MEDICAL BANQUET

HELD IN GRANT HALL ON MONDAY EVENING.

Dean Connell Said That a Brooklyn Hospital Wanted Three Queen's Graduates Every Year—Bright Speeches Made During the Evening.

A contagion of splendid conviviality from which no one appeared to be immune, prevailed at Grant hall, Monday evening, when 250 medical students, doctors and others, sat down to the annual banquet of the Aesculapian Society of Queen's University. The college assembly hall was seen at its best; the decorations were few, but those employed were decidedly becoming. The sumptuously spread tables, which were artistically arranged, were loaded with the embryo physicians and their honored guests. Throughout the evening the banquet hall echoed with rousing song and splendid college slogan.

The offices of toastmaster were ably performed by J. G. McCammon, B.A., president of the Aesculapian Society. The toast to "The Ladies" was proposed by W. E. Wilkins and responded to by M. R. Bow.

Lieut.-Col. Crowe, who was to have offered the toast to "Queen's and the Medical Faculty," was unable to be present; his place, however, was very happily taken by W. F. Nickle, M.P.P., who, in his characteristic, clear style, pointed out that to-day is the day of the specialist, more in public life than in any other sphere, and it is only the university man who is able to respond to the call of his country. "He must be a man possessed of high ideals," said the speaker, "if he is to cope with conditions resultant of our wide extension of franchise." Principal Gordon, in replying to this proposal, paid a splendid tribute to the medical profession, and the medical faculty, and its dean, Dean Connell, whose name was coupled with Principal Gordon's, offered interesting information with regard to the full vigor of health that is at present being enjoyed by the Queen's medical school. There are at present 231 students attending classes, with fifty in the final and seventy in the freshmen year. Dr. Connell dealt with the allegations made against medicine as being a desirable profession. "The profession is not overcrowded in Canada," said the speaker. "Of our last year's graduating class, after three months, not one remained unplaced. This morning I had a letter from a hospital, asking if I would agree to supply him with three house surgeons annually, and that if I would do so, he would dispense with the usual examinations and accept the men on the recommendation of our faculty." The dean told of the different departments of medicine in which every physician should engage himself. These indulgences are worthy if you see that you make yourself worthy of them.

Prof. W. L. Grant, in proposing the health to the medical profession, described it as the most noble of all fellowships. Dr. McPhail, in responding, pointed out that there was advantage in the fact that Queen's was a small medical school, with comparatively small equipment, "because," said the speaker, "the physician is usually first located in rural districts, and is thus thrown on his own resources, and it is under such circumstances that his training at Queen's will serve him well."

Dr. Anglin proposed the toast to "The Canadian Medical Association." Dr. Armstrong, of Montreal, replied, "I envy the position of you young men," he said, "because in the next five and twenty years medicine in Canada and throughout the universe will experience a progression that the world has not yet dreamed of. Cultivate clear observation and you individually will contribute much to this great advance. To-day there is no reason for the existence of that water-worn disease known as typhoid. We have discovered the cause, and the means for extermination, and now if it exists, water commissioners are to blame." Dr. Armstrong offered the students a wealth of splendid advice, advocating a pursuit or recreation outside of the daily task. Good literature was suggested as one of the most pleasant and profitable indulgences. "Then, too, in your laboratory," said the speaker, "have something more than the spirit lamp and a bottle of nitric acid." Dr. Armstrong told of the great benefits which would ensue with the establishment of the Canadian Medical Association and the Canadian Journal of Medicine, as is anticipated and he hoped that every man of Queen's Medical College, both graduate and undergraduate would contribute his share for the success of these two worthy institutions.

"Sister Universities" was proposed by R. A. Simpson and responded to by visiting delegates. "Undergraduates" was given by Dr. Third and G. W. Pringle, B.A., responded.

The faculty song, from the able pen of G. W. Burton, was sung by nine students from the final year, Messrs. Gravelle, Randall, Belanate, Mohan, MacDougall, Young, Carmichael, Chown, and Paul. Mr. Peppit presided at the piano.

During the dinner hour the R.C.H.A. orchestra provided delightful music. Arthur Craig sang in his usually good voice, and was obliged to respond to a rousing encore.

The committee having the dinner in charge is indeed deserving of much praise for the manner in which everything was conducted.

The committee consisted of P. H. Huyek (general convener) S. G. Chown, A. G. McGlennan, A. Lipman, F. W. Gravelle and G. A. Publow.

HISCOCK WILL PLAY.

"Eddie" Has Consented to Line up With Frontenacs.

At a meeting of the executive, last night, "Eddie" Hiscock made the welcome announcement that he would go into the nets for the senior Frontenacs, and help them win the championship. This will mean a great deal to strengthen the line-up, and the news will be received with great delight among the hockey fans. This will give the Frontenacs a line-up something like this: Goal, Hiscock; Dumphy or Vayhorn, centre; with Watson, Crawford, Gratton, Hyland on the forward line, and others still to be heard from. Another player was out, who promises to make good, and when all the arrangements have been made it is believed the scholars will have a strong team.

The juniors will turn out at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium, to-night, at 7:15, and the senior and junior teams will practice on Wednesday night. The juniors will play their first game in Belleville, on January 2nd. This will be a good opportunity for the people of Kingston to celebrate the New Year, by accompanying the team, and help cheer them on to victory. The rosters' club is getting ready to do the "grand" on that occasion.

Arrangements are on foot to have the juniors play their first game on December 27th, with "Chaucer" Elliott's M.A.A. Quebec champions.
