NAVIGATION IS OPEN

WOLFE ISLANDER CROSSES THE HARBOR.

Reached the City From Island Thursday Afternoon—Dates on Which Navigation Opened in Previous Years.

Kingston harbor was opened for navigation on Thursday afternoon, so far as the islands are concerned. The steamer Wolfe Islander managed to get across from Garden Island to the city, being about two hours in breaking a passage through the ice, which was fairly heavy. The Islander left Garden Island about 1.15 o'clock and was close to Swift's wharf at three o'clock. On Wednesday evening, she and a tug of the Calvin company broke ice around the front of the island. It was thought that the harbor would remain icebound till Saturday at least. The opening of the harbor means a great deal to the city and the islands at this time. It is likely that the steamer Pierpont will reach Cape Vincent by Saturday afternoon.

The ice was a foot thick in most places, while in other places it was nine inches," said the captain, when seen. "We had a hard trip. It took us about two hours to come from Garden Island. The only way we could make headway was to back up, and charge the mass. This would break it sufficiently for us to go ahead a few yards, and then repeat the process."

Navigation in Kingston harbor for the past fifteen years was opened as follows:

1911	April 13th
1910	March 21th
1909	April 6th
1908	April 6th
1907	March 28th
1906	April 4th
1905	April 10th
1904	April 11th
1903	March 14th
1902	March 24th
1901	April 8th
1900	April 9th
1899	April 10th
1898	March 13th
1897	April 1st
1896	April 14th

It is thus fifteen years ago since navigation here opened as late as April 13th.

MARRIED AT WESTBROOK.

Percival Wright and Miss Salome Rose.

The marriage of Percival Wright, son of the late George A. Wright, to Miss Salome Rose, only daughter of Philander Ross, was solemnized on Wednesday morning, April 12th, at Westbrooke. Rev. T. Crighton, Casady officiated. While Miss Florence Smith played Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus, the couple took their stand under an arch, unattended. The bride was given away by her father. Little Florence Alkenbreack, dressed in pink silk, was flower girl, carrying the ring in a lily. The bride's dress was white silk, with pearl trimmings. She wore her mother's bridal veil and carried white carnations. Her going-away gown was navy blue cloth and tuscany hat. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold chain, to the flower girl a gold bracelet, and to the pianist a pearl crescent. Many beautiful and valuable presents testified to the place of the young people held in the esteem of the many friends. After the ceremony forty-six guests sat down to dinner and later Mr. and Mrs. Wright left for a trip. Mrs. Wright will be at home in Westbrooke after May 15th.

AID OF CHILDREN

CASES BEFORE THE LOCAL SOCIETY.

J. C. McConachie, the Agent, Reports on the Month's Work—Help of the Citizens Asked.

The monthly meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held on Wednesday afternoon in the police court. Most of time was occupied in hearing and discussing the monthly and interesting report of the agent, J. C. McConachie, which was given with considerable minuteness of detail. Clear pictures of the evil conditions under which many young children are compelled to live in this city were set before the society and deep interest was evinced by all. The agent reported that he had made visits in connection with the cases reported; had dealt with children, had given warnings to fathers and mothers which were given with considerable minuteness of detail. Clear pictures of the evil conditions under which many young children are compelled to live in this city were set before the society and deep interest was evinced by all. The agent reported that he had made visits in connection with the cases reported; had dealt with children, had given warnings to fathers and mothers which were given with considerable minuteness of detail. Clear pictures of the evil conditions under which many young children are compelled to live in this city were set before the society and deep interest was evinced by all.

Two cases were reported to the society of poor widows who have three children each left to their care. To provide for these they must work from seven o'clock in the morning till six at night. The home, from 4.45 a.m. until 8.30 a.m. is in charge of a little girl nine years of age. This child is the sole guardian and teacher of two younger children until she goes to school in the morning and after she returns in the afternoon. During school hours the younger children, in one case, are in the kindergarten, which takes them for half a day only, and during the other half day they are cared for by a neighbor till the sister returns from school. Fires must be kept going in the home all the time and in the short days the child of nine must attend to the lamps. It need not be mentioned that this is fraught with serious dangers to all the children, as well as to the property round about, not to mention the fact that the important years for character-forming are being lost for all the children. Imagine an unlearned child of nine training your children during their life-making their character and determining what they shall be as men.

The society is much concerned, as all good citizens ought to be, over just such cases as these. These mothers love their children and surely constitute the best influence that can be thrown around them during these tender years when they so much need a mother's love. These good mothers are giving their lives for their children, and if they were helped over a very few years at this stage, would surely succeed in giving to the state good boys and girls, who would be splendid citizens. The means suggested to aid such mothers was a creche or day nursery. This requires the use of a suitable house with good-sized lot for a garden. A house of this kind is a very desirable one to pay for as a guardian. Perhaps some good philanthropist will furnish the house and we are sure that the many will supply the money for so good a cause. If you are interested in this or know of similar cases, kindly communicate with the agent without delay.

Another requirement of the society, and a very pressing one, is a suitable, well-ventilated shelter. Children up to a certain age can be placed, temporarily in the Orphan's Home, but some of the most serious cases are too old to be admitted to that institution; still they must be sheltered somewhere until they can be placed out in good homes. The society has, at present, several children of this class who ought to be removed from their homes at once, but as it has no such shelter it is compelled to leave them until some arrangement can be made. It is very desirable that a large number of our good business men should attend the meetings of the society and aid us with their counsel in these weighty matters.

The agent writes: The Children's Aid Society is one of the most important works in the city. It ought to be the big thing and it merits the support and advice of the best and wisest of our citizens. The presence of citizens at the society's meetings will be heartily welcomed. Charities will scarcely begin to end in the giving of money. Children need homes and love besides food and clothes. There is money enough wasted in Kingston to provide a shelter for all the children who are being wasted and lost for want of it. This is the very great social problem and it is the very great social problem. If the city would save money on adult machinery let it spend more here. Provide us with a shelter and provide it soon.

WHAT COUNCIL DID

FOR CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE LAST YEAR.

William McFridge Tells How Aid, Kent and the City Engineer Fixed up the Cricket Field Diamond.

William McFridge, ex-president of the city baseball league, writes: Will you kindly give me space to correct a statement in the sporting column of last evening's issue in regard to the donation of forty dollars by last year's council for the improvement of the cricket field baseball diamond, the writer stating this amount was used to buy twenty loads of earth which was dumped on the grounds and left there, which would lead the public to believe that was all the council did. That is far from clean sport, which is not all played on the diamond, or in the field. I wish to state what the council did do. It left the matter to Ald. R. E. Kent, as chairman of parks, and City Engineer Craig to look after. When I heard the council had so generously granted us forty dollars I went to see Ald. Kent, who received me in a most gentlemanly way, saying he would do the best he could do level as it was possible to do. They had two men level it off as it was brought on, and put enough of that on to make the diamond one hundred and twenty feet square, as we asked for. When this was done he sent to the penitentiary, where, for a reasonable distance, and told the engineer to do the best he could for us with the money. Mr. Craig not only had them dump the scrapings, but had two men level it off as it was brought on, and put enough of that on to make the diamond one hundred and twenty feet square, as we asked for. Leader of English Anarchists.

The leader of the anarchist movement in the east end, Rudolf Rocker, is what the French call traps, a man in the forties, intelligent and mild-mannered. A German by nationality, his thick black hair and dark eyes, which beam over his spectacles, suggest the Frenchman of an intellectual type. Indeed, he speaks French better than he does English, and in the course of the interview often made use of French and German words the better to express his meaning. He is a bookbinder by trade, and came to London fourteen years ago. He learned after coming here the Yiddish language, in which the anarchist paper is printed.—London Morning Post.
