

JOAN OF ARC

Of the Mexican Rebellion Gets Revenge

TRAPPED AN OFFICER

WHO SLEW HER HUSBAND AND TWO SONS.

Dramatic Scene in Desert—Widow Talamantes Whispers to Victim, Then Turns Away—Her Troops Dig a Trench.

Douglas, Ariz., May 13.—The Widow Talamantes, who took the field as an Insurrecto commander after her husband and two sons had been shot as rebels by command of Colonel Chiapas, won yesterday in full measure her revenge when that man, on whose head she had set the price of $20,000 in gold, rode into an ambush in her camp.

"Don't shoot to kill!" commanded the woman who has won the name of guerilla of the Joan of Arc of the Mexican revolution. "Remember, he's my prisoner."

The aim of her soldiers was good. They brought down Colonel Chiapas galloping horse with a bullet wound in the neck, and another in the arm. Chiapas rolled over in pain and then looked up straight into the eyes of the Widow Talamantes, which blazed like those of a tiger met in the dark.

Colonel Chiapas took no account of his injuries after that. He lay bleeding on the sand, a pleading look in his eyes, but his lips asking no favors, while the widow, resting on her rifle, stood, over him in contemplation.

Finally she whispered in the wounded man's ear—only a few words. His pale face blanched whiter still and his lips compressed into a thinner line, but he gave no other sign that he had heard. The widow Talamantes smiled to her men and turned away. Colonel Chiapas was picked up and carried to a tent.

Just as the red rim of the sun appeared over the eastern horizon, a woman's voice gave a sharp command. There was the quick rattle of fire from a dozen rifles and a tottering figure, standing on the edge of a newly marked grave, crumpled up, quivering and lay motionless on the edge of the trench.

One of the men of the firing squad advanced and turned the body over with his foot, saw that ten of the bullets had found their mark, and then tumbled it over into the grave.

So the widow Talamantes took revenge for the slaying of her husband and two sons by Colonel Chiapas of the federal army.

The pursuit, capture and execution of Colonel Chiapas is the most dramatic incident of the Mexican revolution. The Talamantes, father and two sons, were suspected of revolutionary leanings at the beginning of the disturbances. They were rich, employed a large number of laborers and wielded great influence in Sonora. They were captured on a Federal raid by Colonel Chiapas, then in command of the Sonora district, and executed within sight of their hacienda.

Before the Talamantes were shot the wife and mother pleaded vainly with Colonel Chiapas to spare their lives. Her appeals were met with mocking replies and she soon found that she was dealing with a man brutalized by drink. Later she heard the shots that announced the death of the three persons she loved best in the world.

From that moment Colonel Chiapas was a marked man. The widow published an offer of $20,000 in gold for the capture and giving into her hands of Chiapas, but none could penetrate the guard of federal soldiers that Chiapas kept about him.

So the widow took the field at the head of a revolutionary force made up of her employes and friends and commanded it with the skill of a veteran in several battles and skirmishes. Her force grew to be one of the largest revolutionary bands in Sonora and all the time it was drawing nearer and nearer to the command of Colonel Chiapas.

But the widow feared that her opportunity might not come in open battle and laid a subtle plan. She supplied men with money to go into Agua Prieta and meet Colonel Chiapas on the plane of good fellowship and ply him with wine. She knew that the federales were to evacuate Agua Prieta Wednesday and told her men to be sure that Colonel Chiapas went to bed intoxicated.

Yesterday morning about three o'clock Colonel Chiapas awoke. He found the good fellows who had been with him gone and the city deserted. The federal forces, he was told, were twenty miles away. Chiapas stormed at the men who had betrayed and deserted him and then commanded an Arriano horse belonging to Don Porfirio Teran and said to be the fastest in Sonora. He rode like mad through the dark and coming down after the retreating army.

The widow Talamantes cut the line of the federal retreat about ten miles out of Agua Prieta and established an ambush. She waited until the sound of rapid hoof beats came from the road from Agua Prieta and Colonel Chiapas, in a vain race for life, galloped in among her men on a foam-flecked and exhausted horse.

This was the reply of Lydia Osterlund, a wealthy Ballard girl, to those who prevented her marriage to Youn, a Korean, by causing the arrest of the couple when they were about to go aboard a steamship for a British Columbia port, at Tacoma.

On the other side of the line they expected to obtain the marriage license for which they were afraid to apply in King County, because the girl's parents were watching closely to prevent the union.

The maneuvers lasted from eleven o'clock at night until dawn in the morning. The Kaiser personally directed the operations of the troops. He remained in the saddle all night and did not leave the field until 6.30 o'clock in the morning after he had ordered a terrific artillery engagement, which settled the fight.

Over 100 searchlights brilliantly illuminated the field, and the countryside for miles around during the engagement. Three military aeroplanes were expected to participate in the maneuvers, but for some unknown reason they did not appear.

To Replace Span Made Famous by Headless Horseman.

Tarrytown, N.Y., May 13.—Headless Horseman's Bridge, in the heart of old Sleepy Hollow, which was made famous by Washington Irving, is to be rebuilt as a perpetual memorial to the author.

William Rockefeller, it is announced, has offered to contribute $10,000 to the village of North Tarrytown, with which to build a bridge of granite and steel to be known as the Washington Irving Memorial.

For years the wooden structure at the foot of a steep hill has been considered unsafe and dangerous. The structure is narrow and has been the scene of many automobile accidents. The new bridge is to be fifty feet wide.

It is the plan of Mr. Rockefeller, if his offer is accepted, and it seems certain that it will be, to have the structure of handsome design. Although he has expressed a willingness to bear the entire cost, already there is a movement on foot in North Tarrytown to collect a fund by popular subscription.

"I have loved the doctor a long time," said the girl, "and I was not only his attending nurse, but also his secretary and assistant editor of a magazine he published, Health and Culture. I went to his office to help him finish an editorial. I let myself in without ringing, as I had a key. When I got into the room he was kneeling beside a sofa. I saw a revolver by his side and went over and felt his head. It was cold. Then I don't know what happened."

SUES EXECUTORS.

Late Manufacturer's Former Nurse Wants $300,000 Mortgage.

New York, May 13.—The late Robert Hoe, of printing press fame, paid $20,000 to Louis E. Brown, of Covington, Ky., to persuade Brown to drop a suit against Hoe for the alienation of the affections of his wife, according to testimony of Brown filed yesterday in the county clerk's office. The executors of the Hoe estate have been sued by Margaret Johnson Brown Johns, who was Brown's former wife, and Hoe's nurse and amanuensis, for a $200,000 mortgage which she declared Mr. Hoe assigned to her.

The deposition of Brown was taken by the executors to substantiate their contention that such gifts as Mr. Hoe made to the woman were not for a legal consideration, it being alleged in the executor's answer to the suit that the woman used undue influence over Mr. Hoe.

Notwithstanding the dropping of the original suit, which Mr. Brown testified he had done in consideration of $20,000, he later secured a divorce, in 1907, on the ground of abandonment.

MARIA RICARDI.

Highest Soprano in the World, is Coming.

London (Eng.) Times says "It is seldom a singer shows such complete knowledge of her own capabilities as does Miss Ricardi. Her soprano voice is singularly fresh and charming in quality. Her choice of songs at Aeolian hall was a wise one, for it gave plenty of scope for her powers both as a singer and as a musician. Mozart's 'L'Amore,' from 'Il Re Pastore' showed that she had acquired the best traditions of the bel canto style, and its lovely melody was gracefully phrased, while the cadenza was sung with perfect control. Grieg's 'Solveig's Song' and two songs by Hugo Wolf—the 'Citronfalter in April,' which had to be repeated, and the dainty 'Elmblid'—were given with plenty of character." Plan at Glyn's Wednesday. Miss Ricardi will sing in the City Hall on May 23rd.

IF ATTACK IS MADE UPON MEXICO CITY.

Foreign Colonies to Raise Several Companies to Assist the Authorities in Keeping Order.

Mexico City, May 13.—The United States colony here is wrought up over the danger of mob violence which may be started if an attack is made upon the city. It is understood that more than seventy-five per cent. of the women and children of Americans have been sent to the United States within the past sixty days.

A meeting of all foreign governmental representatives was held on Wednesday at the American embassy, to study plans for the protection of foreigners in Mexico City, in case of an outbreak of anarchy. A committee of two called upon Minister De La Barra and laid the matter before him. The proposed plan which has, it is understood, the hearty support of Ambassador Wilson, is that several military companies be raised and drilled by each foreign colony, and be armed and ready to assist the authorities to keep order.

To March on Capital.

San Antonio, Tex., May 13.—Unless President Diaz resigns, and peace is made at once, Gen. Francisco I. Madero, my brother, will be leading a force of 20,000 men through the streets of Mexico City in less than a month. This is no idle talk. It is the military plan which he has made."

This is the authoritative statement made here by Alfonso Madero, following a long wire conference with the authorities in Juarez.

"My brother, as soon as it is definitely determined there shall be no further peace moves, will start south, gathering in his soldiers as he goes," Madero adds: "It is planned to take Torreon, install a garrison and then head for Chihuahua. There is no question that the insurgents can take every town as they go."
