WE ARE SO MERCIFUL

CREELY MARKED MANY OF THE OLD PUNISHMENTS.

Glances at Criminal Records Less Than a Century Old Reveals Terrible Penalties.

In these merciful days, when a man who publishes a cruel and malevolent libel on the king escapes with a few months' imprisonment, it seems scarcely credible that only forty-one years ago the punishment ordained by the law for high treason was that the offender should be drawn on a hurdle to the place of execution and there should be hanged by the neck until he was dead; that then his body should be severed from his body, that the body be divided into four quarters, and that his head and quarters be at the disposal of the crown. Such was the punishment of high treason within the memory of the elderly man of today. In earlier times the culprit did not escape so easily by a libel taken down from the gallows while still alive; disembowelled, and his entrails burned before his eyes. And this was by no means the worst fate that might befall a criminal in the so-called "good old days," as one John Rose, a cook of Henry VII's, found to his cost. Rose was convicted of the heinous crime of putting poison in the broth intended for the family of no less a personage than the Bishop of Rochester. For such a crime hanging, drawing and quartering was a merciful punishment. "Something lingering, with boiling oil," or at least water, was decided to be the punishment that best fitted the crime, and with this object a special act of parliament was passed ordaining boiling alive as the punishment for this felony. John Rose expired in a cauldron of hot water, and a few years later, in 1542, one Margaret Davy met the same terrible fate at Smithfield. So gravely was the crime of poisoning regarded in these days of old, that it is recorded, a Scotsman, one Thomas Bellie, and his son were banished for life for administering poison to a couple of noisy hens belonging to a neighbor. These were indeed days when the men of violent temper or criminal tendencies must operate warily. If by evil chance he came to blows and drew blood within the precincts of the king's palace, he was inevitably condemned to lose his right hand, and a statute of 33 Henry, Henry VIII, regulated the whole gruesome ceremony, with all its preliminaries from the sending of the offender to the individual who used the scolding iron, the yeoman of the scullery, who made the irons red hot at his fire, and the sergeant of the cellar, who was provided "with a pot of red wine to give the same party, after his hand is so stricken off and the stump severed."

Mutilation was a favorite form of punishment in those good, old days, following, no doubt, the Scriptural penalty, "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." Thus, the slanderer's tongue was pulled out, so that he could at least utter slander no more; the adulterer's nose was cut off, and the adulteress's sight of one-eyed man lost both his own eyes.

By the Coventry act (22 and 23 Charles II, C. 1) any person who shall maliciously put out an eye, slit the nose or disable any limb of another, with intent to maim or disgrace him, was to pay for the wrong with his life. By another act the man who was to pay for the wrong with his life if he had already lost both ears, as many a malefactor had, was branded in the cheek with the letter "F."

By an act of Queen Elizabeth's reign the forger was condemned to stand in the pillory, to have his ears cut off by the common hangman, his nostrils slit up and sealed, and to be imprisoned for life; and by a statute of 21 James I, an unfortunate bankrupt was nailed by an ear to pillory for two hours, and then his ear was cut off.

If an enterprising farmer was foolish enough to send any of his live sheep out of the country he paid a terrible price for his rashness, for his goods were forfeited, he was sent to jail for twelve months, and on recovering his liberty his left hand was cut off in a public market and nailed up there as a warning against the danger of illicit exports, says Tit-Bits. If he offended a second time he paid for his daring with his life. If he set covetous eyes on a neighbor's sheep and annexed one of them, he was unconventionally hanged by the neck until he was dead, indeed thousands of unfortunates paid with their lives for thefts much more insignificant.

In 1726 Edward Burnworth, a high wayman, refusing to plead, was loaded with boards and weights. For more than an hour he bore a mass of metal weighing nearly 400 weight, when his flesh could bear the agony no longer, he prayed to be put to the bar again. He pleaded "Not guilty," but was, nevertheless, found guilty, and ended his days on the scaffold. This cruel punishment survived to George II's time.

But one might write reams on these quaint and barbarous old world punishments, from the forty-shilling fine inflicted in Scotland on the wicked player of football and golf, and the imprisonment for a year for a third offense of using the Book of Common Prayer to the ordeal of fire, in which Queen Emma, accused of a criminal intrigue with the Bishop of Winchester, walked with bandaged eyes over nine red hot plowshares to prove her innocence.

London Not Singular. Buffalo Times.

London bridge may be falling down, according to the bursey play, but London is looking up and looking forward with great hope and the keenest expectations to what will happen during coronation time. It is braced around the world that London will make $150,000,000 out of the spectacle and though that figure seems very large, it may be reached because there is little limit to the enterprise of millions when there is a show to be seen and particularly a free parade.

But London is no worse, in its place than smaller cities are in theirs. Every great exposition, almost every small one too, and nearly every kind of thing got up to celebrate an event, has at bottom something of a money-making principle. Perhaps there is less of it involved in the scheme of the celebration of the hundred years' peace than in any other with which we are acquainted in this part of the world.

Certain it is that if the coronation scheme is worked for all it is worth by Londoners, cities in other parts of the world have got up shows, parades, displays, exhibitions of one kind and another for somebody's profit and that they would not have been arranged and carried out except that there was something in it for some of those most actively engaged in forming it.

The International Volcanological Institute is the name of the society for volcanological study, observation and research, for which subscriptions are being solicited by Dr. Immanuel Friedlander, of Naples, in behalf of scientific men in all parts of the world. The institute requires 1,500,000 lire to make and maintain additions and improvements to the observatory and laboratory, which has already been established on Vesuvius. Our present knowledge of volcanic action depends on individual observations," says the circular, "and is by no means sufficient for the forecasting of coming eruptions; nevertheless, the fact can be ascertained that in most volcanoes there occurs a regular sequence of events, and it is within the bounds of possibility and even of probability that a careful and exact registration of all the phenomena of a given volcano will soon enable us to foresee approximately the time and magnitude of an eruption."

Many good stories have been told by Methodist ministers gathered in conference, and one of the best is that related by Rev. Joseph B. Hingsley of Chicago. It tells of the race between ministers of rival denominations to establish a church in one of the growing Montana towns. "A Baptist clergyman was headed that way," said Rev. Mr. Hingsley, "and was discovered by a friend in the town of Chicago. He was on the train sped westward. 'Hush,' said the Baptist to his friend, 'Don't mention me. There's a Congregational preacher three seats behind me and I'm afraid he'll beat me to Montana. I am determined to get there first and establish my church.' 'But the man was doomed to die, appointed for a Methodist preacher rode west on the cowcatcher, and was flung the cellar by the time the Baptist emerged from the train.'

"THE SELKIRK," THE NEW PALATIAL HOTEL OF THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC IN WINNIPEG.

The above is the plan which has been approved by the Grand Trunk Pacific management for the new hotel which the company intends to erect in Winnipeg. This hotel, which in appearance and luxuriousness of appointments is to be the equal of the Chateau Laurier, at Ottawa, will cost in round figures one million dollars. It will be situated on Broadway, near the Manitoba Club, and close to the new Union Station.

INDIGESTION STAYS CURED

By Toning Up Stomach to do Nature's Work.

Indigestion should not be neglected for by depriving the body of its proper nourishment it grows steadily weaker. Neither stimulating medicines, which ruin the already weak stomach, by making it work beyond its strength, should be used, nor pre-digested foods, which do not excite a flow of the digestive fluids, and by disease cause the stomach to grow weaker. Nowhere is the tonic effect more clearly marked, its principle is to enable the stomach to do its own work by building up the blood and giving tone to the nerves. When these are once more restored to their normal health indigestion disappears and the cure is permanent. In proof of these statements we give the experience of Mrs. Paul Gannon, Star City, Saska, who says: "For more than a year I suffered with all the terrible pains of indigestion, and my life was one of the greatest misery-making principle. Perhaps there is less of it involved in the scheme of the celebration of the hundred years' peace than in any other with which we are acquainted in this part of the world."

PUT UP IN GOOD FORM.

Would Use Almanac to Fight Consumption.

London, Ont., May 20.—The need of showing the children and mothers that tuberculosis may be prevented and cured was stated at last evening's session of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis which is now holding its eleventh anniversary in the city. Dr. Livingston Farrand of New York declared that the only way to stamp out the disease is to train the children to guard against it.

Mrs. Crowar of Hamilton pleaded the need of the mothers. "Many of them," she said, "read only the almanac. Let us play 'on this idiosyncrasy,'" she suggested, "and get out an almanac which will be as gaudy as any patent medicine affair, but which will tell in simple language the truth about the white plague."

Proposing to a Girl. A German calculator says that thirty-six per cent. of the suitors press the hand of the fair one, twenty-four per cent. conclude their avowal with an embrace, four per cent. kiss the hair, two per cent. kiss the hand, two per cent. fall on their knees and twenty per cent. address remarks that they feel a lump in the throat which they find almost prevents speech.

Ten per cent. of the men are so overcome that they cannot speak at all, but open and shut their mouths without producing a sound, and two per cent. make their proposals standing on one foot.

As regards the women, sixty per cent. sink, helpless, into the lover's arms, twenty per cent. blush and hide their faces, one per cent. faint away, four per cent. are genuinely amazed, fourteen per cent. gaze silently into the suitor's eyes and seven per cent. run away to tell a girl friend.

The great statistician, however, omits to tell us how he obtained his figures.

Benefits Flout Cupid. Wellock seems to be in a bad way in the mountains of the Dauphine. The eminent members of the company have decided to meet every month and least cabin. Invitations are sent out with the information, "Good-looking, good drinking, much laughter, much dancing." An added insult to matrimony is that the invitations have been sent to all spinsters who have "put on St. Katherine's cap," that is to say, who are over twenty-five, and are therefore presumed to be on the high road to old maidhood. The confirmed bachelors cynically announce their intention of eating, drinking, laughing, and dancing with the old maids every month. But their very hardness may be their undoing. How many bachelors will survive unscathed and unengaged these monthly merry-making with the Beatrixes? Paris Correspondence London Telegraph.

Setting Him Right. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, lecturer, in an address in New York on woman suffrage, said: "A famous New York editor was arguing with me the other day. 'But,' he said, 'women can't pretend to be men's equals. Take war, for instance. Suppose a war arose between us and England, or us and Germany, or us and Japan, what would you do, then, madam?' 'I'd do the same as you would,' I answered, promptly. 'I'd sit at my desk and write articles urging other people to go and fight.'"

The man who wants to laugh—last may not laugh at all.

The Royal Taste. Queen Alexandra is fond of soft, subdued colors, and pale shades of rose, green and blue have been largely used in the redecoration of Marlborough House, which is now being prepared for her majesty's occupation. Queen Alexandra very much dislikes changes particular about everything being always put in exactly the same place, the plans of her rooms have been made, showing exactly where each object is meant to be, so that when anything is moved it can be replaced in its original position.

At times the strong arm of the law seems pitifully weak.

LIFE NOT WORTH LIVING

In the way Miss Alta Abel, of West Haver, Ind., summed up her existence after having sought in vain for health. She writes, "I was a complete wreck—always tired, worn out and nervous. I had to spend about one-third of my time in bed, and my life was not worth living."

Vinol, your delicious cod liver and iron tonic, was recommended, and I can truly say it has done me more good than all the medicine ever took in my life. That nervous and tired feeling is all gone, I have gained in health, flesh and strength, and I feel like another person." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

What Vinol did for Miss Abel, we know it will do for every nervous, run-down, overworked, tired, thin and discouraged woman in this vicinity.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. Marshall's Drug Store, Kingston.

THE "UNLUCKY" LIQUOR DRINKER

THE World is full of "good fellows" with GOOD INTENTIONS who are FAILURES—UNLUCKY—UNSUCCESSFUL. And you—will find about all of them to be liquor drinkers. If the liquor drinker could but grasp the fact that there is a link connecting WHISKY and FAILURE, and then take the Gallia treatment so that he could STOP drinking, there would be a chance for him as a successful business man.

If he could but REALIZE that a WHISKY-BRAIN message BAD LUCK in business, he would come to the Gallia Institute TO-DAY. In THREE DAYS he would go back to his business a man REBUILT, with a BRAIN and a NERVOUS SYSTEM strong enough to make SUCCESS out of what will SOON be FAILURE; he would go back to his business at the end of the third day with no more craving or nerve-demand for liquor or inclination to drink it than he had the day he took his FIRST DRINK.

You are not to blame because you CAN'T STOP drinking liquor. Foolishly, not knowing the CONSEQUENCES, just as a Billiard man before you have done, you took your first drink. With that first drink you introduced into your system the CUMULATIVE POISON of alcohol, the antidote for which is MORE ALCOHOL. You TRY to stop drinking—you at least realize that it does no good even if you believe it does no harm—but you CAN'T STOP.

Without liquor your NERVES go to pieces, your STOMACH refuses to act, your HEART palpitates. YOU CAN'T THINK RIGHT, work becomes a HARSHIP, YOU CAN'T SLEEP—and with all these symptoms you seek RELIEF in liquor, and you get it—TEMPORARILY.

The Gallia Home treatment is for those who cannot come to the Institute for three days. It is just as efficient as Institute treatment if directions are followed.
