THE METER RENTALS.

The meter rent is one of the most obnoxious. It is paid reluctantly by the consumers of gas and water. It is not, however, a question of whether the rents are objectionable and the abolition of the rent is a popular movement, but whether it is financially possible. Let the consumers of water and gas and power remember that the rents have helped to make the revenues which have warranted the reductions in rates and before a committee can be expected to remove them it must be demonstrated that the feat is possible.

What the water committee should have done long ago, was to cut out the rents in place of reducing the rates, as rates should be maintained at a standard, so providing adequately for expenses, maintenance, and emergency and sinking funds. The meters should be kept in use as a means of checking the waste of water which would undoubtedly occur.

The meters cannot be abolished from the light and power departments. The rentals can be dropped—when the finances will permit of this. It is very laudable on the part of the mayor to be before committing himself to the proposition in his inaugural address, study the public accounts and ascertain the probable effects of his recommendation? It is when proposals like this are launched, without due consideration, that one sees the wisdom of the commission rule. It is based on business acumen, and cannot be trifled with by any one.

CRIME AND IGNORANCE.

Crime is evidently on the increase in Canada. The law has no terrors for some people. These are the delinquents who are a menace to every community. They are the product of the ignorance which prevails in spite of the education which is so cheaply provided, and the advantage of which should be apparent to every one. The secular education, which is made compulsory to a certain age, must eventually be followed or attended by moral or ethical education. It seems to be the hope of the country.

Mrs. Thorneley caused a shock when she boldly charged immorality in the schools, and immorality in the form of vicious thought, speech, and suggestion. But her contention has been strengthened by the declarations of school teachers who have written guardedly, and to the effect that obscenity is hard to combat, and that the schools should be made the centres of light and religious influence.

The sexual pervert who is under sentence of death at Goderich, a mere youth, is the victim of the vicious thought to which he has given himself, and there will be others lost through a lack of guidance if present conditions continue.

The cure is ethical education, or education that will early in life reveal to young men and women the wisdom of personal purity, yes, the absolute necessity for it. The lessons should be simple, direct, and effective. This education must be conducted with discretion; but it must be had if humanity is not to suffer infinitely and indefinitely for gross ignorance upon certain subjects. A recent medical work has so aroused the Whig on this subject that it must speak out, and in no uncertain way.

MR. MACKAY MAKES SORROW.

Strange how differently things are viewed when done by different persons. Sir James Whitney made a great splash in the legislature when he moved a resolution in disapproval of the trade agreement. It was a purely party act, and the Whig has several times declared that it was not becoming to Sir James and the legislature. The local government has quite enough to do to itself, its own business. However, Sir James wanted to swell himself upon this federal issue, and when forced to speak Mr. Mackay, the leader of the opposition, made the speech of the day, and one that put Sir James in the shade, for Sir James is not an orator.

Later Mr. Mackay, as a citizen, and a believer in reciprocity, as one who is fully convinced that it will be an advantage to the farmers of Canada, because it secures them a freedom of trade that must be very profitable, entered upon an educational campaign in Ontario. His tour is yet in progress. It is being attended with the best results. The idea is to discuss at certain agricultural centres, the question of the day, for the more the electors know about it the sure they are to give it their endorsement.

But here is the point. It is all right for Sir James Whitney, pompously, to denounce reciprocity in the legislature, but it is all wrong for Mr. Mackay to discuss it outside of the house. "On the whole," says the Mail, "it would have been better if Mr. Mackay had eschewed domestic politics and by devoting himself energetically and exclusively to the affairs of the province." One can hardly conceive of such nonsense being talked by the leading Tory organ in this province. Mr. Mackay should devote himself exclusively to the business of the province. Why? Because then he would be serving the cause he opposes, the cause of the federal opposition, the cause that has been discredited by the inconsistent and unwholesome conduct of the men who have opposed it.

Mr. Mackay has offended the Mail by his performances, but our temporary finds something in which to console itself. It is said he may go to Ottawa, as a member of the government, as successor to Sir Allen Aylesworth—the report is evidently erroneous—and then it will be found that he has done great damage, and "a rally of the forces will be impossible." Mr. Mackay is not worrying on this account. He is feeling the pulses of the people on the trade agreement, and he has had no evidence that his mission is a mistake. The Mail is easily consoled. The slightest fiction gratifies it.

THE REAL CIVIC SPIRIT.

Ottawa's health department has been examined by the officers of the provincial government, and it has been discovered—so runs the rumour—that the sufferings of the people from typhoid and kindred diseases are the result of bad sanitary conditions. What is more, and most regrettable, is the fact that Ottawa has been injured temporarily, in these matters, by the refusal of the council to act upon the advice of its officials. The city has one of the best engineers in the country. It appreciates his ability to the extent of paying him well. But it is moved to accept or reject his counsel as the humour moves it.

And yet this council, with all its faults, manifests the civic spirit which makes for progress, the civic spirit which is so much wanted in Kingston. That spirit is not an invisible and uncertain quantity as some people imagine. It is real, and powerful and persuasive. There was some evidence of it in the local press when, last year, there was the demand for better streets, resulting in the change of tactics on the part of the council and the decision eventually to pave certain blocks. The same spirit has exerted an influence again and again, in projecting public movements. Usually it has emanated in the board of trade and among the business men. Sometimes it has failed when schemes for the betterment of the city have been dropped too soon.

Ottawa is not booming simply because the seat of parliament is there. That means something in the way of public business and the accommodation which it requires. The city is growing, because there is an active, energetic, dominant spirit at work, and it is showing itself in various directions. Here are some of the things under consideration, as set forth in the Free Press: "New sewer system, new pavements, street railway extension, Bank street high level bridge over the canal, waterworks extensions, driveway extensions, post office plaza construction, new departmental block, senate wing extension, new printing bureau, Sandy Hill cemeteries transformation."

And what of Welland, that little town on the canal, which two years ago had a population of 2,000 and has now one of over 7,000? What sent it ahead? Cheap power, some one answers. To some extent, and to a limited extent. Natural gas, as a fuel, as the basis of a low motive power, and electricity, have done a great deal. They are inducements of the highest value, and cheap power is one of the things that will make Kingston grow, if it has behind it the civic spirit the Whig has frequently talked about. The Seymour offer of $25 per horse-power, for twenty-four hours each day, is about as good as anything any municipality can offer, and with land galore, and good railway connections, there should be room for industrial enterprises of the most promising character. The civic spirit in several places has caused the purchase of large plots of land. This land is held for manufacturing sites, and the advantage of it is being properly advertised.

In all Ontario there is not a city more beautifully located than Kingston. What is the matter with it that the growth is so slow, that the capital is not pouring in and finding investment in various industries? There is something amiss, and it is time the doctor was called for his diagnosis. "Altogether," says an article with reference to Welland, "with power, transportation and enthusiasm, this is going to be the coming town of the fruit garden peninsula." That is the way to talk. There is the sentiment with the ring of success.

Coming to Their Own.
The teachers of Ontario have been organized for fifty years, and are now setting about celebrating the fact. It took about forty-five of these years to impress the people of Ontario with a proper sense of their value, but the job has at last been fairly well done.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The demand is made on the legislature of New York that the anti-gambling law be repealed. Thus the good work of Governor Hughes is being attacked and may presently be undone.

According to a recent calculation one woman in New York in every ten smokes cigarettes. The consumption in that city last year was 35,000,000. And one wonders at the degeneracy of the rising generation.

Banquets, banquets, everywhere. Nothing can be essayed or undertaken nowadays unless it is attended by a feast. What is the meaning of all this? Is the intellect or heart of the individual reached only through his stomach?

Anyone who reads on the outer walls at any of the schools, the things written thereon by some of the pupils can have no doubt about the need of moral instruction. Goodness only knows where some of these thoughts originate.

As the Weekly Sun sees it, one has only to travel across the great Northwest to have his ideas of tariff completely changed. The awakening of Mr. Borden will come late then. It is a pity he had not seen the vision before the session of 1911.

It was a happy idea of Mr. Bradshaw, the actuary, that the government should from the public treasury make up the sum which is needed to make a teachers' supernumeration scheme possible. It remains to be seen whether the government appreciates the suggestion enough to act upon it.

How can any teacher object to the study of the Bible as a text book? It is represented as possessing the best of literature, and literature which all scholarly people study. Why a teacher should want to continue the present method of reading a few verses, in a timid sort of way, without comment, is something which no one can understand.

W. H. Bunting, on behalf of the Niagara canners, explains that contracts will not be made for tomatoes at 27c, a bushel in anticipation of any contingency from the trade agreement. The canners are not fools. They would not raise their prices from 25c. to 27c. per bushel if they thought the Americans would deluge the market and sell them tomatoes at a lower price.

What We Sold.

Figures given by Hon. Mr. Paterson in the House of Commons are worth a volume of argument as to the value of the United States market for Canadian farm products.

In the face of a duty of 30c. per bushel, $66,608 worth of Canadian barley was shipped to the United States in the year ending March 31st; despite a duty of 25c. per bushel, $132,510 worth of Canadian apples were sold in the same market, $148,576 worth of berries climbed over a tariff wall represented by one cent per quart; $199,854 worth of Canadian butter paid a tax of 6c. per pound in order to find sale in the United States; we sold $369,679 in sheep and lambs notwithstanding the fact that the tax on the former was $1.50, and on the latter 75c. per head, and, finally, $1,714,528 worth of Canadian cream went into the United States and paid a duty of five cents per gallon in doing so.

If we sold so largely, in the face of such high duties, it needs no argument to show that we would sell much more largely with the duties wholly abolished.

"To Switzerland, Diogenes."

A traveller writing in an Italian magazine, says that the Swiss canton of Ticino is inhabited by the most honest folk in a possible to imagine. In most of the Ticinese villages, the writer says, the oldest inhabitants do not remember any case of thieving, however petty, within a lifetime. Lost objects when found must never be taken away; they must be left where they were dropped or placed in a conspicuous position so that the rightful owner can find his property very easily. The case is cited of an American woman tourist who lost her purse on an excursion in the Val Calprias. The purse contained gold coin and a jewelled watch. Upon returning from her trip she found the purse with contents intact on a little heap of leaves, so placed that it could not fail to attract her attention.

Cannot be an Appeal.

It is said that no appeal can be brought against the decision of the Quebec courts that the marriage of Roman Catholics by an ecclesiastic of any other faith is illegal, because in the particular case that has directed attention to the finding, neither party will consent to act as plaintiff. In fact it seems to be a case in which the parties concerned saw fit to take advantage of the law in order to separate, and dissolve the marriage tie by mutual consent. This only makes the condition worse, and causes the question to become still more involved. Under the present decision, any unprincipled person who may happen to come under the finding may desert his wife and family and take advantage of that amounts to a release from his marital responsibility.

TILL THE MORGUE OFFICIALS ARRIVED.

Lack of the Price of a Warrant on the Part of a Wife Resulted in Suicide of Her Husband.
Montreal, April 21.—While her husband was deliberately building a trap and arranging a noose to hang himself, Mrs. Joseph Bourdon, in wild alarm, went to the Recorder's Court office Tuesday, and asked officials to intervene, to arrest him, or do anything to save his life.

She did not have $3 for a warrant, so the officials after due deliberation sent the man a letter asking him to explain his conduct. That was the best thing they could think of.
At 5 a.m., yesterday, Joseph Bourdon was found hanging to the noose and quite dead. Many hours after Joseph Bourdon had tightened the noose about his neck, a bailiff leisurely approached the house, at 1119e Papineau avenue with the official documents, asking Joseph Bourdon to explain his conduct. His fearful widow had to explain that Joseph Bourdon was dead, long dead.

Another unexplainable fact was the failure to cut down the man's body or try to restore animation. Neither the neighbors nor the police attempted to cut down the body until the morgue officials arrived and found a group of helpless people surrounding the dangling corpse.

RELIC OF SPANISH WAR.

Ann Arbor Has Engine Taken From One of Cervera's Ships.

An interesting piece of machinery in the engineering department of the university is a relic of the Spanish-American war. It is a triple expansion steam cutter engine which was recovered from the wreck of the Almeranta Oquendo, one of the fleet of General Cervera and one of the ships sunk by the United States fleet at the battle of Santiago in 1898. It is fitted with a link motion valve gear and was something that had long been desired in the university equipment.

The machinery came in possession of Frank Kirby, of Detroit, and he in turn presented it to the university. The engine is apparently of Scotch or English design and the working of it is a marvel of marine engineering beauty. The boat from which the engine was taken was one of the steam cutters of the fleet plying between the shore and the boats and was about thirty feet long. The engine is battle scarred but its working qualities are not injured.

No Election in Quebec.

Sir Lomer Gouin, before he started on his transatlantic trip, announced that before there would be a general election in this province there would be one, if not two, sessions of the legislature, and that before dissolution there will be a redistribution of the constituencies. This is interesting in more, perhaps, than a provincial way. There is not reason why the legislature should be dissolved before at least a fourth session is held and action is taken on the knowledge as to the distribution of population to equalize the representation in the legislative assembly. The idea that an appeal to the people could be made this fall got its start in a belief that Sir Lomer Gouin would consent to test a political feeling in the interest of the Laurier government at Ottawa. Evidently, if there was any foundation for such a belief, Sir Lomer Gouin has changed his position and will let the dominion politicians do their own testing.

What the Farmers Expect.

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier arrived at Winnipeg last summer, at the beginning of his western tour, he was asked that the tariff was all right. Before the premier had completed his tour he was promising a commission to enquire as to whether the tariff really was as satisfactory as he had considered it to be. After the invasion of Ottawa by 800 farmers last December, Sir Wilfrid considered it necessary to call Mr. Fielding back from his holiday to act once more as negotiator for the opening of the American market to Canadian farm products. In view of these facts of recent history we are hardly bound to accept the finance minister's most recent statement as to the finality of the present measure of tariff relief.

The Eternal Smash at Hand.

Ottawa Free Press.
Canada is going to the dogs! There is no doubt about it. Hon. Robert Rogers, the "savior of the country," announces that he is one of the board of advice of the Investment Corporation of Canada, which has been successfully floated in London, England, with a capital of one million pounds. And to add to the climax the Winnipeg director of the Ogilvie Flour Mill company is also one of the advisory Canadian board. What happens, therefore, to the cry that reciprocity spells disaster for the financial interests of Canada?

APOLOGY TO CRONJE.

Old Boer Leader Took Exhibition at Coney Island.

Harper's Weekly.
I never saw old Piet Cronje but once, and I felt then that I owed him an apology for sitting there in a sort of circus at Coney Island, idly gazing with a gaping crowd while he and his old wife and a few other Boers did a hippodroming imitation of their war against the English invader. Fine business for a lot of Americans—making a holiday out of the sufferings of true men who fought the redcoats as well as, or perhaps even better than, our forefathers did!
