CHANGING SENTIMENT.
 Oliver Goldsmith's "Deserted Village."
 Goldsmith in his "Deserted Village" spoke of a certain chapel where those who "went to scoff, remained to pray." So in life one often laughs at what he does not understand and later, when he does understand, his laugh turns to praise. There were some who doubted the merits of Newbro's "Her-picide," the scalp germicide and hair dressing, but since they have tried it, they are now among its best friends and strongest endorsers. Herpicide kills the germ that eats the hair off at the root, and the hair then grows again. As a hair dressing it is incomparable, try it.

KING IS UP EARLY IN THE MORNING

His Cup of Coffee and Rolls are Taken to His Room Shortly Before Seven

King George, since he came to the throne, has surprised those about him with the rapidity with which he works and the quickness with which he can make himself the master of any document or state paper that is put in front of him. The late King was deliberate in his methods, and liked to consider every point with the greatest care. The present King, on the other hand, takes everything "at top speed," but there is nothing that misses his eye. He is naturally a rapid thinker, and possesses a wonderfully retentive memory.

He is a very early riser, and, where there he is staying at York Cottage, Windsor Castle, or Buckingham Palace, his cup of coffee and roll and butter are taken to his room a little before seven. By eight o'clock he is seated at his desk, and is going through the papers that have accumulated from the previous day. He reads carefully every letter that reaches him, no matter how humble the source, and when he has finished it he pencils a few instructions upon it and places it in one of the red morocco leather despatch-boxes that stand in front of him.

There are many papers, of course, that cannot be dealt with by the King in a moment, and these are placed on one side for more careful consideration. Between ten and eleven in the forenoon communications from the Prime Minister and the heads of the various government departments reach the King, and by this time his two most trusted advisers, Lord Knollys and Sir Arthur Bignoe, are at his elbow ready to advise him.
 It is stated about the court that among the last words of the late King to his son on his death-bed were, "Trust Knollys," and to this King George has always adhered. He does not maintain that regular and voluminous correspondence with the heads of foreign Powers that King Edward did during his reign, but his letter-book, day by day, is of very considerable dimensions.

Practically the whole of the King's work is done in the morning, and he contrives to keep his afternoon free for recreation of one form or another.
 The evening, however, finds him back at work again, glancing through the matters that have been submitted for his consideration during the day, as well as having everything clear before he retires for the night.

SOUTH AFRICA
 A SOLID UNION

The Duke of Connaught Recounts His Impressions on the Newest of British Federations

The Duke of Connaught, upon his return from South Africa, made the following statement regarding the consolidation of the English and Dutch races:
 "I consider that the Union is solidly based, and that its establishment holds out great promise for the prosperity of the land comprised within the four amalgamated Colonies. That there should have been sacrifices of local interest was inevitable, but I trust that what the Union has taken away with one hand it may repay abundantly with the other.

"That the Union should be established without a number of minor dissensions and without political strife was unlikely, but it is really remarkable how far the Union has already become a reality and not a name only.
 This is in a large measure due to the action of the members of the Houses of Parliament, who have dealt with many important matters, particularly the education question, in a way calculated to placate both great political parties.

"The two races whose interests were for generations opposed have settled down with the firm intention of working together. It is impossible that there should never be questions in which the line of cleavage of opinion lies between those two races, but with the mutual respect which exists between English and Dutch there is no reason why racial disagreements should not steadily diminish until those two great racial descriptions are merged in the appellation of South Africa."

IRISH LABORERS
 Many of Them Go to England and Scotland Because of Better Wages and Conditions

"The question of the employment and carriage of Irish agricultural laborers in Great Britain is one of direct interest in connection with the study of agricultural work and wages in Ireland," says a report issued recently by the Department of Agricultural and Technical Instruction for Ireland.

Approximately 20,500 migratory laborers went for temporary employment to England and Scotland in 1909, as compared with 22,500 in 1908.
 The low rate of wage for such labor in Ireland as compared with England has the effect of draining Ireland of labor. "The remedy for this state of affairs," says the report, "can only lie in one direction, namely, the making of as good a career for the agricultural laborer in Ireland as there is for him in England and Scotland.

"The question of the supply of labor is of fundamental importance in the present situation of Irish agriculture.
 There are in Ireland more than 155,- 000 holdings of over 30 acres in except, occupying three-fourths of the total area of the country, and if the future of tillage on this very large portion of the land of Ireland is to be safeguarded there must be an improvement in the work and wages of the laborer on this land."

MILLIONS OF SNAILS
 A plague of snails on the coast of Ceylon is assuming serious proportions. Millions of snails are to be found, and some of them weigh as much as a pound. The snails have begun feeding on the young coconut trees, and it is feared that they may attack the young rubber trees.

CINEMATOGRAPH DUEL

French Editors Fight While an Operator Takes Pictures of a Real Encounter

In the favorite duelling ground of Paris—the enclosure surrounding the Great Wheel—an encounter took place on Boxing morning between two well-known Paris Journalists—M. de Jouvernal, editor of the "Matin," and M.
 Hutin, editor of the "Echo de Paris." The duel was provoked by an alleged offensive letter which M. de Jouvernal received from M. Hutin after an incident in the lobby of the Chamber of Deputies.

An announcement that nobody would be allowed to see the duel—which, by the way, had been announced several days previously—naturally made everybody anxious to be present, and accordingly when the encounter began there was quite a crowd of the ordinary public, pressmen, photographers, and even a cinematograph operator present.

The principals were not expert swordsmen, and the seconds seemed to be in the most danger from the glittering weapons. What advantage in skill there was rested with Jouve-vernal, who touched M. Hutin on the chest and for a moment everybody was afraid that he had really been hurt.
 The seconds, however, intervened in time, rushed forward and tore open his shirt, and found that he was not scratched.

At the fourth engagement, M. de Jouvernal succeeded in scratching M.
 Hutin's forehead, and the battle was over. The two men were reconciled, and embraced each other before leaving the ground.

SARDINES IN FRANCE

Interesting statistics on the French sardine industry show that there are seven English canning factories on the coast engaged in canning the fish; 14,000 women prepare the fish as they come from the nets, and 2,500 men are employed in canning them. The average annual production of tinned sardines is 20,000 tons. About 12 lb. of tin is used on every 100 square yards of sheet iron from which the tins are made.

THE KINGLY VICEROY

A Story Illustrating - The Courteous
 Nature of Lord Dufferin

Here is a simple little story from "Many Memories of Life in India," by Mr. J. H. Rivett Carnac. It gives penetrating insight into the courteous and kindly nature of Lord Dufferin:
 "My wife and I had strolled over to the vice-regal camp to see a friend and were at the bottom of the street at the top of which were the great tents and the huge "shamiana" occupied by the Viceroy. Suddenly we saw Lord Dufferin, who had been distinguishable walking up and down the small garden in front, hurrying out away, pursued by a "jemadar" and an aide-de-camp, who, very properly, would not allow their charge out of their sight. Coming up to my wife and shaking hands, he said: 'I saw you in the distance, and could not resist the temptation of running down to tell you that ten minutes ago I had the pleasure of signing an order appointing the best man in India to be Foreign Secretary.' This was my wife's brother, who obtained the blue-ribbon of the services, very young, and who for some time served this excellent master. This account of a kindly little attention on the part of the busy hard-worked Governor-General will give a better idea of his character than any long record of his abilities and successes."

ODORS THAT AID DIGESTION

Eastern Peoples Often Make the Air Fragrant with Fine Mists Sweet scents to aid digestion are an inheritance from the Orient. The influence of odors is exceedingly marked. Some people cannot remain where lilacs are in full bloom or bear the odor of jasmine. Some are given a headache by heliotrope or tuberose.

 Some are given the vertigo or a sinking sensation by cantharides, some are nauseated even by rose. Attacks of real illness, with long trains of digestive disorders following in their wake, may be brought on by odors. The fact can be explained only as a pathological phenomenon exerting its influence on the most vulnerable point in the human economy, the gastro-intestinal tract. As offending scents may set in motion a train of morbid digestive symptoms, so, on the contrary, those that are sweet and agreeable may exercise a highly beneficial effect. The Orientals have developed to a notable degree the faculty of deriving the most enjoyment from inhaling fragrant odors.
 The most beautiful creations pictured in the imagination of Mohammedans are the hours represented in the Koran as bays of Paradise, formed of musk, who exhale from their lovely bodies entrancing perfumes. It is the custom of many Eastern peoples to spend after each meal a season of quiet while the air around them is rendered fragrant by a fine mist. Or a bottle of their favorite perfume is constantly inhaled.
 Even the best of us indulge in this habit, for all feel that it benefits nerves and digestion. It is believed that a phytic state favourable to the digestive process may be induced through the orifices fully as well as through the other senses.

PROSPEROUS DOUKHOBORS
 They Have Made a Veritable Garden of the Waterloo District

The Doukhobor settlement at Waterloo is fast forging to the front.
 The members of the colony are actively engaged in varied pursuits for the gaining of a livelihood, the communistic principle prevailing. Over the settlement is Peter Verigin, head of the Doughobor society, his local agent being John Sherbinin.
 In this settlement there are 1,100 Doughobors. Waterloo is a veritable garden, and the great ranch is considered by experts to be almost perfect. They are clearing 4,000 acres of land, to be planted at once in an immense orchard of all kinds of fruits, both large and small.
 The settlement is fulfilling a contract with the C.P.R. for 100,000 railway ties. They possess three portable sawmills, and are now negotiating for a fourth. They have a ferry across the river at Waterloo, also one this side of Castlegar, and are erecting one still farther up the river. In addition to the above they are building a bridge which connects with a private road leading to Pass creek, where they own 2,000 acres of land. Where the road intercepts the bridge, they are going to erect a large store for the purpose of supplying their colony, as well as the public.

A FAMOUS CLOWN

The King Remembered the Old Entertainer With a Gift

The King has sent a gift of $15 to Mr. James Doughty, the oldest public entertainer in the kingdom and once a favorite with London children as pantomime clown.
 Mr. Doughty wrote to the King stating that he was the oldest member of his craft still before the public. To the old man's intense delight he received a reply from Sir William Car-ington, who stated that he had been commanded by the King to send him a post office order for $15. With his rouse of performing dogs Mr. Doughty has been a notable figure at Brighton for over thirty years. He is preparing to celebrate his ninety-second birthday on August 27. When he celebrated his birthday last year Mr.
 Doughty donned his old motley and sang some of the pantomime songs of fifty years ago.
