Go! Father Morrissey's "No. 10"

Just in Time To Save His Life.

Mr. Aylward's letter tells the story:

Campbellton, N.B., Feb. 5, 1909. Father Morrissey Med. Co., During the winter of 1907, while travelling on the Gaspé Coast, I contracted a severe cold which settled upon my lungs.

After I returned home I wrote to Father Morrissey explaining my case. I received a letter from him with a prescription for his medicine, which could not be filled at the time here. After one week's delay I received it, just in the nick of time to save my life. After one month's use I felt like a new man.

Sold and guaranteed in Kingston by Jas. B. McLeod.

BUCKLE RETURNED

CLAYTON MAX GETS INTERESTING MEMENTO.

Judson Spalsbury Shot During War. Bullet Penetrating Buckle—Comrade Carried Him Off the Field Thinking Him Dead.

Clayton, N.Y., May 6.—After having been in the possession of a comrade or nearly forty years, a tarnished belt buckle, with a bullet hole through the brass part, has been returned to Judson L. Spalsbury, of this village, a veteran of company K, 10th New York Heavy Artillery. The buckle is the grim reminder of the battle of Bermuda Hundred in Virginia, April 2nd, 1865, when a bullet from a Confederate marksman struck Mr. Spalsbury hitting the buckle. The bullet passed through, shattered two ribs and caused doctors to give him up as dead. The buckle was returned to him a few days ago by John Forey, of Syracuse, a comrade in arms during the war.

Company K was recruited in the town of Orleans, and Mr. Forey, then living in Watertown, and Mr. Spalsbury enlisted. They served during the entire war. At the battle of Bermuda Hundred a bullet struck Mr. Spalsbury. It hit the belt buckle, passing through the upper part of the letter "S" of the letters "U.S.," which adorned the buckle. The brass deflected the bullet and it passed just beneath the heart and came out through the back breaking two ribs. Forey carried his wounded comrade off the field and took the buckle as a memento, not thinking that Spalsbury would recover. Gangrene set in and the army surgeons gave up all hope of saving his life. He was taken to the hospital at Point of Rocks, Va., and remained there for a time. He was later taken to the hospital at Hampton, Va., and then to Albany, New York. His wonderful vitality amazed the surgeons and on August 1st, 1865, he was taken to a hospital in New York. He was discharged from there in about six weeks and returned to his home in Clayton.

Mr. Forey lost all track of his comrade, firmly believing him to be dead. A few days ago he saw his name in a Syracuse paper and found that he lived in Clayton. He communicated with him and returned the buckle to him. Mr. Spalsbury is drawing a pension of $12 a month.

THE LATE HUGH SAUL

He Was One of a Contracting Firm.

Napanee, Beaver. Hugh Saul was born at Balmahineck, county Lown, Ireland, on May 16th, 1826. At the age of fourteen years he left his home and went to his uncle's, John Saul (father of the late William Saul), to learn the mason trade. After serving his time, he and William went to Scotland, where they worked together at Glasgow, Greenock and Edinburgh. At the age of twenty, one he married Susan Bradley, who predeceased him six years ago. At the time of the building of the Grand Trunk railway he and William, his cousin, came to Canada to work on the Victoria tubular bridge at Montreal, and St. Anne's bridge, after which they settled in Odessa, and started contracting there, the name of William and Hugh Saul, or as they were more familiarly known as Willie and Hughie.

The following is a list of the churches built by them: 1860—Methodist church, Westbrooke. 1861—Episcopal Methodist church, Sydneyham. 1862—Wesley church, Camden. 1863—Methodist church, Camden East. 1864—Church of England, Tamworth. 1865—Methodist church, Yarker. 1866—Methodist church, Moscow. 1869—Roman Catholic church, Erinville. 1870—E. M. church, Odessa. 1871—Presbyterian church, Wilton. 1873—Methodist church, Marvale. 1875—Methodist church, Selkirk. 1876—Methodist church, Selkirk. 1876—Presbyterian church, Harrow. 1876—Presbyterian church, Camden East. E. M. church, Westbrooke; Presbyterian church, Newburgh.

The last four we have not the dates of erection. This makes a total of eighteen churches built by them. They also laid the stone work of the Church of England, Camden East, besides dwellings, schools and mills that are scattered all over the country. Since William died on the 5th of February Hugh's whole talk was about his cousin. He took cold about three weeks ago, which developed into pneumonia, from which he died on April 28th. In religion he was a Methodist, having given his heart to God fifty-five years ago at a revival meeting in Odessa.

For over forty years he has been steward and trustee of the Methodist church at Camden East, and two years ago he collected over one thousand dollars for the new tower and repairs to the church which he loved so well. In politics he was a conservative.

The funeral on Sunday last was conducted by Rev. Mr. Boyce, who preached from Matt. xx, 34, and he spoke of the work done by William and Hugh with stone and mortar but also spoke of the character they had built up for God and humanity which would live when their work on earth had vanished.

He leaves four sons and three daughters. They are: William Saul, Rowanwood avenue, Toronto; Mrs. James Robinson, Camden East; Mrs. J. N. McCreary, Winnipeg; Mary, John Saul, of the firm of Saul & Irish, Winnipeg, Man.; Mrs. W. J. Stewart, at the homestead, Camden; James Saul, Tamworth; Joseph Saul, Vancouver, B.C. One son and two daughters predeceased him. The remains were placed in the vault at Camden East on Sunday until his son, John, arrived from Winnipeg, and were interred in the family plot on Monday.

The Blairton Iron Mines limited, of Toronto, have purchased from the Pearce company, limited, of Marmoros, for $75,000 cash, the old Blairton iron mine in the township of Belmont, together with the railroad bed from Blairton to Trent Bridge, on the River Trent.

HOW STEVENSON WROTE

He Was Boss First, But Soon the Story Bessed Him.

How Stevenson wrote and what he thought of his work are told in H. J. Moore's "With Stevenson in Samoa." Stevenson told me that when he set about writing a story he had to do it as a carpenter sets about a building. First of all, he would map out a plan with a sketch of the plot, and main incidents, and lay out the chapters. Then, when he was satisfied that he had made a solid foundation, he would proceed with the superstructure. Such side issues as suggested themselves would develop as he went on. He would often depart from his original plans, the unfolding of the various incidents would quite spontaneously lead up to new and unexpected situations. No man, he said, could faithfully adhere to his original intentions in the writing of a work of fiction. As for himself, new ideas would keep crowding on him as he wrote, and new developments would spring up, as it were, of their own accord, so that sometimes it seemed that, instead of being the real author of the story, he was but the puppet of some unseen force at his elbow, some microbe in his brain.

It was his usual practice to keep two or three books going at the same time, so when he got tired of working on one he found it something in the nature of a relaxation to turn to another. Often he would wonder whether any of his books would live. "I think 'Kidnapped' will, anyway," he said. He seemed very anxious to leave something permanent on the scroll of literature; and I know that at that time he believed in the nature of a relaxation to turn to another.
