When Will it Be Built?
The motto of the department of public works at Ottawa must be that "the mills of the gods grind slowly," judging by the long delay in having the addition to the Kingston postoffice started. The plans were long ago sent to Ottawa and were confirmed, but as yet no orders have been received to call for tenders. The addition to the postoffice should be ready for next December, but if the work of building is not soon started, the local staff will have another sorry time next Christmas.

To Push Ahead.
The finance committee in connection with the Victoria Day celebration met last evening to hear some communications which the secretary had to make. One was from the Watertown Civic Band regarding the running of an excursion. It was decided to accede to their request as the band would, no doubt, bring a larger crowd here than the regiment which found itself unable to come. The committee ordered all other necessary details to be pushed ahead.

Trying the Examinations.
Several officers who intend to enter the long course of instruction at the Royal Military college next fall are writing on the R.M.C. entrance examinations in Ontario hall. The rule was made last year that officers wishing to take this course must show some intelligence, and be able to pass the cadet entrance. Formerly, officers took the course who were absolutely unfitted.
