

Nature's Cure for a Cough

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Liseed and Turpentine is the Most Largely Imitated Medicine in the Country.

What to give the children for cough, and colds is the problem mothers now have to solve. Most of them finally decide on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Liseed and Turpentine, and make it a rule to always have some in the house.

In this medicine are liseed, turpentine, and other well-known ingredients of unmistakable value in the cure of colds. It is pleasant to take, so much so that children delight to use it.

So generally is this great medicine used that several imitations have been put on the market. All alike in name only. They are not made from the same formula, nor do they bear the name of Dr. Chase.

You know what you can expect from the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Liseed and Turpentine, but you cannot put much faith in an imitation which sells on the reputation of the article it imitates.

On every bottle of the genuine will be found the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author. This is for your protection and for the protection of your children. Be sure to get the genuine, even if it costs a few cents more. 25 cents a bottle, family size, 60 cents; all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

FAMOUS MARYS OF FICTION'S PAGE

Always a Favorite Name With Novelists, Poets and Playwrights—in Romance Also

One of the gifts that the Queen will treasure most is the one that will be presented to her by the Marys of the Empire at the coronation of King George and herself. It is proposed that every Mary, Marion, and others with similar names shall contribute a small sum towards this gift.

Mary has always been a favorite name with novelists, poets, and playwrights. From "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," of our nursery days to the "Merely Mary Ann" of Israel Zangwill, the name will be found scattered freely over the pages of romance. The most famous novelist of all, Charles Dickens, whose centenary is celebrated this year, uses Mary in one form or another dozens of times. There are in his novels over a score of Marys pure and simple, to say nothing of Marthas, Mollys, and other versions of the name. Most of his Marys are, however, humble characters. There is Mary Anne, Doris's servant in "David Copperfield," for example, and another Mary Anne was the maid of the clerk Wemmick in "Great Expectations."

In the "Pickwick Papers" there are no fewer than five Marys. One was a servant at the Manor Farm, another the wife of the Marchbanks' parson, and a third, one in a pet shop and one to Nupkins, and the last was a barmaid at the Peacock.

Not all the Marys of fiction are, however, placed in humble positions. Lady Mary Carlisle is the most important woman character in that delightful play and book, "Monte Carlo." The author of "Peter Pan" gives his first place in his novel "When a Man's Single," as Mary Abinger, the charming daughter of a fiery colonel. And did not the famous dramatist immortalize her name in that best-known of all phrases and titles, "Little Mary" in his "Little White Bird," too, Mary is the name of the pretty young governess who has such a great influence on the life of the supposed teller of the story.

In the late Count Tolstoy's "Resurrection" the Princess Mary Korchagin was the good woman whom Prince Nekhlyudoff expected to marry. Many well-known foreign novelists have been fond of this essentially English name. In Maarten Maarten's "Some Women I Have Known," for instance, Mary Bates is the good-natured, loyal daughter whose dearest aspiration was to possess a Sunday class of her very own.

First Lady: "How very happy the bridegroom looks! Really, it is pleasant to see a young man looking so joyful." Second Lady: "Hush! That's not the bridegroom; that's a gentleman the bride jilted six months ago."

BRITISH AIRSHIP HAS EIGHT TANKS

Will Have a Storage Capacity of 2,000 Gallons of Petrol—Built for Long Voyages

Some additional particulars from a reliable source are to hand respecting the British naval airship now under construction at Barrow. The envelope, constructed of a silk similar in character to that used in the latest Zeppelins, is divided into seven sections. Its length is given as 510 feet, its diameter is 48 feet, and its gas capacity 706,335 cubic feet. To each of the two sets of eight-cylinder Waisley engines—each engine being rated at about 200 horse-power—there are attached eight sheet-metal tanks. Each tank has a storage capacity for 2,000 gallons of petrol, so that the total storage capacity of the tanks when full is 32,000 gallons. The tanks are welded together in oil-tight sections. Consequently, accident or injury to any section would involve the loss only of a minute fraction of the supply and would not destroy the buoyancy of the airship. In consequence of these features of her equipment the airship is fitted with some 300 yards of aluminum piping. Her lifting capacity is estimated at 21 tons, as against 16½ tons, the lifting capacity of the Zeppelin VIII, and her computed speed is 45 miles an hour, obtained from the three propellers, designed to run at 4,500 revolutions per minute. In order to minimize weight, the framework has been constructed of the new alloy of aluminum known as "duralium," which is stated to be both lighter and stronger than the pure aluminum used in the construction of the German airships. From these particulars it is evident that the new airship is designed to undertake long voyages and to maintain efficiency, even if struck during an attack. As the tests to which all parts are being subjected are very thorough, it is not likely that the ship will be ready for her trial flight before May next.

WANTED A SALUTE

Czar's Boy Said He Would Not Tell His Father

A good story of the 8-year-old Tsarevich is now going the rounds of society in St. Petersburg. His Imperial Highness is, of course, greeted with a salute whenever he passes a sentry in the Palace precincts. Recently, however, it became evident that the honor so much gratified the young Prince that many unnecessary excursions were being made past the box of a certain sentry, the customary salute being accorded every time. The matter reached the ears of his father, who, to give his son a lesson, issued orders that in future no notice should be taken of the Tsarevitch's comings and goings by the sentries. The dismay of the heir was profound when, on passing his favorite sentry-box the next morning, he found that his presence was ignored. In childish indignation he went to the sentry and demanded the reason of the omission. "It is by the Tsar's orders," was the reply. This seemed at first to settle the matter, but after a few moments' cogitation the Royal youngster approached the sentry again and said, pleadingly: "Please just do it this once, and I promise you father shall hear anything about it."

FACILITIES FOR THE BLIND

Proposal to Carry Them Free in Street Cars

The proposal by Glasgow Corporation to allow blind people to travel on the street cars free of charge is expected to be in operation soon. Mr. Dalrymple, the manager of the department, has received from the various societies who work in the interests of the blind the names of between 700 and 800 persons, whom a special form has been sent with a view to securing information regarding the occupation, business address, and other circumstances of the recipient. Several of the associations have agreed to co-operate with the Tramways Department in carrying out the scheme. Special brass tokens are being prepared, and these will be distributed gratis to qualified persons by the various institutions for the blind.

TO VISIT DUBLIN AND EDINBURGH

Details of the Tour the King and Queen Will Take in Ireland and Scotland

"The King and Queen hope to visit Dublin and Edinburgh during the month of July next."

This is the simple official announcement of the King's Secretary, Sir Arthur Bigge.

It is expected that Their Majesties will include Glasgow in their Scottish itinerary, and that the King will there formally open Glasgow's new Royal Infirmary.

The announcement that the King and Queen are to pay a State visit to Ireland has been received with genuine satisfaction in Dublin. Their Majesties are assured of a genuinely hearty reception. The Irish people had a not unnatural feeling of regret that Queen Victoria did not visit Ireland except at long intervals, while Scotland was favored with a Royal residence at Balmoral.

Queen Victoria, however, nobly atoned for what Irishmen regarded as neglect by coming in the evening of her days and when a cross-country journey was a serious undertaking, on a special mission to Ireland to show her appreciation of the services rendered during the Boer War by what she almost affectionately called, "my brave Irish soldiers." King Edward increased the feeling of gratification by his State visit.

It was in the spring of 1903 that King Edward and Queen Alexandra went to Edinburgh and held a Court at Holyrood. They arrived in the city on May 11 and, according to ancient custom, the Lord Provost offered His Majesty the keys of the capital as he stepped from the train.

On this occasion, after a triumphal progress through the streets of Edinburgh, King Edward and Queen Alexandra were the guests of the Duke of Buccleuch at Dalketh Palace, six miles from the city. The following day they held a Court at Holyrood, the first since the reign of George IV. The levee proper was preceded by a presentation to the King of three arrows and three addresses. The arrows, three in number, but known in archery as a "pair," constituted the so-called "reddendo" which the Royal Archers are bound by their charter to offer to the Sovereign when he visits the Northern capital.

The third day was occupied by various ceremonies, including the opening of a new hospital. The last official visit of King Edward to Edinburgh was in 1905, when nearly 40,000 Scottish Volunteers paraded in the King's Park. King George and Queen Mary were in the city two years later for the Highland and Agricultural Show.

The first Royal visit to Ireland, after King Edward ascended the throne, took place in 1902. On July 21 the King and Queen arrived at Dublin, and were enthusiastically greeted by large crowds. A levee was held, and numerous addresses were received, and Their Majesties visited Belfast, Comanara, and Cork.

The late King, accompanied by Queen Alexandra, went to Ireland in April, 1904. Their last visit was paid in July, 1905, when they attended the Leopardstown Races, and the Kings-town Exhibition.

1,000 DEAD BABIES

An Amazing Story in Connection with the Closing of a Russian Hospital

The founding hospital at Ekaterinosslav, in South Russia, has been closed by the Government on the grounds following amazing and revolting disclosures. Of 1,060 infants received into the institution within the last six months, 1,002 died. The staff of nurses on the books for whom full salaries were drawn numbered 65, but only three were seen. Numbers of infants were found dead of starvation in their cots, with the tubes of empty feeding-bottles in their mouths. The deplorable condition into which the dormitories had fallen through neglect accounted for other deaths. Of the last ten infants received into the hospital, seven died from cholera, but no report was made by the house doctor. The entire staff have now been placed under arrest, and the hospital is closed. The police investigation is now proceeding, on the conclusion of which a special judicial commission will probably be sent from St. Petersburg to deal with the matter. Open threats of lynching are made.

FATHER OF "WIRELESS"

A Welshman of whom the Principality has every reason to feel proud, Sir William Preece, the famous electrician who recently left England for Cape Town, may rightly claim to be the father of wireless telegraphy. As long ago as 1875, the year Mr. Marconi was born, Sir William succeeded in telegraphing across the Solent when the cable to the Isle of Wight was broken. At that time Sir William was electrical engineer to the Post Office, and afterwards placed all the resources of the Post Office at Mr. Marconi's disposal, and gave him every possible aid in his experiments. Sir William was the first man to speak to Queen Victoria through a telephone, and he was, too, who introduced the phonograph to the Royal Society. On that occasion one well-known ecclesiastic present turned to a friend and said loudly, "I emphatically say it is disgraceful that the Royal Society should allow ventriloquists here."

I think Warner's Safe Cure a wonderful medicine, and will always recommend it."—E. A. Lindsey, 716 Walnut St., Muncie, Ind.

Of all the ills humanity is heir to, nothing is more to be feared than those caused by diseased kidneys, because such ailments invariably come on so stealthily that you are seldom aware of their presence until they have actually spread dangerous disease throughout the system.

If you rise in the morning with dull, aching pains at the bottom of your back, and feeling as though your night's rest has not refreshed you; if you are weak, depressed, nervous, irritable; if your head aches, spots appear before your eyes or noises ring in your ears; if your appetite is poor, your thirst excessive, your urine scanty and your complexion sallow; if you have indigestion, biliousness, rheumatic pains and have lost flesh; if you have any of these symptoms you may be sure kidney poisons exist in your blood, and you cannot possibly get well until they are removed.

Nothing else can do so much good, nothing can cure you half so quick as Warner's Safe Cure. It has a steady yet persistent restoring action on the kidneys and brings perceptible relief almost immediately. It is made from the fresh juices of plants and medicinal roots gathered at the proper season in various quarters of the globe. Men skilled in pharmacy and chemistry compound it. It is pleasant to the taste and agreeable to the most sensitive stomach. It is put up in 5c and 15c sizes and sold by all druggists.

Constipation and Biliousness. WARNER'S SAFE PILLS for Constipation and Biliousness, purely vegetable, sugar-coated, absolutely free from injurious substances, are a perfect laxative. They do not gripe or leave any bad after effects. 25c a package.
