THE STORY OF AN OLD PILGRIM.

Perth Road, May 20.—(To the Editor: Will you allow me space in your columns to refer to some of the experiences of an old pilgrim for the past twenty-six years.) Twenty-six years ago this month I was engaged in the liquor traffic in the township of Loughboro, county of your iniquities and do that which is lawful and right and your bread and water is sure. I hesitated for some time looking at my circumstances, but I promised to obey. I then heard another call which said, "The Lord has prepared a harvest for you and you have refused to reap it. He that provideth not for his own household is worse than an infidel." Nevertheless I said to myself, "I will step out of the hotel and turned it over to a man by the name of John S. Roberts for $600, and twelve years to pay for it, where he has continued ever

Women as Fist Fighters. The patron of the ring of the past had not to depend for his excitement upon the battling of black and white artists alone. The reports of female battles of the eighteenth century are not edifying. In 1788, for instance, we read that "two women fought for a new shift, valued at half a crown, in the Spaw fields, near Lillington. The battle was won by a woman called Bruising Peg, who beat her antagonist in a terrible manner." And again in the same year: "An extraordinary battle was fought in the Spaw fields by two women against two tailors for a gown, a hood, which was won by the ladies. Who beat the tailors in a severe manner." And now we find we know how the district earned its name of "Meticulous Lillington."—London Chronicle, Amos Clare.

Artful Nature. With a view to possible guidance of Bridget's mind toward a quieter summer hat than the one which she had worn the season before, Mrs. Lee spoke of some violets she had seen in a milliner's window, says the Youth's Companion. "You see these violets that have been sent to me, Bridget?" her mistress said. "They are just like those in the milliner's window, except those are a little bit larger." "I saw them the day before yesterday," said Bridget. "And there is the very moral of 'em. Ain't it wonderful, ma'am, how natural the Lord can make things?"

Sense of Resentment. "How is the suffragette cause progressing?" "It's getting unpopular in our club," said Mrs. Bridgerton. "Too many people talk about votes for women when they ought to be remembering what the tramp is,"—Washington Star.

After a Round at Tennis. After other vigorous play, the exposed skin is in a condition to appreciate and benefit by soothing application of SANITOL FACE CREAM. Mildly antiseptic, it immediately alleviates sunburn and windburn. Sanitol Face Cream differs from Sanitol Face Cold Cream in that it contains no oils—greases, and immediately be put on after use; it will not soil the most delicate fabric.
