

AIM TO TRAIN

Soldiers How to Move in the Dark.

A REMARKABLE ORDER

HAS JUST BEEN ISSUED TO OFFICERS.

Can be Practised During the Winter—Recruits to be Taught How to Find Out Where They are by the Moon.

Ottawa, June 3.—There has been issued from military headquarters a remarkable general order to officers charged with infantry training. The order goes minutely into the elementary training which troops should undergo in night operations, and is labelled "A Guide to Officers." The following is given as a general indication of the methods to be adopted in carrying out the elementary instruction:

Men should be trained to put on their equipment swiftly and silently in the dark. Men should be told that ability to see in the dark increases with practice. Objects are more visible when the moon is behind the observer than when it is in front of him. When men have been practised in observing a man approaching—at a walk, they should be similarly practised in observing a man who is endeavoring to approach unseen.

The order does not state how an unseen man is to be observed. As the training is primarily meant for night attacks, a good deal of the instruction, according to the order, must be devoted to silent advances. Men must be kept from allowing their equipment to rattle. They must keep their eyes of the ground and their heads erect. The feet must be placed on the ground before the toe, and so on. Then the recruits are to be taught how to find out where they are by the moon. They are to be trained as to the right way to deal with suspicious persons, and finally how to carry out trenching tools without making a noise.

Finally the general order states that the elementary work can be practised advantageously during winter afternoons and evenings, and approximately winds up its suggestions for this winter's manoeuvring by telling how the men should walk when "the grass is short."

SMALL BOY SHOT DEAD

CHUMS SPEND MONEY

Four of Them Arrested and One Confined—He Claims It Was Accidental.

New York, June 3.—Not until Carmine Piombino broke down and said he fired the fatal shot were the police able to decide which of four boys was responsible for the death of John Miale. The Miale boy's body, stuffed into a burlap bag, was found in the cellar of a tenement in the Italian quarter. Four of his playmates from ten to fourteen years old were arrested, and while they admitted that he had been killed by one of them, each claimed the own innocence.

Piombino went as he told his story, and, dropping on his knees, called up on the spirit of his dead friend to forgive him. He said that he had shot Johnny accidentally while they were struggling over money. After that the boys confessed that they took the dead boy's money, some $15, and spent it for candy and moving picture shows.

Protestantism Stands for Popular Education.

Special to the Whig. Montreal, June 3.—The Protestant and Catholic conceptions of education were pitted against each other by a Quebec Methodist minister at the educational anniversary held in connection with the Methodist conference now in progress at St. James church. The speaker, Rev. G. H. Cobblehead, claimed that the Protestant conception was essential to civilization and that the historian Macaulay—as showing that those countries which embraced the reformed faith forged ahead, while those which remained with the old faith went backward or remained in darkness.

The special committee presented its report through Rev. C. D. Baldwin. In the case of Rev. Lewis E. HERE'S THE PROBLEM

GAY GEISHA GIRLS MENACE OF JAPAN.

Largely Responsible for Evils, Common There, Says Missionary; Kept in Semi-Slavery.

Toronto, June 3.—At the annual meeting of the Toronto conference branch of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church, Miss A. Allen, a missionary from Japan, endeavored to furnish an impressive address on "The Geisha of Japan." "Western education alone," she said, "is not sufficient to mould the character of the Japanese girl. To be properly moulded she must come into daily contact with the christianizing influences of the west."

Miss Allen expressed the opinion that the Geisha girls were one of the pressing problems of Japan. Nominally dancing girls, they are "virtually slaves, and their existence is the most detrimental factor in the home life of Japan. In a very great part they are responsible for the presence of vice in the flower kingdom. As an instance of the semi-slavery in which the Geisha girls are kept, Miss Allen stated that at the time of the last fire in Tokio thousands of these girls were rendered homeless, but were not allowed to accept the offer of hospitality of the Y.M.C.A. and the Salvation Army, their owners fearing that they would be susceptible to the christianizing influences.

This technically may make it possible for Goodwin to regain full control of his California holdings, and hence he is planning to sue.
