NEWS OF NEIGHBORS

WHAT WHIG CORRESPONDENTS TELL US.

The Tidings From Various Points in Eastern Ontario—What People Are Doing and What They Are Saying.

Wedded at Tamworth. Tamworth, March 3.—A pretty wedding took place, on Wednesday, March 3rd, at 9.30 a.m., at the home of James Rogers, of Sheffield, when Wilson Weighill, of Manitoba, and Miss Margaret Rogers, daughter of James Rogers, were married, by Rev. J. K. Henry, James Rogers was best man and Miss Belle Haggarty was bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Weighill intend going to his home in the west Monday or Tuesday next.

News From Glenburnie. Glenburnie, March 3.—A number from here intend to see the Frontenac-Orillia game next Monday evening, in the city. K. Spooner will soon leave for the west. On Monday evening last, the home of Reid Bros, was taken by surprise. The merry-makers spent the evening in cards and dancing. The sugar-makers are getting rather uneasy just now, and will be in readiness by the time the weather man and "reciprocity" get around. Thomas Murray has been ill for the past few days, but is recovering. The rink managers are busy counting up the remaining skating days, although the ice is still holding out. Local hockey fans will have another chance of seeing the Ramblers in action, when they meet the speedy Beavers, of the Bath Road, at the Palace rink next Thursday afternoon. "Denny" Lavell will accompany the local team. The "kids" never go on the ice, unless the genial trainer is along.

Verona Varieties. Verona, Feb. 27.—Miss Nellie E. McCarter left, Monday, for Toronto, where she will enter the general hospital as nurse-in-training. Mrs. Andrew Graham is quite ill with pneumonia. W. D. Percy is doing a good trade in his general store. Miss Edith York has returned from a week's visit at Kingston. Postmaster James Craig is recovering from his recent illness.

Harvey Snider has moved back on the Snyder Road and Mrs. Robert Craig, Godfrey, has moved in the house vacated by Mr. Snider. Lewis Vanest has moved in the house vacated by John Keates. The memorial windows have arrived for the new Methodist church. Robert Hamilton, seriously ill with pneumonia, is slightly better today. Verona hockey team went to Murray and played the team there. The result was in Verona's favor.

Hockey at Battersea. Battersea, March 1.—A friendly game of hockey was played on the King Edward rink, Wednesday, between Ellisville and the Battersea boys. The score was 3 to 2 in favor of the local team.

H. Moore, referee. Miss Eva Angrove and N. Martin, of Kingston, were visiting at the Granite House on Sunday. The many friends of G. Matthews are pleased to hear that his health is improving. The members of the Ladies' Aid society met at the home of Mrs. William Holder this week.

The Splash of Our Own Sir James. Hamilton Herald. Sir James Whitney has undertaken to deny reciprocity, and he has done so with a headstrong and energy which put to shame the more timid critics who bestow a qualified blame. The blue ruin which Sir James predicts as the certain result of reciprocity is the real thing. It is blue-black ruin—total eclipse. "Our transportation facilities," Sir James cables to a London paper, "will be fatally injured. The aspirations of Canadians for imperial and national unity will be throttled. The last question will be settled forever. Our interprovincial trade will be ruined and the progress and growth of our great cities stopped. The orange will be sucked dry and only the skin left with us."

What a picture of woe and desolation, painted with a brush dipped in the gloom of eclipse! Does it not affront? Does not one shudder at this pitiable spectacle of a ruined paradise? If you don't shudder at it and refuse to get scared, you do a grave injustice to Sir James, who took all the trouble of composing his word-picture in order to accomplish that very purpose.

Meanwhile let us hope that our picturesque premier's rhetorical effort will not have the effect of discouraging English capitalists who had been preparing to invest money in this country.

The Arms of Wales. An official communique has been issued that at the court at Buckingham palace, at which the king was present, in council, the committee of the privy council appointed last July nineteen to consider petitions from Wales asking that his majesty would be pleased to order that the Red Dragon of Wales be introduced into the royal standard and the coat of arms of the United Kingdom, presented their report.

That it would not be expedient for your majesty to comply therewith, by their lordships are at the same time of opinion that if it appears fitting to your majesty that the arms of Wales, videlicet quarterly or and gules, sur lions passant guardant counterchanged, should again be brought into use, your majesty might very properly be advised to include them in some form in the arms of the Prince of Wales.

His majesty, having taken the said report into consideration, was pleased, by and with the advice of his privy council, to approve thereof.

Don't bank too much upon your opinions, for other people may have better ones.

ATTEMPT ON JACKSON'S LIFE.

Old Letter Tells How He Narrowly Escaped Assassination.

New York Times. How narrowly Andrew Jackson, while president of the United States, escaped death by assassination, is told in an important letter of John Tyler, which sold for $43 at auction in Philadelphia recently. The letter is dated Washington, Jan. 31st, 1835, and is addressed to Tyler's son, Robert Tyler. John Tyler at this time was United States senator. In this letter he says:

"My object in writing to you was to give you an account of an occurrence which transpired yesterday, and to ask that you will walk down to Judge Semples and inform him of the facts. Warren R. Davis died two nights ago, and yesterday the funeral ceremonies were performed in the House of Representatives. The members of both houses were present and the president of the United States, with the members of his cabinet. The procession moved from the hall, through the rotunda to the east porch of the capitol. The house first, senate second, followed by the president, etc. I was unwell, and concluded not to go to the grave, and after getting to the porch I stepped out of the line of the procession to the right.

"I had been standing there more than a minute when I heard an explosion, similar to that produced by an ordinary cracker, which caused me to turn around, when I perceived a man, standing in front of the president, about four steps off, with a pocket pistol pointed at the president.

"The report immediately followed of the same character with that I had a moment before heard. The president immediately raised his cane and made at him, but before he could strike the fellow was seized and thrown down, the president still pressing on him, and when preparing to stick his cane into him was drawn off.

"The fellow was immediately transferred to the civil authorities, and now lies in jail to abide his trial on a future day. It seems that he had two pistols, each of which he attempted to discharge, but they were with percussion caps, the day was very damp, a thick mist prevailing, and although the caps by their explosion must have been as fine as were ever used, the powder did not ignite. They were found to be well loaded with the finest powder, and 'tis almost a miracle that they did not go off. The man is said to be an Englishman by birth, to have been in this city some three years, to be a printer by trade, and to have given on more occasion than one, evidence of derangement. He was asked, I learned by Mr. Randolph, the sergeant-at-arms to the house, what led him to attempt the life of the president. He replied because he killed my father three years ago." There is nothing but madness in all this.

$10,000 FOR A VIOLIN.

Haddock Fiddles, Finest Private Collection, to be Sold.

The announcement that the collection of violins which belonged to the late George Haddock, the famous musician, is to be sold, has aroused the keenest interest among dealers and collectors in England. The Haddock fiddles are reputed to be the finest private collection in existence, the gem being the "Emperor Stradivarius," pronounced by Joachim to be the finest violin he had ever seen, and which is stated to be worth £10,000. It is nearly 200 years old, and, notwithstanding its great age, looks as fresh as if it had but yesterday left the hands of Antonio Stradivari, the famed violin maker, of Cremona.

This is a somewhat exceptional value to be placed on a violin, the price of each of the 600 Strads which are known to be in existence ranging from £500 to £1,500. Perhaps the only violin which can be compared with the "Emperor Stradivarius" of the Haddock collection is the one which Paganini left to the city of Genoa, for which as much as £10,000 has been offered. The Strad presented to the late Dr. Joachim on the occasion of his jubilee cost £1,200, while that presented to Lady Hall by the Duke of Edinburgh, the late Earl of Dudley, and the late Lord Hardwicke cost £1,000.

When Sarasate's will was proved two years ago it was found that he had bequeathed £4,000 and a Strad each to the conservatories of Paris and Madrid, the money being for the purpose of founding prizes bearing his name. Each of the violins were valued at about $2,000, one of the instruments having been discovered in a very romantic manner. At one time it was the property of a Geneva blacksmith, to whom it had been given by a traveller who could not pay for the shoeing of his horse. For years it hung on the wall of the blacksmith's house, until after many years another horseman, M. Boissier, who was also a violinist and a collector of violins, came along. The blacksmith asked M. Boissier to buy the violin from him at his own price, or else to find him a purchaser. M. Boissier carried it away, cleaned off the smoke, discovered the Strad mark—and did not defraud the blacksmith.

The story reminds one that the favorite violin of M. Eugene Ysaie, a magnificent Strad, valued at £3,000, which was stolen from his dressing room three years ago while in St. Petersburg—is said to have changed hands at one period for 35s.—being sold at the price by an unknown traveller to a waiter in a railway restaurant in a small Moravian town.

Twice at least £2,000 has been paid by private treaty for Strads, and £1,400 was paid for a "Betts Strad," the title which it gained from the following incident: Betts was a music seller in London some sixty years ago, one day a stranger entered his shop, offering a violin for sale at the low sum of one guinea. The dealer at once jumped at the bargain, put down his guinea and secured the instrument. He retained it in his family for a number of years, and, after changing hands several times, it was bought at the figure named for a foreign nobleman.

Five years ago £700 was paid for a Strad which for years was played upon by a strolling musician in the Notting Hill and Marylebone districts of London, while some time ago £1,200 was paid for a fiddle which, had previously been knocked down at an auction sale to a laborer for 6s. Fortunately for him, the laborer knew something of the value of fiddles, and a few days later sold his treasure to a dealer in curios for £600. Ultimately the latter sold it for £1,600—truly a record bargain.

Concerning Dogs.

Canadian Century. A Montreal teacher recently asked her class of little girls to write a composition on the dog. Here are a few of the gems gleaned from among the bundle of stories submitted:

"A dog is a kindly disposed quadruped. He is found in Asia, Africa and all parts of America. He loves mankind and loathes insects."

"A dog swallows his food without chewing, which goes to show that he belongs to a preantidiluvian area."

"A dog is a kind creature to children and goes out of his way to harm no one—except when she has puppies or is gone mad."

"Bulldogs are terrible fighters and fight all the time they are not eating and sleeping or otherwise doing no harm. They have big heads and massive jaws, but are in no way related to the whale."

"A dog is man's most intimate friend."

"A dog eats meat and bread and bones. A dog roars, howls, when he is hungry, because he does not run straight when he runs. He runs when he is not standing up still, sitting, walking or lying down."

"Dogs are taught to kill cats. They catch the creature behind the head and kill them instantly and quickly."

"There are many varieties of dogs, as well as poodles and other kinds much devoted upon by the ladies."

His Poor Memory.

New York Times. A Brooklyn minister was recently approached on the street by a young woman who inquired whether he were not the Rev. Dr. Blank. "Yes," said the minister, who seemed at a loss to identify the young person.

"Don't you remember me?" asked the girl, laughingly.

"I'm afraid I do not," said the good man, apologetically. "Will you not give me just a little hint?"

"Well," continued the young woman, "I certainly think that you ought to remember me, even if it has been so long a time. Why, Dr. Blank, you baptized me here in Brooklyn, just before my parents moved west. You don't mean to say that you've forgotten me entirely?"

Wise. It was to be the first sleigh ride of the season.

"What are these?" asked the pretty girl as she picked up two muskella objects from the seat of the sleigh.

"Ear muffs," elucidated the young man. "I want you to wear them."

"No, let the chaperone wear them. And as the sleigh sped over the moonlit road, the old lady wondered why she could not hear he well as usual."
