GRAND OPERA HOUSE. "The Kissing Girl" Will be Seen Here To-night. "The Kissing Girl," a musical comedy appears at the Grand Opera House to-night. It tells a romantic story of Austria and Bohemia. A company of more than ordinary strength, both in vocal and dramatic values, will interpret the charming story. Miss Texas Guinan, the "kissing girl," is a blithe little body, with a keen sense of comedy. Her numbers are sung with charming naivete, particularly "The Little Band of Gold." Collectively, the principals are immensely talented. These with a chorus of pretty girls and handsome men will bring the ensemble close to sixty people. One of the most popular numbers of "The Kissing Girl" is the sextette for male voices, "Good Old German Beer." "Honeymoon Trail," the merriest and most melodious of all Hough, Adams and Howard musical successes, will be the attraction at the Grand on Thursday, April 27th. It has a Chicago record of 225 consecutive performances at La Salle theatre, never playing to a vacant seat at a single performance. It has had one highly successful office season, establishing unprecedented office records. This season's cast of principals numbers almost all the original favorites, and the famous La Salle theatre chorus, famous for its dancing ability and its pulchritude, and comprising thirty of the most graceful and handsome members of the "merry merry," ever carried with a road attraction, is a feature, as are the famous original "dancing brothers," ten in number, who make up New Westbury's dancing Brownies. "Honeymoon Trail" is a massive production scenically, two special baggage cars being required for the transportation of the scenic and electrical effects, and a travelling crew of eight skilled stage mechanics, electricians and property men are carried by the company.

The current number of Ourselves, Peter McArthur's magazine for cheerful Canadians, contains another striking contribution to the series on the Canadian Banking Monopoly. The "Spinix" of Canadian politics, in the person of Hon. Clifford Sifton, is the headline of another article. Other articles include the editor's view on the reciprocity negotiations and "My Financial Career," by Stephen Leacock. "Buy spring tonics," Gibson's. Charles Major, whose story, "When Knighthood Was In Flower," was unquestionably the most popular novel of this year, contributes to The Red Book Magazine, for May a short story entitled, "Sweet Alyssum," that possesses all the power and charm of the earlier work. It is the story of a girl of the Indiana oil fields.

CALL FOR SERVICE

FOR THE GRADUATES OF THE UNIVERSITY.

Rev. Dr. Rose, Toronto, Preached Baccalaureate Sermon at Queen's on Sunday—View of the Man on the Street.

"Education is not merely illuminating the intellect, but it is turning the whole soul another way," remarked Rev. Dr. Rose, of Toronto, preaching the baccalaureate sermon at Queen's, in Convocation hall, Sunday afternoon. Convocation hall was filled to the doors for the service and the eloquent sermon delivered by Dr. Rose was listened to with keen interest. The text chosen by Dr. Rose was Matthew 23:47: "And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? Do not even do the publicans so?"

The speaker took up the question of education and the views expressed regarding it by the man on the street. (Obligation, he pointed out, is determined by opportunity. The man on the street was rather skeptical as to the wisdom of the outlay for education. It was the duty of the educated man to teach others; no doubt many were gazing into heaven when they should be engaged in heaven's errands. The glory in education, and in the service which could be rendered. This fact the speaker wished to impress upon the graduates of the university who were about to take up their work in different fields. The speaker could wish for nothing better than for in years to come to have the man on the street bear testimony in service. The strong should bear the burden of the weak and it was the duty of the educated to correct the errors of others. The speaker caused his audience to smile when he remarked that sometimes conduct overlooked in the college student would bring the ordinary town boy before the magistrate. He had, however, reference to Toronto when making this statement.

THE LATE HUGH WADDELL.

Peterboro Citizen a Benefactor of Queen's University. The flag on the tower of Queen's University is flying at half mast in respect to the memory of the late Hugh Waddell, of Peterboro, who was one of the university's most generous benefactors, as well as a trustee. Mr. Waddell died quite suddenly at Peterboro on Saturday morning, aged seventy-five years. He was born in South Monaghan, and was in the mercantile business at Centerville for thirty-six years, retiring sixteen years ago to reside at his late residence, "Barrielfield," in Peterboro. He established several scholarships at Queen's.

A Death at Emerson, Man.

The death occurred, on the 10th inst., at Emerson, Man., of A. W. Henderson, formerly of Millhaven, Ont., aged eighty-seven years. The late Henderson was born at Beauséjour, Que., on April 5th, 1824, and came to Millhaven, Ont., when quite a young man, where he married Miss Adele, eldest daughter of the late Jeremiah Amey, and where he spent the greater part of his life, moving from there to Prince Edward county for a couple of years, and in 1893 moving with his family to Emerson, Man., where he lived ever since. Considering his great age, he enjoyed good health up to a few days of his death, which was hastened by an attack of pneumonia, brought on by a slight cold. Besides his sorrowing widow he leaves one son, Herbert, at Emerson, and three daughters, Mrs. A. J. Lindsay, Spokane, Mrs. J. B. Stewart, Seman, Sask., and Mrs. William Scott, Winnipeg, Man.

Moving to Ottawa.

ODDFELLOWS SHOW

TO THE WORLD THE SPIRIT OF JESUS.

Sermon by Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald in St. Paul's Church on "The Kingdom of God is Within You."

The three lodges of Oddfellows, several hundred strong, celebrated the ninety-second anniversary of the order by attending divine service in St. Paul's church on Sunday morning. Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald, M.A., vicar of St. Paul's, preached a splendid sermon from St. Luke xvii:21: "The kingdom of God is within you." The preacher showed how Christ conveyed to the Pharisees the profound lesson that amidst all the contending forces which go to make up the history of the world the mightiest are always spiritual. These control and dominate the forces that are merely material. The kingdom within is always greater than the kingdom without. In all the long ages of stress and conflict the saint has ultimately proved mightier than the warrior. The man of arms has been vanquished by the man of God. What truer and more convincing illustration of the triumph of the spiritual over the material can be found than in the instance of Jesus Himself. The Christ would have all men grasp that real happiness, that even heaven itself is to be sought, not in anything material, is dependent not upon outward conditions and circumstances but upon the inward condition. To everyone inquiring the way into the kingdom He gives the one and sole direction: "You must be born again."

It is not true that for a man really to enter into the enjoyment of any kingdom it must be within him. Take, for instance, the kingdom of gifts. Two men will go to a picnic, a listless eye even towards the priceless masterpieces of art. The other finds his whole soul aflame with a responsive fire. The same is true of the kingdom of music. One can yawn while even Melba sings, whilst another has his whole being thrilled at the sound of moving music. True the world is a very different place to different people. Some of the choicest gifts are lost on those who have no responsive soul. It is the "kingdom within" that makes the difference.

"It is but fitting," Mr. Fitzgerald said, "that I should refer to the order which is represented by such a large gathering of men here this morning. Surely you have given to the world your conception of the kingdom of heaven and of the spirit of Jesus. In a world of many shades of sadness we gladly respond to the uplifting influence of Love, Friendship and Truth. They are of Christ, Christly. He visited the sick, relieved the distressed, mourned with the mourners and showed the tenderest solicitude for the widow and orphan. Your noble order is fast growing in influence and power and binding around our continent a golden girdle. It gives to us a patently pathetic translation of the sweet responsibility of Christian charity. Not merely is your order a beneficial society; it is an elevating Christian brotherhood. From the year 1815 to the present your membership and power have grown apace and may the omnipotent deity, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, continue to bless you and increase your usefulness. To you the message of your king this day and every day is—because of your self-sacrificing devotion in the cause of humanity—Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto Me." So the kingdom of God is within you.

COFFEE CONGESTION Causes a Variety of Ills.

A happy old lady in Wisconsin says: "During the time I was a coffee drinker I was subject to sick headaches, sometimes lasting 2 or 3 days, totally unfitting me for anything. To this affliction was added, some years ago, a trouble with my heart that was very painful, accompanied by a smothering sensation and faintness. Dyspepsia, also, came to make life harder to bear. I took all sorts of patent medicines but none of them helped me for any length of time. The doctors frequently told me that coffee was not good for me, but without coffee I felt as if I had no breakfast. I finally decided about 2 years ago to abandon the use of coffee entirely, and as I had read a great deal about Postum I concluded to try that for a breakfast beverage. I liked the taste of it and was particularly pleased to notice that it did not 'come up' as coffee used to. The bad spells with my heart grew less and less frequent, and finally ceased altogether, and I have not had an attack of sick headache for more than a year. My digestion is good, too, and I am thankful that I am once more a healthy woman. I know a wonderful restoration to health came from drinking coffee and using Postum." Girl Was Sent Back.

A young woman who wanted to get across to Watertown, received quite a disappointment, when she was turned back, at Cape Vincent, by the immigration agent. It is stated that she was regarded as undesirable. It is claimed that her home is in Watertown, but she has been living in Kingston for some time.

BARTENDER WAS FINED

For Allowing People in Bar After Hours.

For allowing people to be in the bar room after hours John Cushman, bartender at the Iroquois hotel, was, on Monday morning, fined $20 and costs, by Magistrate Farrell. The accused pleaded guilty to the charge. The magistrate had it in his power to impose a fine as high as $50.

The case was the outcome of a charge laid against John Theriault, proprietor of the Iroquois hotel, by the police, a few days ago. Theriault pleaded guilty to selling liquor after hours and Magistrate Farrell imposed a fine of $75. Then Inspector Wright laid an information against the bartender, jointly responsible with the keeper, in regard to allowing people in the bar room after hours, and the court referred to the act before he passed sentence. C. R. Webster conducted the prosecution.

Story of Annie Laurie.

Annie Laurie was a real personage. She was born Dec. 16th, 1832, the oldest of the three daughters of Sir Robert Laurie, of Maxwellton, Scotland. She grew up to be a fair and most charming maiden, about whom thronged a whole company of lovers. Among them was William Douglas, of Kirkeudbright, a gay and ardent youth who is said to have been the hero of an old Scotch song, "Willie Was a Wanton Wag." His devotion to fair Annie was very real, and inspired him to the composition of a song whose simple tenderness has rendered his name immortal. He did not wed the maiden, however, perhaps his waggery annoyed her, or a lovers' quarrel intervened, for she did not marry until she was twenty-seven years old, and then she became the wife of James Fergusson, of Craigdarroch. We do not find the composer of this song mentioned anywhere, but it certainly furnishes an instance of undying music welded to immortal words.—From the House-keeper.

All-round Benefit.

The Canadian farmer, owing to market conditions, does not make as much out of the live stock industry as the land is capable of doing. The dairying side has been developed at the expense of beef interests. Milk and milk only seems to be the aim. This puts any calf that will not be valuable for milk production out of favor, and his days are not long in the land. Thus the production of beef is neglected and the farmer becomes a sort of specialist, instead of making the most of the cattle industry. But with reciprocity opening a large market, the possibilities of the development of the beef-producing branch of the farming industry are vastly improved.

There's a Reason.

Coffee has a direct action on the liver with some people, and causes partial congestion of that organ preventing the natural outlet of the secretions. Then may follow biliousness, yellow skin, headaches, constipation and finally a change of the blood capillaries and nervous prostration. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in page "There's a Reason."

Fresh Air and Sunshine is essential to baby health. Wheel the baby out in one of our up-to-date Go Carts and Baby Carriages ON SALE ALL THIS WEEK. James Reid The Leading Undertakers. Telephone as Aid in Probing. New York Herald. Probing with the aid of the telephone is the latest application of electricity to surgery. The process is an improvement over the electric probing for bullets, and depends for its efficacy upon several needles instead of one. The telephone searcher or probe is used for locating metallic substances in the body which ordinarily might elude the quest of the surgeon on account of their small size. The device is described at length in the current number of the Medical Record by Dr. William S. Thomas, of St. Luke's hospital. In the search for metallic substances in the body, such as pins or needles, the fine points of the telephone searcher are made to traverse the tissue where the foreign matter is concealed. The general location of the trouble, some substance, is at first determined by an X-ray photograph. The probe consists of three parallel needles insulated from one another on a handle, and each is connected with the wire of a three-conductor cord. The conductors are connected with a battery and a telephone receiver in such a way that when metallic contact is made with any two of the three points the operator gets a sound through the receiver elapsed to his head. Once the grating is heard the operator turns off the switch in order to prevent bearing at the point of contact by the electric current. The searching needles are left in position and the surgeon cuts down to where the foreign substance is indicated and removes it. The Modest Inventor. Washington Star. Thomas A. Edison, in a recent interview in New York, declined with a laugh to talk about the soul. "No, no," he said. "The preachers have put me in my place. I'll never open my mouth about the soul again." "Well, then, Mr. Edison," said the reporter, "will you please give me your theory of the universe?" "Why," said Mr. Edison, "I haven't ever a theory of electricity, let alone the universe."
