

CURED OF CONSTIPATION

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes: "For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment has caused, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused me so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills. That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial. They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine. For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and chronic inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box."

THAT ROLLER BOAT

KNAPP'S BRILLIANT CRAFT IN LAW COURTS.

A Dream Founded on a Student's Lilt—The Adventures of the Famous Craft. "Bang went the hammer" several thousand times and added to it large quantities of annoyance and "you have a partial financial history of the Knapp Roller Boat, which is again figuring in a law suit. Years ago, before automobiles and aeroplanes were in operation, Mr. Fred Knapp, of Prescott, Ont., had a dream founded on the student lilt: "Merrily we roll along, o'er the deep blue sea." As the result he interested Mr. Alfred Laurie, a Toronto financial agent, in the invention and construction of the now famous Knapp Roller Boat. It was a novel idea, to have a boat constructed that no matter how high the waves might dash, the inner compartment of the boat would remain stationary, being swung on an axle which ran the full length of the ship. In shape, it was not unlike an airship, but was constructed of sheet-iron. The boat set out one day on her trial trip and just by way of showing her independence was wrecked a short distance out of the harbor. Since that time she has been on the go. Her first trip, after being tied up for repairs was down to the bottom of the bay near Polson's Iron Works. There she lay for some years, and the soft, oozy mud gradually covered her iron sides. Then one day it was decided to raise her and the reconstruction took place successfully, the hull still being intact. It was thought that it might be used as a coal boat, but as the ambitious captains and crews are extinct, something had to be done to stop her rolling habits. Therefore large quantities of cement, weighing hundreds of tons, were forced down into the lowermost portions of her interior economy as ballast. Men went down into the rusty hold with steel scrapers and for months were busy removing the corrosion and getting things looking as ship-shape as it was possible to make such a creation. The work had the effect of awakening the wanderlust of the craft. The years spent in the solitude of the bottom of the bay had produced a desire for company and in the winter of 1906 the opportunity came one night in the shape of a violent storm. The cables were broken and in the darkness of early morning off she started to do some visiting. Straight down the bay she went toward the "west," taking in all the local improvements, and nosing her way quietly along the waterfront. Finally, she spotted the Turbina and with a forward lurch made straight for the trim craft. Gentleless had not been included in her rollers and the meeting was so rough that the Turbina was badly taken back and tied up a short distance from the hoo-doo was towed back and tied up again. The next journey was a little pleasure jaunt over to Fisherman's Island, where after vainly trying to crawl up the shore she gave up the attempt and quietly submitted to being hauled back and tied up. There she is yet, rusting her heart out in the sorrow of a blighted career hoodooed at every stage and good for nothing much but the scrap heap. The iron alone in the original construction cost over $10,000, and since that time Mr. Laurie, the financial agent, claims the boat has run up a bill of costs of $30,000. The returns have been nothing at all as she has never made an official trip and therefore earned nothing but calamity.

ONTARIO'S GAS WELLS.

They Are a Source of Great Revenue to Farmers Along Lake Erie.

A man driving along the shore of Lake Erie, in that somewhat inaccessible region adjacent to Selkirk in Hamilton County, comes upon some objects set out in the lake that suggest defenses against some future foreign invader. One's mind turns at once to Fenian raids and perhaps to a query whether defenses of this sort are not contrary to the provisions of the Rush-Besant treaty. The apparent defenses are concrete arrangements with recesses on the land side and a circular front sloping toward the top, facing Uncle Sam's country. A series of pipes and valves adds to the mystery. Inquiry, however, shows that the "round towers" are no more nor less than the covers of natural gas wells sunk in Lake Erie to secure the precious fuel and lighting material for large Canadian cities and towns many miles away. The fields hereabouts are studded with wells from which the farmers often reap large rentals, but the competing companies were not content with the operations of last winter began boring under Lake Erie. They met with the same success as on land, and at a depth of about 800 feet secured a good flow, though naturally varying in different wells. The drilling operations for the wells farthest in the lake were carried on during the winter, with the apparatus standing on the ice, for Lake Erie, being shallow, is frozen for some distance out during the cold weather. The workmen found it a cold job, for the winds that swept over the ice fields did not suggest proximity to any banana belt. Since then the operations have been extended and several lake wells are now being sunk. The gas companies believe they will find oil by drilling still deeper, and later on it is proposed to make the Pennsylvania fields, across the lake is the basis for this belief. In the vicinity of this gas supply most of the farmhouses are lighted from the wells, though the great bulk of the gas is piped to Hamilton, Brantford, Paris and Galt. The roadsides are studded with the pipes of the competing companies, until one would think he were in a city too young to perfect its public services. Most of the houses are old and weather-stained from a half century's storms from impetuous Lake Erie. Gas lighting and fuel, pianos and top buggies now signal the arrival of a happier day. The upper works of wells appear in the grain fields every few yards, and the farmer as he circles around them with his binder is only soled by the large rental which he derives from a good producing well. One man indeed has an automobile for himself and for each of his two sons, the fruits, it is said, of the natural gas well on his property.

QUACKS ON INCREASE.

Herbalists and Bonesetters Are Over-running British Isles.

Astonishing statements concerning the multitude of unqualified medical practitioners in Britain and their treatment of patients are contained in a bluebook issued recently embodying the result of enquiries made by the Local Government Board at the request of the Lord President of the Council. Information has been obtained from 1,200 medical officers of health in various parts of the United Kingdom. Of the towns reported on, unqualified practice is increasing in eighty-two, in seventy-five it exists to some extent, in fifty-seven there is little, while in only thirty towns it is stated that unqualified practice does not exist. Smallpox treated as a simple skin disease by a herbalist, diphtheria diagnosed as mumps and patients not isolated, scarlet fever spread through being diagnosed as "rose rash," and measles treated as consumption are some of the cases described in the report.

Prescribing by chemists is stated to be so common as to be practically universal throughout the country. While in the main they confine their attention to the so-called minor ailments, and advise patients to consult a doctor in the more difficult cases, the evidence shows that a large amount of prescribing in what eventually proves to be disease of a graver character also takes place. The treatment of infants' diseases by chemists is regarded as having some bearing on infant mortality. Herbalists are severely criticized. "Herbalists may be concerned in the spread of epidemics of infectious diseases. During a smallpox epidemic an ointment was extensively sold which, it was asserted, would cure smallpox. The vendor was prosecuted for spreading the disease by this means. Wrong diagnosis and consequent mistaken treatment are also responsible for spreading infectious disease. In one case smallpox was spread through treatment as chickenpox. "Cough mixtures are prescribed by herbalists indiscriminately for respiratory diseases, which may really be tuberculosis, or chronic phthisis, and the delay entailed by such treatment seriously diminishes the chances of cure." Attention is called to the "irretrievable harm" done by bonesetters. "The men who act as bonesetters are drawn largely from the working-class population, such as carriers, railway porters and the like, and in many cases they are illiterate and uneducated. Some have learned what knowledge they possess from ambulance associations. Those bonesetters who undertake minor surgical cases only do a relatively small amount of harm, though instances of disastrous results are reported. But the greater number of bonesetters undertake more complicated cases. Dislocations are treated without being reduced, and permanent disabilities sometimes result. Several instances of actual harm caused by taking patent medicines are mentioned. One medical officer reports that on three separate occasions during the last year he has treated cases of supposed scarlet fever in which the rash and symptoms were those of diphtheria, but the action of certain kidney pills.

Improving the Quality of Seeds.

Recent bluebook reports show the result of a test made last year by the Seed Commissioner's Branch of the Department of Agriculture of seed corn, field root, and garden seeds sold in Canada. As everyone knows, most garden seeds are sold in bulk, and the hope, and hitherto there has been no guarantee to the purchaser of the percentage of these seeds that would germinate. The inspectors who enforce the Seed Control Act bought 2,577 samples of seed exposed for sale by retailers and wholesalers all over Canada, and these were sent to the Seed Laboratory for testing, with the results already mentioned. The Seed Control Act sets up a standard that certain classes of seeds offered for sale must be capable of germinating the proportion of at least two-thirds of the standard required for good seed of the kind. If the seed comes below this standard, the package must be marked according to the percentage of germination, so that the buyer may know for what he is paying. The value of this act to the agriculturist is obvious. The act furthermore provides that seedmen and dealers may be prosecuted for not complying with its requirements. A further test was made last May in which 732 samples of garden seeds were examined, and the examination shows that about 11 per cent. were below the standard. This is an improvement of 7 per cent. over last year's test, and shows that the Seed Control Act has commenced its beneficent work.

Mr. Cornwall's Literary Tours.

J. K. Cornwall, M.P.P., evidently had pleasant and congenial fraternization with the bunch of newspaper men to whom he gave a free trip through the Peace River country this summer. He announces that he is going to take another literary coterie up there next summer. To the writers the last tour was an eye-opener. They tramped through muskies, kicked up minerals with their tall boots, put their salary checks in town lots where as yet there are no towns, and admired the scenery. The Arctic legislator is in high glee. Lately, he has been seeing some of his guests' write-ups headlining the Yankee magazines—great advertising. Mr. Cornwall is going to show his next journalistic party something different. The Cook's tour is to strike into the mining country, which Cornwall says is just as much the thing as the fat acres of farming land which the party this summer saw for the most part. Here is the route: The quays men will flap down the Athabaska in "Baldie" to Fort McMurray, jumping a few rapids on the way, and proceed to within four hundred miles of Fort Churchill on the Bay.

An Honest Caller.

A woman with no great supply of last year's call on an acquaintance in a small Ontario town. The latter was surprised to see her, as they were on the most formal terms, and the call was somewhat superfluous. As the caller was departing she remarked: "I've enjoyed this little chat so much. I never would have dreamed of coming, only my husband is thinking of running for mayor next January."

Head of the Clan Fraser.

A keen sportsman and soldier, Lord Lovat, head of the Clan Fraser—whose engagement to the Hon. Laura Lister, the second daughter of Lord Ribblesdale, has aroused so much interest—will go down to history as the commander of Lovat's Scouts, who did such excellent work during the South African campaign. A story goes that his lordship once received this telegram from a subordinate, who was injured in a railway accident while on furlough: "Will not report to-day, as expected, on account of unavoidable circumstances." The tone of the message was not satisfactory to the officer, and he wired at once in reply: "Report as ordered, or give reasons." Within an hour the following message came back over the wire from a hospital: "Train off—can't ride; leg off—can't walk. Will not report unless you insist." Lord Lovat is credited with making the shortest speech on record in the House of Lords. It consisted of exactly sixteen words.

A Sympathetic Burglar.

A thoughtful burglar who broke into the house of Joseph Brown, Street East Highway, recently, has earned the gratitude of Mr. and Mrs. Brown by returning through the post two highly prized miniatures, whose intrinsic value to the thief was inconsiderable. The thief took $60 or $70 worth of portable valuables, including a gold miniature best containing the portraits of Mr. Brown's two little boys. The parents were particularly sorry to lose the locket because the elder of the boys died a short time ago and the miniature could not be replaced.—London Daily Mail.
