It is doubtful if ever in the annals of Queen's courts a more just justice was meted out than that contained in the decision handed down Thursday night by Chief Justice Jull, the supreme dignitary of the Arts Concursus virtutis et iniquitatis. The six students appearing before the court were arranged on charges decidedly unbecoming to university men. Every consideration was shown the prisoners, and there was no attempt to intimidate on the part of those in and thority. Several elected to be tried by judge, while some of the cases were heard by a jury, N. MacDonaid, assisted Chief Justice Jull. The prosecution was ably conducted by Messra. Tulley and Seely. R. MacKinnon act-ed in the capacity of court crier, and William Garvock as clerk of the court.
