THE SPORT REVIEW

THE RETAILERS TO MEET CIVIL SERVICE THIS EVENING

In a Mercantile League Game—Bethel and Cooke's Scheduled in the Sunday School League.

The Retailers will make a supreme effort to win their first game in the Mercantile series from Civil Service at the cricket field this evening. Both teams will go on the diamond in fine condition as the result of repeated workouts. The weatherman has not been handing out a specially nice week and the diamond will be rather slippery. Fans who witnessed the runaway by the Locomotives scored on the Bankers a week ago, need have no fear that this game will be anything like that. The Bankers need more practice and both these teams have had plenty of that. The prize which James Swift and Co. has offered for the player having the best batting average in this league will be a spur for the players to do their very best.

Date for Postponed Game. It is expected that the postponed game between the Printers and Live Coals, to have been played Monday evening, but had to be postponed on account of the rain will be pulled off Friday evening. The Printers were to have had a practice last evening, but owing to the unfavorable weather could not work out.

Bethel vs. Cooke's. For the team which won the championship last season, Bethel is setting a very slow pace this season so far, but no one knows what they may do toward the end of the season. The game this evening at 6.30 o'clock at the Victoria school grounds should be a very good exhibition of ball potting, standing all this. The fans are reminded that as one $1.50 ball is given away to the winning team at every game, the collections are scarcely large enough and the officials would be much pleased to see larger collections.

Sydenham Won Out. In the Sunday school baseball junior series, at Victoria school grounds, Sydenham won out from St. Paul's by 12 runs to 8. The last innings was

ALL THE NIGHT LONG

TINY TOTS KEPT THE BRIGHT LIGHT TURNING.

Unparalleled Heroism of Breton Children of 7 and 10 Years—While Father Lay Dead and Mother Watched, Exhausted, They Guarded Maternal From Disaster.

Paris, June 8.—Straining with their tiny arms past the point of weariness, whose strong men ceased from struggling, the two little children of Jean Stelot, the keeper of Kerdonis lighthouse on southeast point of Belle-Ile-en-Mer, a windswept spot on the Brittany coast, kept the great light revolving through a long night of storm, making the perilous passage of the ship, the perilous passage of the storm.

These tiny tots, aged respectively seven and ten years, whose heroism has been brought to the notice of the French government, took up their task only after death has killed the labouring hands of their father and their mother had dropped from exhaustion in an effort to care for the stricken father and to repair the broken mechanism of the light.

While cleaning the revolving light, Materlot was stricken with a sudden illness. He stuck to his task and the mechanism was almost in order when he dropped, dying beside his work. Noting the strange stillness in the light tower the wife clambered up the winding stair through a driving gale and, after assisting her dying husband to their tiny house at the foot of the light, she again ascended to the light to carry on the task which for many years has yielded them their scanty living.

As dusk drew on, the gale increased and the skies became overcast. The woman struggled desperately with the machinery which revolves the heavy light. At last her willing arms would respond to her will no longer. The wife fell where the husband had dropped. When she recovered from her swoon the need for action was borne in on her weary brain, and she forced her tottering limbs to carry her to the cot below. There she arrived just in time to hear her husband's last word, gasped out in broken voice: "The light—you must fix the light!"

The woman made another effort to mount the tower, but her weary limbs could not drag her through the buffeting wind. She gave up this effort, but sent her two little ones to carry on the father's lifelong task. She knew that the mechanism was out of order, but she knew that the light must be kept revolving if it was not to be mistaken for other fixed lights on the channel, when disaster was almost certain to follow. She told the children that the light must be kept turning, and they mounted to their task.

There, through the long night, they drove their little muscles to the unequal labor. With panting breath and aching arms they kept the great light revolving until daylight came, when they dropped at their posts from sheer weariness. When the heroism of the little ones became known among the sailor folk ashore, one old woman piously remarked: "And a little child shall lead them."

HAD LEG BROKEN.

John Conley, former Kingstonian, injured playing ball. John Conley, a former well-known Kingstonian, had his leg broken while engaged in a game of ball, at Renfrew. He was playing in a match, as catcher, for the Standards, in their game against the Royals, in the town League. Bert Lindsay, of the Royals, collided with him, in a rush for home, and his right leg was broken below the knee.

Mr. Conley is a plumber, and while in Kingston was employed with McKelvey & Birch. He is an old ball player, having played with the old Park Nine, in Kingston, in the olden days. D. J. Millan, butcher, played with him on this team. His many friends in Kingston were very sorry to learn of his mishap.

Girl Kissed Bull Dog.

People who happened to be at Folger's wharf, when the steamer America left for the Cape, on Wednesday afternoon, state that they witnessed an extraordinary incident. Just as the boat was leaving a girl who was there to bid farewell to some friends jumped on the boat with her pet bull dog, to say the last farewell. The departing guest kissed both the girl and the bull dog, and there was a ripple of laughter among the passengers and spectators who happened to see what was going on.
