

WILL EXPLORE IN ANTARCTIC

Dr. A. Forbes Mackay Would Take Six Men With Him—Total Cost, $100,000

Dr. A. Forbes Mackay, London, submits a proposal for a new Antarctic expedition conducted along different lines from those followed by previous exploring enterprises at the southern end of the earth's surface. Dr. Mackay, it will be recalled, was a member of Sir Ernest Shackleton's expedition, on which he was attached to the landing party, being associated with Professor David in the journey from the winter quarters to the South Magnetic Pole. He proposes to explore the Antarctic coast with a small party, provided with sledges and dogs. Traveling would be mainly on the sea ice, and they would rely on the Weddell seal for most of their food and all their fuel.

The party would consist of six good men—the leader (who should be a navigator and surveyor), the second in command (who should also be a navigator), a geologist and mineralogist, a surgeon, and two handy men (who should have some experience of dog-sledging). Only three sledges would be needed, and 24 dogs would be taken to draw them. The most serious difficulty likely to be encountered would probably take the form of a lofty range of mountains with steep seaward slopes ending in sheer cliffs without sea ice at their base. This obstacle could be circumvented by piercing the mountain ranges and ascending to the plateau behind them by way of a glacier, afterwards descending to the sea again by another glacier.

This system of exploration might be applied to any part of the Antarctic coast, but the region which Dr. Mackay is most anxious to investigate is that lying between Graham Land and King Edward VII. Land, and the distance between these two places is roughly 2,900 miles. Dr. Mackay puts the average day's run at 10 miles. He believes that a ship should be able to land an exploring party in Graham Land or Alexander I. Land about the beginning of December. He estimates that the total cost of the expedition need not exceed $100,000, and considers that his plans could be admirably put into execution in connection with or as part of such an expedition as Dr. Bruce proposes.

Cook:—"Yes'm, Mary broke that one, and this ere one just come to pieces in my 'and."—Punch.

CAPE TO CAIRO AUTO RACE

Four Thousand Gallons of Petrol Distributed Along the 5,800-Mile Course for the British Car

Four thousand gallons of petrol have already been distributed between Elizabethville, the existing railroad of the southern portion of the Cape to Cairo line, and Gondokoro, on the White Nile, to fuel the British motor car, in which Captain Bentley and his party will leave Capetown on February 7 in a race against a German car to Cairo, a distance of 5,800 miles.

In the ordinary way the 25-h.p. car in which the British party will travel would run twenty-two miles on one gallon of spirit, but in the difficult country of Equatorial Africa a great deal of petrol will be consumed in necessary low-speed work. Two acetylene headlights, one movable searchlight, and three oil lamps, will be carried in the car, the acetylene being conveyed in compressed form.

expedition will carry a rifle and a revolver, with sixty rounds a rifle and twenty rounds of revolver ammunition apiece. Relays of ammunition will be stored at the petrol depots. A motor-bicycle will accompany the car, and the members of the expedition will take turns in using this for scouting and observation work.

The equipment of each man will weigh 15 pounds plus a gabardine tent, sun and water-proof, when, with ground sheet will weigh 20 pounds, and a sleeping bag weighing 7 pounds. Altogether each man's kit will scale 42 pounds—that is to say, 18 pounds under the government weight allowance for soldiers on active service.

From Gondokoro northwards to Khartoum these supplies will be provided by a small launch, which will journey up the White Nile, making frequent depots for the motor party. In the car will be carried a small supply of flexible steel ropes, saws, picks, shovels, and axes, in case of emergencies.
