs. Jones as organist. Her remains will be buried in Yarker cemetery.

Manson Lee has his new windmill power for pumping purposes erected.
Miss Cecilia Lee is home from Watertown, N.Y. Andrew Warner is clerk in P. Thornton's general store.

The surveyors for the bridge work of the C.N.R., were here taking measurements for crossing the river. The Holiness Movement adherents have their new camp ground nicely cleaned up and very nearly ready for camping purposes next summer.

DIED IN ALBERTA.

Remains of Erastus Cook Brought to Gananogue.
Gananogue, Dec. 1.—On November 21th, Erastus Cook, a former manufacturer of this town, who, for many years, conducted the Gananogue Woolen Mills, died at Fincher Creek, Alta., where he had been located for several years past. The remains were forwarded here and funeral took place, yesterday afternoon, at two o'clock, at Christ church, where the rector, Rev. J. R. Serson, conducted a funeral service, after which the remains were interred at Willow Bank.

A number from Gananogue and the surrounding rural district attended the daymen's meeting at Mallorytown, yesterday.

The young son of John Lee, First street, is dangerously ill with pneumonia. The young son of Orlando Latimer, River street, is seriously ill, and slight hopes are extended for his recovery.

Among the visiting brethren at the Masonic lodge of instruction on Tuesday evening, were T. D. Mines, J. Smeaton and W. S. R. Murch, of Kingston. About fifty members of the Alexandria Bay lodge came up on the steamer Riverside.

MUCH THIEVERY AT HOUSE.

Everything Movable, Prey to Light-Fingered Gentry.
Ottawa, Dec. 1.—The wholesale thievery of brushes, combs, towels, umbrellas, hats, rubbers, walking canes, pocket knives, soap, and other articles from the parliament buildings has assumed such proportions that stringent steps are to be taken to put an end to it. Ninety-six towels were among the articles stolen last session, the press-room being the most frequent prey, while dishes have disappeared from the government cupboards with consistent regularity.

A device was adopted some time ago to save the towels from the pilferers. They were padlocked on the rollers. This, however, has not stopped the robbers. The towels have been slit across and removed.

Street car tickets and odd change have been taken from coat pockets, the drawers of desks have been ransacked, and pens, pencils, tobacco, pipes and cigars abstracted.

TWO LITTLE PAIRS OF BOOTS.

By Mrs. Susan Teall Perry.
Two little pairs of boots, to-night, Before the fire are drying;
Two little pairs of lined feet In a trundle bed are lying;
The tracks they left upon the floor Make me feel like sighing.

Those little boots with copper toes! They run the livelong day;
And oftentimes I almost wish They were miles away;
So tired am I to hear so oft Their heavy tramp at play.

To-day I was disposed to scold, But when I look to-night
At those little boots before the fire, With copper toes so bright,
I think how sad my heart would be To put them out of sight.

I mourn because I thought how nice My neighbor's "frows the way."
Could keep her carpets all the year From getting worn or gray;
Yet well I know she'd smile to own Some little boots to-day.

Poor Girl Inherits $40,000.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 1.—To fall heir to $40,000 left by a rich uncle who died recently at Sydney, Australia, is the fortune that has come to Miss Elsie Mayjak, a pretty stenographer, twenty years of age. A letter from her foster mother, Mrs. Maggie Mayjak, of Houston, Texas, told her of the death of her uncle and of the estate which she has inherited. The uncle was a retired banker of Sydney.
