IS YOUR COAT DUSTY?
You Probably Have the White Scab of Dandruff on It.
If your coat or shoulders have a white dust upon it, the chances are that it is from dandruff. The only way to permanently cure dandruff is to remove the cause, which is a germ. Newbro's Herpicide kills the germ. Every toilet table should have such a hair-dressing that contains also the destroyer of the dandruff and hair-falling germ. It stops all irritation, keeps the scalp sweet, pure and wholesome. Remember that something claimed to be "just as good," will not do the work of genuine Herpicide.

QUEEN TO LAY A KEEL PLATE

Great interest in connection with the Royal Family's Approaching Visit to Portsmouth

Great preparations are being made at the Portsmouth naval station for the expected visit of King George and his family. According to present arrangements King George and Queen Mary, with the younger children, will visit that great naval centre about January 17th, and will remain in the harbor on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert for several days. There is great excitement among the naval officers and officials, a number of whom remember the King in his sailor days, and it is believed that, although the visit is to be entirely informal and almost private, Queen Mary will be asked to lay the first keel plate of the new mammoth super-Dreadnought, which will be christened the Royal George. Unlike King Edward, who took only a superficial but patriotic interest in the Navy, King George follows every new step made by the Admiralty with the most intense eagerness, and he is already in possession of the secret designs of the new ships to be laid down next year. He is also very alive to the grievances of the "lower deck," and when at Portsmouth he is expected to pay a number of visits to the naval barracks, the dockyard, and various establishments outside the port.

TO WIPE OUT THE LOW NECKS

Queen Mary Has Started a Crusade Against Them, and "High Necks" Will be Good Etiquette

Queen Mary, whose habits and ideas are very puritanical in every way, has decided upon a crusade against the low-necked evening dress, and in this she has the full support of King George. During the reign of King Edward, and even under Queen Victoria, the court dresses of ladies were cut as low as possible, but Queen Mary has a great dislike for this fashion, and she has made it clear to the ladies of her household that if a dress is cut away at the neck at all it should be as little as possible. At the present time the edicts of the Court make it compulsory for low-necked dress to be worn on all "full-dress" occasions, but this will be greatly modified during the next few years. She prefers to introduce the innovation gradually, but she has already made it clear the elderly ladies and others, who desire to wear high-necked dresses at next season's courts may do so without infringing any detail of court etiquette.

Baronet Claims Seventy-two Out of a Total of 380 in the Parish Edifice

A dispute as to whether Sir Oswald Mosley, Burton-on-Trent, was entitled to the exclusive use of seventy-two seats in the parish church was settled at Lichfield Consistory Court.

Sir Oswald applied for a faculty appropriating certain seats in the church and counsel on the matter, together with the respective parties, took place. It was agreed that a faculty should be granted to the Mosley family, giving them the exclusive use of thirty-eight out of seventy-two of the existing seats in the south aisle, and also the right to erect monuments in the aisle.

A conference between the chancellor and counsel on the matter, together with the respective parties, took place. It was agreed that a faculty should be granted to the Mosley family, giving them the exclusive use of thirty-eight out of seventy-two of the existing seats in the south aisle, and also the right to erect monuments in the aisle.

FEAR OF DEATH

A Well-Known Magistrate Doubts Its Deterrent Effect on the Criminal

The well-known magistrate, Mr. Plowden, contributes an interesting study in criminal psychology to the discussion on the death penalty which has been carried on for the past fortnight in the columns of the "Times." Incidentally Mr. Plowden pleads for a saner judgment of the character and motives of the murderer. He says:—

It is a popular fallacy to regard a murderer as the worst of criminals. The real truth is that in many cases it is hardly fair to describe him as a criminal at all.

No one who has not been through the fire can tell what may be the effect on his self-control of a long course of studied insults and provocation on the part of a worthless wife against her husband persevered in day by day, for months and even years at a stretch. Sir Henry Smith, in his virtuous indignation with Crippen, makes no allowance for desperate circumstances like these.

He is angry with Crippen on account of his coolness in the witness-box, which he calls an outrage, and he apparently regards it as a diabolical aggravation of his conduct that he should have sworn to love and cherish at the altar the wife whom he subsequently put to death.

It is somewhat amazing to me that considerations such as these should weigh for a moment in any just appreciation of Crippen's character. They were to me absolutely irrelevant.

What Crippen actually did, and for which he suffered death, was to kill a wife whom he hated for the sake of a woman whom he loved. Probably of all the murders that are committed under the sun, in one country or another, there is no more common type of murder than this.

It was the irony of Crippen's fate that he did not meet No. 2 until after he had met No. 1. Had such been his good fortune he would probably have lived a life not better nor worse than his neighbors, and have enjoyed with the best of them the reputation of a contented, law-abiding, citizen. I am convinced from such experience as I have had of criminal courts, extending over many years, that what a man murderously inclined really dreads is not death, but pain.

The spectre of death, though it can always be conjured up, is too remote and shadowy to have much effect on the nerves of a man in the enjoyment of full and vigorous health. Not so with pain. There is no imagination so dull that it cannot take in the terror of the "cat," and I believe if such punishment could be made part of the sentence, even without abolishing capital punishment, the deterrent effect would be unmistakable.

I think even Crippen's courage, wretched as it was, would have quailed on that dark and wintry morning, had he known that he would have to endure a flogging before he was hung.

And had he been asked which he feared most—the physical pain of the lash or the death to follow—can anyone doubt what his answer would have been?

An Object of Pity

That part of our nature which we call the emotional is much more highly developed in women than in men. They are more sensitive, more nervous, more sympathetic, more pronounced in their likes and dislikes, more susceptible to the extremes of pleasure and pain, and these refined mental qualities, no less than beauty of form and features, make up the atmosphere of attractiveness which always surrounds true womanliness.

The continued existence of these winning, engaging, womanly characteristics depends to a very large extent on the regularity of the womanly functions and the condition of the womanly organs; and when these functions and organs become disordered or diseased the same mental qualities which are the glory of a well woman become the source of suffering and torture almost insupportable. Her cheery hopefulness is changed to a feeling of despondency, almost of despair, and she is haunted with forebodings of worse evils to come. Instead of being entertaining and rosy, being lighted or forsaken by her relatives and friends and she has a most humiliating and painful condition and of her loss of her womanly attributes, if she is religiously inclined she is very liable to be oppressed with doubts and fears as to her spiritual condition, or to think that she is eternally lost. In addition to this, she has also to endure the most distressing aches and pains.

What makes the case still more pitiable, especially with married women, is the fact that few men understand or appreciate the extent of their suffering, or the seriousness of the troubles causing it. Many doctors even speak of these disorders as subjects for ridicule, and the poor sufferer often gets a reputation for being a crank or a scold when she merely approaches being a martyr.

As these disorders are due to a disordered condition of the womanly organs, it is evident that to effect a cure these organs must be restored to normal condition; and in other words, the circulation, which has become congested and stagnant in these parts, must be improved so that the waste matter will be expelled, and the nourishment so badly needed be brought to these suffering organs. It is the waste matter which holds in the stagnant blood vessels in these parts, and which causes most of the suffering by opposing the normal circulation in these organs, and as it has powerful antiseptic properties, it immediately acts on the waste matter held there, and causes it to be discharged. As this dead matter is discharged the nerves are relieved, the pains and mental troubles become less, and the nerves and blood vessels become stronger. ORANGE LILY thus proves its merit by actual, visible results. It cures, certainly and as positively on all female troubles as diphtheria.

Dear Mrs. Currah, I am very grateful to ORANGE LILY for the change it has made in my life. When I commenced its use eight months ago I felt I would be surely insane before the year was ended. Endless pain, suffering, and a wish for death, and besides I would have such fits of depression and nervous twitching that I would have to scream. I had doctors with three different doctors for over two years, and had also used both the Pine and the Electric, but I will soon be entirely well. I sleep well, and feel cheerful and happy, except that I am occasionally somewhat depressed, but these spells are getting fewer and milder. I have also noticeably improved in appearance. Enclosed find $2 for which please send me two boxes of ORANGE LILY and one of Cerate Massage. I might add that the medicine which used to be freely discharged, and which looked like a chicken's gizzard, is becoming very scant, and I imagine that the circulation is pretty well restored. Am I not right in this? Your sincere friend, MRS. J. E. A.

Free to all Sufferers

In order to enable every woman suffering from any form of female disorders to test the merits of ORANGE LILY, I will send to everyone who will send me the name of address of any suffering friend, a trial box of the remedy for ten days' treatment, absolutely free. As this is worth 25c, it is only because I know that it can give relief that I make this free trial offer. Further, if any woman wishes expert medical advice, and will write me a full description of her case, will submit same to the staff of the Conroy Medical Institute, Detroit, Mich., and they will write her direct without charge, and will enclose THREE 2-CENT STAMPS and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAN, WINDSOR, ONT.

ARCTIC EXPEDITION

Sir Ernest Shackleton Finds the Call to the North Irresistible

Like so many other explorers, Sir Ernest Shackleton finds the call of the wild irresistible.

Next May or June he has decided to head a party of scientists in an expedition to the Spitzbergen Islands, in the Arctic Ocean. The party will be away for more than two months. The chief objects of the expedition are biological research and the comparing of the flora and fauna of the Arctic and the Antarctic.

There is a probability of Sir Ernest making another expedition to the Antarctic two years hence or perhaps sooner. It will be one of the largest yet sent, and will include three or four landing parties.

It is hoped to circumnavigate the Antarctic completely.
