AN ORANGE BANQUET

IN HONOR OF REV. MR. NORTHEY, OF BELFAST.

The Irish Visitor said that Ireland would not stand for Home Rule—Irishmen would come to Canada if it was given.

The 'Prentice Boys lodge of the city held a banquet in the Orange Hall Friday evening and a very enjoyable affair it was. There were fully one hundred people gathered around the festive board and did ample justice to the excellent repast before them. The bill of fare was most exquisitely prepared, thanks to the efforts of the ladies connected with the lodge.

Edward Bennett, chairman, brought the banquet to order and said he always felt it a great honor to preside at any of the gatherings of the 'Prentice Boys, but felt specially honored at being the one chosen to occupy the chair on this occasion when so many eminent speakers were present. He declared that as true Orangemen and 'Prentice Boys they were proud of their ancestors and the way in which they had done their duty when it had been required of them. He hoped those present would not forget this and also added that he hoped that they would do their duty the way their forefathers had done theirs.

The next speaker was Bro. Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald, of St. Paul's church, a speaker who is well-known to all the people of this city as being a very warm advocate of Protestantism. He said he always felt a great deal of pleasure in coming to the Orange Hall at any time, and contributing something to the programme, but he felt an extreme pleasure to be present at this time, and was very much pleased to welcome Rev. Mr. Northey to Kingston as a brother Irishman. He was pleased to see such a magnificent gathering around the festive board and hoped that the truth which he would endeavor to bring home to them would long linger in their minds. He stated that the best proof of Protestantism was the regular attendance at church each Sabbath and the daily family worship in the homes. If the Protestants of Kingston want the best proof of Protestantism as it is they should endeavor at all times to carry themselves in a manner that would not disgrace the cause. Young men who go along the street shouting the merits of Protestantism, and cheer at the mention of the name of King William, are not the ones that will impress those with whom they come in contact as ringing true. He urged the Anglicans, Methodists, Presbyterians and all other denominations to stand shoulder to shoulder in this great fight for the right, and protect the liberties which were so dearly bought by our forefathers on the fields of battle. The audience was then favored with a solo by Bro. Murray.

Rev. Dr. Mackie spoke for a short time in his witty way. He said that he (Dr. Mackie) had only a nominal connection with the lodge and that contrary to the statement which had been made by Bro. Fitzgerald that he was there more out of friendship for the people than anything else, he wished to inform him that he held the office of Lord of the Armory. He took the opportunity to thank the 'Prentice Boys for the honor they had conferred upon him by electing him to this important position and he would endeavor to do his best to fulfill it well. Miss Dutton then gave a recitation which was very much enjoyed.

The guest of honor of the evening, Bro. Rev. Mr. Northey, of Belfast, Ireland, was then introduced to the assembly. Mr. Northey, in his opening remarks, told that he was born within twelve miles of the historic city of Derry. He had played around the edge of the walls when a boy, and had been prepared for college in a private school at the edge of the wall. He remembered many things about this great city and recited many deeds of bravery which were done by Ireland's forefathers. He said that many people in the old country did not hold it a great honor to be associated with the Orange order in any way, but he felt honored in a great many ways and was heartily glad that he was associated with it. Both the Orange order and the 'Prentice Boys had, it may be said, been born in a time of storm, cradled in tempests and grown up in the midst of trying circumstances. "Those of you who read history," he said, "will remember the terrible persecution which swept over the north of Ireland, in beginning of the seventeenth century, when thousands of people were butchered in cold blood by the Catholics regardless of sex and age. We seem to be forgetting the early sufferings of our forefathers when we deal so leniently with the Catholics of the present time." Down to the time of the landing of William, Prince of Orange, the lives and property of the Protestants was always in danger. When Orangeism first began to take definite shape, Catholicism started on the decline, and it has been steadily going down ever since. Accordingly, as the strength of the Orangemen increased, so increased the safety of the lives and property holders in the land. These Irishmen and especially Orangemen were always regarded as good fighters and they received the best recommendation a general could give when he said they were the finest body of men he had ever seen.

Mr. Northey said he would like to stir up among the young men of this city and province to read something about the history of their forefathers and of the hardships which they had to encounter. Some people regarded this as an ordinary sort of thing, but he thought it was one of the highest aims in life, to know more about the conditions which surrounded their ancestors when they fought for their country and religion. This country has a great need now for 'Prentice Boys and Orangemen.

Here the speaker touched on the home rule question and said as long as he lived he would never be in favor of it. He was a unionist, and would never consent to see the policy in the hands of the Irish party. He then spoke of the terrible boycott which is practised in many parts of Ireland with terrible effect on those boycotted, and said the 14,000 of the best policemen in the world were doing nothing to prevent it. They would protect lives and property when called upon to do so, but nothing more.

The speaker said he feared there were too long times in store for Ireland. The next ten years would not go over our heads without seeing something definite come to pass in this land. Ireland will not have home rule, and if measures are taken to prevent it, immigrants will leave the country in thousands. Here, he said, was where Canada would receive the benefits of it, for a great many would come to our shores, Canada, he said, needed to look to her spurs. More and more of the 'Prentice Boys spirit is needed here. He was shocked last year upon picking up the papers to read about the Eucharistic Congress, held in Montreal. He said Rome was always given a great deal of credit for being crafty, but this was one place where its craftiness had failed. In spite of the fact that the Protestants had roused them to the boiling point. The speaker said he was in conversation with a prominent Montrealer who said he had been told by a Catholic that his people were disappointed in their religion and that they were going to try and throw off the priestly yoke sooner or later.

Mr. Northey's last appeal to the Orangemen was to extend their order as much as possible and to get it known and the principles which it stands for known among the men, better than it is at the present time. To get Protestants in all the public offices was another solution of the problem.

Miss Willoughby then sang a solo, after which Prof. John Murray was called upon by the chairman for a short address. Prof. Murray's remarks were brief but to the point. He said he regarded William III as a greater man than Napoleon, for William saved all Europe from a panic and had thrown off the fast increasing French rule which was then dominating the British Isles. He believed that all Protestant denominations would stand together in this great theme. He disagreed to some extent with some of the things which had been uttered by Rev. Mr. Northey.

The last two speakers on the programme were James Berney and Rev. T. W. Savary, both of whom spoke very briefly, the latter dismissing the gathering at the close.

Golden Wedding at Morven.

On January 28th, there gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Garrison, on the old homestead, at Morven, as a surprise, their children and grandchildren, also Mr. and Mrs. George Lampkin, Moscow; Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Lampkin, Branford; Mr. and Mrs. James Young, Napanee; and Rev. and Mrs. McConnell, to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. The home was nicely arranged for the occasion, and after the friends had gathered and many congratulations had been offered, all sat down to a sumptuous repast prepared by the children. They were the recipients of a number of useful presents. They both have been honored members of the Methodist church of Morven for over thirty-nine years. They have the good wishes of the whole community, who join in wishing them many added years of happy wedded life, with increased prosperity and usefulness.

Want Another Favor.

The workmen appreciate the three cent tickets provided by the street railway company, but would like a further extension of the favors, cheap tickets from twelve to one o'clock, thus giving them an opportunity, in many cases, of going home to dinner. This change would add much to the popularity of the line.

ANOTHER LIVELY RUNAWAY.

Farmer's Team Created Much Excitement. Kingston is a great place for runaways. Nearly a half dozen occur every week.

Late yesterday afternoon a farmer's team went out on the warpath, and, without causing a great deal of damage, created a lot of excitement. The farmer was driving on Ontario street, when his team made a bolt, and landed in the carters' stand, near the corner of Ontario and Brock street. The farmer's sleigh was pulled on top of the carters' outfit, and the two vehicles were then thrown against a telegraph pole, making a fine mix-up. This prevented the animals from going farther, on their mad career. The farmer, with the aid of the carters, was soon able to straighten out affairs, but not before quite a large crowd congregated, as is usual, when a runaway occurs. Runaways are more frequent in the winter, as the cold weather makes the horses quite restless, especially if they have no blankets on. Horses are very often left on the street untied, and this often brings about trouble.
