MAKE YOUR MONEY WORK!

Any sum of money a person possesses that is lying idle and not earning interest, may be likened to a valuable horse that is left tied up in a barn the year around. The horse should be put to work, as it represents an investment. And so does the idle money. It represents an investment of time and labor to earn it. Three important considerations in making an investment are: First, safety; second, a fair rate of interest; third, a reasonable assurance of increasing value.

All these features you will find in improved Kingston real estate. It offers exceptional opportunities and merits a thorough investigation. Consult us before buying.

"Annandale," the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Carruthers, on Sydenham street, was thrown open, on Friday evening, and a royal welcome extended to the many friends of Miss Marie and Miss Dorothy Carruthers. Dancing began at half past eight and no programme of sixteen dances seemed much too short for the enthusiastic guests, who refused to be satisfied without many encores and extras. Cozy sitting-out places were arranged with rugs and cushions under the trees in the garden, and the bright colored lanterns completed every festive appearance. Mrs. Carruthers, gowned in a handsome black sequin robe, was assisted in receiving by her daughter, Miss Marie Carruthers, who wore a pretty gown of old rose silk, veiled in net, and finished on the bodice and skirt with bands of fur. The guests included Miss G. Lawson and the Misses Rutherford, who are Mrs. Carruthers' house guests, Captain and Mrs. W. A. Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Hansford, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Craig, Prof. and Mrs. P. The - Story - Girl

By L. M. MONTGOMERY

The environment is again the author's beloved Prince Edward Island, and the incidents possess the same simplicity and charm which characterize Miss Montgomery's earlier books. The Story Girl, herself—Sara Stanley—is a fascinating creature, and will delight and thrill her readers with her weird tales of ghosts and things. She tells in wondrous voice of "The Mystery of the Golden Milestone," "How Kissin' Was Discovered," and of just how the milky way happened into the heavens. She will make you feel the spell of the old orchard where she and her playmates spend such happy days, and with Felix, Dan and Beverly you will live again with her the "tragedies of childhood."

More than 200,000 Copies of Miss Montgomery's previous books have been sold. Anne of Green Gables, 30th printing. Kilmeny of the Orchard, 9th printing. Anne of Avonlea, 17th printing. Publisher's Price, $1.50.

The Man On Watch.

The Langman understands that the public library board of the town is not a unit upon the proposal to combine with Queen's college and secure a Carnegie library. He hears that Queen's application for Carnegie library benefits was turned down, as it was discovered that Queen's had one of the best libraries in Canada. It would not be satisfactory to have the public library on Queen's grounds. The people would demand that it be near the business section of the town. Queen's wants a library building, but if the town council is to contribute largely to its support the convenience of the general public must be considered.

It is generally agreed, the Lampman says, that there is no necessity of lighting the street lamps on moonlight nights, but when the moon is hidden by dark clouds some one should see that the lights are lit. The use of ordinary common sense should tell the authorities when the lights should be turned on during the moonlight season.

The Lampman has heard people blaming the mayor for the railway land grant hitch, but has defended his worship as being wholly innocent. (One knocker declared that the mayor should be included among those for whom we pray for having done those things he should not have done (signing K. & P. land memo of agreement), and leaving undone the things he should have done (signed the Exploration Syndicate agreement and chucked $14,000 for the town). However the Lampman says that in this K. & P. deal the board of trade is to blame, if anyone is, because that body, which is noted for beginning things and not ending them, decided to make a grand finish in this land grant case, and made the town council insurance committee take second place in the proceedings. When the latter came out of the anaesthetic administered, it began to discover things.

Some of the town authorities must have a grudge against the Salvation Army when they refused it permission to have a sacred band concert in Macdonald Park pavilion on Sunday evening. The townspeople would be glad to hear its band play a sacred concert in the park, and have not got over the shock of the refusal of the mayor and the parks' chairman to allow it to do so. Just think of the Salvation Army being accused of doing something to break the sanctity of the Sabbath, the Lampman says.

Next January the townspeople will vote to cut off ten or twelve places where liquor is sold, a townsman said to the Lampman the other day the Morality Society is at work getting its petition signed, and it will contain a great many names. They, the town council must submit the question to the people. The Lampman learns that Kingston does not require all the "hotels" that are doing business here. Half a dozen of them could be wiped out, and the travelling public would not suffer. He learns that some of the little places are kept in existence by "the trade," and that there is next to nothing in them for those who conduct them.
