IN MARINE CIRCLES

STEAMER SHARPLES ENTERED THE DRY DOCK.

Work is being rushed on the Steamer Polana—Barge St. Louis Arrived With Grain off the Steamer Glenmount—Marine Notes.

The steamer John Sharples is now in the Kingston dry dock to have temporary repairs made before proceeding to Ogdensburg, N.Y., to be rebuilt. She is not much damaged below the water line, in fact not at all. Her hull is intact, except for the fact that a few plates are sprung. The edges of the four flanges of her wheel have been broken off, and the end of her keel has also been broken off. Her stern represents a very battered appearance. Part of her side has been completely battered to pieces. She will be in the dock for a few days before going down the river.

At Swift's wharf: The steamer Bickelike called last night to discharge her first cargo of freight this season, and went back down the river; the steamer Brockville went down today.

The steamer Seguin cleared from the Kingston dry dock yesterday after having some repairs made to her hull.

The barge St. Louis arrived from the steamer Glenmount, aground near Crossover Light, with a cargo of wheat.

The steamer Haddington is loading grain at Fort William, for Montreal. The steamer Van Allan is in Port Arthur and is having her smoke stack repaired.

The schooner Charlie Marshall, loading stone at the penitentiary, will likely clear for Toronto to-night.

The steamer Mississippi was up from Gananoque to-day. M. T. Co.'s elevator, Tug Thomson cleared for Montreal with two grain barges; steamer Kinmount cleared for Fort William; steamer Edmonston is discharging 75,000 bushels of wheat; the steamer Algonquin is due on Monday, from Fort William, with wheat.

The steamer Alexandria passed up on her way from Montreal, last night. The steamer Gilchrist is at Port Arthur, loading a quarter of a million bushels of wheat for Buffalo.

The steamer Iroquois is loading grain at Port Arthur, for Montreal. The steamer Beaverton cleared from Port Arthur on Wednesday noon, with 72,000 bushels of wheat. Capt. James Delaney is in command of the Beaverton. He is one of the best known marine men on the lakes.

All hands employed outside are working at the government boat, Polana to try and have her done on scheduled time, and by this evening there will not much remain to be done. She will present a very trim appearance when finished, and will be a credit to the builders.

MADE BRUTAL ATTACK
Upon Two Well-known Residents of the City.

Quite a lively row occurred at Richardson's slip, Friday evening, about 8:30 o'clock, and in it two well-known citizens, Charles Selby, Gore street, and John Kelly, Queen street, were very roughly handled by a couple of men who attacked them. Mr. Selby had two ribs fractured, and Mr. Kelly, so it is alleged, had a very narrow escape from being drowned, as one blow which he received in the face knocked him into the slip. Luckily, he fell on a "float," which was in the slip, and had he not fallen on to the "float," he might have been drowned. However, he was able to get out without assistance.

It appears that Mr. Selby and Mr. Kelly had occasion to drive to the slip to see about some work being done on the steamer Port Colborne. When they were driving away, so it is stated, one of the men passed some remark to Mr. Selby, and as the latter got out of the rig to see what was the matter, he was attacked first by one of the men who had made the remark to him, and then by his companion. He was kicked in the face and about the body. Mr. Selby was well able to manage one, but when it came to two, he was at a disadvantage. Mr. Kelly came to his assistance, but was given a brutal blow which knocked him into the slip, as already stated.

Robert Cousins, night watchman, at Richardson's elevator, endeavored to stop the fight, and one of the men made an attack on him, kicking him on the leg. One fellow endeavored to punch him in the face, but Mr. Cousins was too quick for him and ward-offed the blow.

In a short time, an alarm was given, a call sent to the police, and the two men who had been the cause of the trouble, made good their escape. Sergt. Nesbitt and a squad of policemen went on the scene as speedily as possible, but the men who had taken part, could not be located. Mr. Selby was attended by Dr. Hanley at the latter's office, and Mr. Kelly was cared for at his home.

The whole affair caused a good deal of excitement. When the horse which Mr. Selby was driving was left alone, it made a start as if to run away, and a man had to hold the animal to prevent a runaway.

Just what was the cause for the men making the attack is not known, but it is believed that one of the fellows and some spite against Mr. Selby and wanted to "get even" as it were.

Fell Off Street Carr.
While getting off the street car at the corner of Alfred and Earl streets, Friday, at noon, Captain Edward Booth fell and sustained a severe shaking up. It was feared that his hip was fractured, but an examination by Dr. Kilborn did not reveal any injuries. Another examination was made Saturday morning by Drs. Kilborn and Mundell.

A FINE SONG RECITAL

In Brock Street Methodist Church, Friday Evening.

Seldom, if ever, could one find a more appreciative audience than was in attendance at Brock Street Methodist church, Friday evening. All those who heard Harold Mallory, of Brockville, two weeks ago, were more than anxious to come again, and those who didn't hear him and heard him last night were more than sorry they missed any of the good music.

Mr. Mallory was best in his Tannhauser and Handel numbers. These gave one a good idea of all the breadth and dignity of tone, breath control, and, in fact, everything that goes to make an artist, and Mr. Mallory is certainly everything that could be asked. His lighter numbers always please and here again we find his many different styles.

Miss Jessica Reid surprised her many friends. Her improvement has been most wonderful, in fact she was hardly recognized from a few months ago. She did very fine work in her Wagner number, and everyone was delighted in her bright, catchy Carmen. She is vivacious, bright and most pleasing, and Kingston may well be proud of her. If she improves as she has in the last few months the city cannot hope to keep her long. She has already been engaged for six recitals, including two in New York.

Herbert Trener is always an organ favorite and pleased his many friends to the utmost.

Harold I. Albery's accompaniments were most masterly and he shared honors with Mr. Mallory in "The Serenade."

It is readily seen that Miss Reid and Mr. Mallory are pupils of Francis Fischer Powers, as the method is so pronounced, which is seen in all its perfection in Mr. Powers. In the heavy and light work it makes little difference to Mr. Powers; he takes all with the same ease.
