A PRINCE'S HOUSEHOLD.

James I.'s Son Had an Establishment With 400 Servants.

Now, when the titles, styles, and appanage of the young Prince of Wales are coming into such prominence, it is interesting to notice how, in the seventeenth century, another Prince of Wales set up housekeeping, says Modern Society.

The household consisted of more than four hundred persons, men, women, children as his first care was to treat his walls of such castles as Stirling and Edinburgh, Lindisburgh, Falkland, and their like.
