WHY RECIPROCIETY WOULD BE A BENEFIT

To the Farming Community—He Reveals the Benefits of the Old Reciprocity Treaty With United States.

Kingston, April 12.—(To the Editor.) Important as the subject of reciprocal trade relations with the United States is, your readers must be wearied reading the pros and cons dealing with the subject. But the opponents of the scheme seem to realize that they have a losing game, and are using all manner of means and arguments to defeat it. First a position of the press is strongly against it, notably the Montreal Star and the Toronto Mail-Empire. Both of these papers in the years 1880 to 1894 were out on the independent ticket and had column after column of editorials in support of the patron platform, a power for good in the land at the time, and which advocated tariff for revenue only, and pleaded with the farmers to stand by these principles, and these papers gave in full the speeches of prominent statesmen of the day, such as Dalton McCarthy, Senator Bolton and men of independent thought, who took country before party every time. Why the change of front?

I have good reasons to feel it was not a patriotic spirit that actuated them, but more of a personal matter, and also something heavier than air that had its influence with them. Second, why is the conservative party so much against it now when all the time it was in power, (eighteen years), it was strongly in favor of it and made repeated applications to the United States government seeking a renewal of the treaty in natural products?

In 1894 Sir John A. Macdonald and later Sir Charles Tupper, when premier of the dominion, also sought a renewal of the reciprocity treaty and offered special privileges in our fishing grounds as an inducement. Thirdly, why are the great and powerful financial interests of this country so allied and bitterly opposed to this movement so directly in their interests?

The farmers for generations have toiled, economized and endured privations to produce the wherewithal to build up those powerful organizations of finance. It is the height of ingratitude to the present generation of farmers that these very powers should now furnish the means to buy up a portion of the press and furnish campaign funds to defeat this most desirable movement in our interests.

Many of us can remember the favorable results of the treaty of the eighteen and sixties, and the regrets expressed at its termination, and the general depression for some years, and the natural wish for its renewal. But some exclaim, circumstances are different now. Truly they are, but

GRAND OPELA HOUSE.

To-night "Polly of the Circus" Will Appear.

The mystic world of red wagons and their contents are told in Frederic Thompson's production of "Polly of the Circus," which comes to the Grand to-night. A pretty love story is woven into Margaret Ross's story of a minister, a bedroom above the study, the rear garden of the parsonage, the interior of the big tent and the circus lot after the performance. The story tells of the love of Polly, the pet of the circus, who, having suffered a severe injury in a fall from her horse, is carried into the parsonage adjoining into whose heart she has been carried as well. It is a deliciously interesting tale and beautifully conceived. Mr. Thompson has provided a very strong cast and a magnificent stage investiture.

"At Cripple Creek"

In E. J. Carpenter's production "At Cripple Creek" which comes to the Grand on Friday and Saturday, April 14th and 15th, with a matinee on Saturday afternoon, interest of the most absorbing nature centres in the four acts. The first act shows the interior of Martin Mason's den, known as the Temple of David. The second shows the exterior of Joe Mayfield's cabin at Rift Canyon; the third shows the depths of the Last Dollar mine and the last act occurs in Joe Mayfield's new home upon the day of his marriage to Belle Gordon. The comedy element has not been neglected in "At Cripple Creek" and spectators of it will be treated to a graphic and true-to-nature glimpse of life in the mining region of Colorado during the eighties.

Margaret Anglin Coming.

There are to be no more tears for Margaret Anglin, at all events on the stage. This clever actress, under the direction of Messrs. Lieber & Co., is due at the Grand on Wednesday, April 12th, in a new and original comedy of modern life, bearing the happily chosen title of "Green Stockings." It will be a great pleasure to welcome Miss Anglin in a comedy role as we are told is the case. The play provides her with many opportunities for delicate and delightful comedy work and she is assured of a cordial welcome. Her leading man is Reeves Smith. Other members of the large cast are Maude Strangor, Ruth Rose, Ruth Holt, Roucault and George Woodward.

Clifford Sifton and Brockville.

Canadian Banner. Another of those unreliable rumors sent out by the Toronto News has it that Hon. Clifford Sifton will oppose Hon. George F. Graham in Brockville at the next general elections. Hon. Sifton, while on the other hand, Mr. Graham has been always with them, and like his lamented predecessor, Hon. C. F. Fraser, has brought honor to the town as leader of the opposition in the Ontario house and minister of railways and canals in the federal arena. And if such a contest were really in view, the chances are that one of the candidates would lose his deposit and the loser would be Hon. George F. Graham. Western papers say Mr. Sifton does not represent the views of the west and he certainly cannot now claim the east as his future stamping ground. The chances are he will be only a looker-on.

Fictitious Senator Ramp.

Toronto Star. The Toronto Weekly Sun received a letter from a reader in Brant county, enclosing a clipping from the Brantford Courier, it purported to be a speech by a Senator Ramp of the United States, advocating the annexation of Canada. The Sun made inquiry at Washington, and found there was no Senator Ramp. Explanations are asked for. A few days ago a Star man heard that a conservative was greatly excited about this Senator Ramp. The speech, we think, originally appeared in the Toronto News. It was probably a "josh," intended to satirize Champ Clark. But a good many people took it seriously. The fact is that some of the arguments against reciprocity are so wildly extravagant that it is impossible for a humorist to exaggerate them. The reader cannot distinguish between the arguments and the jokes. Senator Ramp is a fictitious character. But he is not out of place in the anti-reciprocity literature, which is a library of fiction.

GOING TO WINNIPEG.

A Former Kingstonian Leaves Ottawa Soon.

The A. E. Rea company, Ottawa, is about to lose the services of W. E. Aida, formerly of Kingston, who will leave, this week, for Winnipeg, where he will accept a position as general manager in one of the large department stores of that city. Mr. Aida's kindly disposition and genial ways had won for him a firm place in the hearts of his fellow-employees, and three hundred assembled in the basement and presented him with a gold watch, locket and chain. The presentation was made by Miss J. Jefferys, and an address read. A list of three hundred names was attached to the address, including those of the fourteen managers, and A. E. Rea.

Suspected Suicide Said He Was Going to Drown Himself.

Toronto, April 13.—Pinned to a bridge at Centre Island with a jack knife, a note was found by James Robertson, saying: "I am going to drown myself. Walk three paces to the east and you will find something." J. C. Eganeworth, who is working at the R.F.Y.C., found the note and searched for the something. He found a silver match safe with a note inside written in shorthand, and another note saying: "Take this to my wife at thirty-eight Mutual street." There is no such address in Toronto and nobody on Mutual street knows any one of that name. The police are investigating.

Advantages of Model Schools.

London Advertiser. But the increased expense, large as that is, does not discredit the administration as much as the dissatisfaction with and the inefficiency of the results. The third session ago, Valentin Stock, in an able speech in the house, pointed out the decided superiority of the combined model and normal system over the new undivided single term. He showed that the young teachers got their start under conditions that gave them acquaintance and sympathy with the schools where they were to begin their work. Further, the limited number of students at each place, and the more intimate acquaintance of the model school work than that possessed by the high school teachers, who were put in charge of the normal schools, were highly advantageous to the beginners. And, lastly, the convenient, short-termed model school laid no serious financial burden on the poor man's child—the class from which many of the best and most ambitious teachers came, but which under the Pyne-Smith system, is practically excluded by the expenses of attending a year at the city normal.

A Tribute to Mr. Ross.

Hamilton Times. It is pleasant to find J. L. Englehart, chairman of the T. & N.O. Railway Commission, telling the people that "we have in Northern Ontario, twenty millions of acres of uncultivated agricultural land as good as is that of the western prairie, or, for that matter, anywhere upon the continent." That is the great territory explored and opened by Ross, and to develop which he inaugurated his Northern Ontario policy, of which this railway is a part. When Ross laid down that policy Whitney and his followers bitterly assailed him, and it was made one of the causes of his defeat. But it gave us Cobalt and its riches; and the "Great Clay Belt," for exploiting which Ross was so much ridiculed, is now the pride and hope of the province. Mr. Englehart is even more impressed by the agricultural possibilities of the provincial north country than by its mineral richness.

All is Great Uncertainty.

Montreal Star. The Sifton wing, if we can judge by the speeches he and his friends made at Montreal, are out not merely to criticize, but to kill. The parliamentary opposition sometimes look as if they wanted to go the whole length, other times as if they were afraid to. The flare-up in the party organization can at least be taken to mean that they are not united about how hard to fight the common enemy; if they were it would never enter into their heads to start fighting among themselves.
