A STRANGE SITUATION

FRENCH CATHOLICS ARE INCENSED AT A BISHOP

For Acts That are Not in Accord With Their Wishes—Rites Forbidden at Funeral of Man Excommunicated.

Bridgford, Me., June 16.—The convention of the French-speaking Roman Catholic citizens of Maine to secure a settlement of the difficulties between the French Americans on one side and His Grace Bishop Walsh of Portland, on the other, in session here, is attended by over 100 delegates, who seek a change in the control of the parochial properties, which is now left to the bishop of the diocese.

Their grievance is that the properties bought with their money, such as the churches, parsonages and schools are administered sometimes without regard to their wishes. The schools appear to be at the bottom of the trouble, because the French-Americans claim that, where they are in absolute majority, they are denied the right of teaching French to their own children in their own schools. That right, they say, is denied to them by the bishop who by an act of the legislature of Maine, called the Corporation Sole, was vested with the whole management of the church properties in the state.

Two years ago a similar convention was held at Brunswick, at which it was decided to take steps against the bishop, and at which a permanent committee of seven was appointed to act. Application was made to the legislature, in the name of this committee, for repeal of the Corporation Sole act, but was denied. As a consequence, Bishop Walsh pronounced excommunication against the members of the committee, from which an appeal is to be made to Rome. Two communications were pronounced two weeks before the convention, which opened yesterday, and it was thought that its first effect would be to kill the convention, but every delegate reported except one, Dr. Fortier, of Waterville, Me., whose death was reported as having taken place Tuesday.

The convention had hardly begun when news of the death of Dr. Fortier was received, together with a statement that Bishop Walsh had forbidden Dr. Fortier a funeral according to the church rites, specifying that the body should not be admitted to the church, and that no public prayers should be said for his soul.

The parish priest of Waterville was delegated to visit the bishop, who was in Greenville, on a pastoral visit, and represent that Dr. Fortier had always been a good Christian, and that he had never left the church, and pleaded with the bishop to revoke the interdiction. Bishop Walsh receded only to the extent of permitting burial in the Catholic cemetery.

The information caused a deep sensation here and in Waterville. In spite of the interdiction, which implies forbidding Catholics to attend the funeral, the convention decided to send a delegation, while the people of Waterville are talking of forcing an entrance to the church, when the funeral takes place on Friday.

100TH ANNIVERSARY

OF THE DISCOVERY OF THE KETTLE FALLS, WASH.

David Thompson, a Trail-Blazer for the Hudson's Bay Company, Discovered the Falls.

Spokane, Wash., June 9.—When veteran frontiersmen and early settlers in the Pacific slope country gathered in the town of Kettle Falls, Wash., on Friday, June 23rd, to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the discovery of the Kettle falls on the Columbia river, ninety-five miles north of here, they will pay tribute to the memory of David Thompson, a trail-blazer for the Hudson's Bay company, which established its first trading post on what now is American territory in 1812.

There is an interesting Indian legend of the Kettle falls and the origin of its name, probably handed down from the Flathead tribesmen, who referred to them as Il-coy-ope, on account of the numerous kettles in the rocks. The tradition is that a pebble was rushed along the current of the Columbia and found lodgment in a crack of the rock, and, whirling in its new bed, it ground a bit of the onyx. Other pebbles came down the stream and bit into the same stone and in the ages that passed the large pot-like excavations were worn in the rock. At the bottom of these cavities to-day are pebbles, grinding deep into the ledge, athwart which swirl the waters of a thousand lakes and mountain streams on their way to the Pacific ocean, more than 600 miles distant.

Thompson, who discovered the Kettle falls, was the first white man to follow the Columbia river through lake and ravine from the shadows of the present continental divide, which the stream crosses twice, to the long needed one formation thrust out into the river below the lower falls. Tracing his way along the capricious stream he found a tribe of red men, of whom he could give no better description to the factors of the post on Athabasca lake and at Hudson's bay than that the natives wore long pieces of Moose suspended from their ears. He and the French voyagers who followed named the Indians as the tribe of the Pend d'Oreilles. Traveling farther south into what is now the panhandle of the state of Idaho, Thompson found another tribe of natives, naming them the Coeur d'Alenes.

Soon after Thompson's first visit to Kettle falls and the opening of Fort Colville, the North-West Trading company, promoted by John Jacob Astor, established the Spokane house near the junction of the Spokane and the Little Spokane rivers. Astor abandoned the post in 1816 and its effects were taken over by the Hudson's Bay company. Five years afterward the two posts were consolidated a short distance above Kettle Falls, with Archibald McDonald as chief trader. It was named Fort Colville in honor of Lord Colville, then London governor of the Hudson's Bay company. The post remained under British dominion until 1871, when the corporation left the fort to Angus McDonald, a father of Donald McDonald, the present owner of the site.

Among the interesting relics of the early days is a brass cannon. It was formerly stationed in a block house, which was recently destroyed by fire. Part of its mouth is missing. Some Fourth of July enthusiasts, celebrating the American centennial, overcharged the crude piece, which was plucked from the Plains of Abraham to do duty against the aborigines of the Pacific slope, and blew off the muzzle that was trained at Wolfe's men as they climbed the hill at Quebec, 117 years before.

This piece of brass knew Montcalm, and also had a speaking acquaintance with Wolfe. It bellowed at the red men on the level of Marcus flats as it had belched at the red coats on the plains above the citadel hard by the St. Lawrence. General Isaac I. Stevens, the first governor of Washington territory, once placed his hand on the old gun. General George B. McClellan also stroked its smooth surface when he went to Fort Colville on a conference with Governor Stevens, after he had pushed his way over mountain and stream in search of the most feasible route for a government-subsidized railroad across the continent, to the Pacific sound country, for which Henry Villard had striven.

GATLIN TREATMENT

For Drink Habit—No Bad After Effects.

Doing away with the cause of continued liquor drinking is the secret of the Gatlin Institute's success—the secret of the permanent results obtained in three days' time.

Other methods have proved failures because treatment was directed toward effect—symptoms—instead of cause. Craving, desire, physical and nerve-activity for liquor are but the symptoms of alcoholic poisoning—the effect of drunkenness. Smothering them up by hypodermic injections of substitute stimulants does not cure—merely sobers up, with relapses in eighty per cent. of the cases treated.

Alcohol is a cumulative poison. Once in the system, it demands more. In three days the Gatlin treatment drives every trace of this stored-up poison out of the system, and with its disappearance all desire for liquor, and all symptoms, and any inclination to drink liquor, also disappear, leaving the drinker in the same condition as regards liquor as the day he took his first drink.

Each patient treated under a plain, legal contract that the patient, shall be satisfied with the results of treatment or the full fee paid, shall be refunded at the end of the third day and treatment shall cost nothing. The Gatlin Institute has been established ten years. The very highest financial references are offered.

The Gatlin Home Treatment is for those who cannot come to the institute for three days. It is just as efficient as institute treatment if directions are followed. Call, or write for booklet and copies of contracts. The Gatlin Institute, 428 Jarvis street, Toronto, A. Hargrave, manager, phone N. 4,533.

$5,000 FOR A FLOWER

Professor Pays That Sum—Flower is Artificial.

Geneva, June 10.—The charity fête known as "La Petite Fleur," held in Zurich yesterday, was a young girl's carrying baskets of artificial marguerites, the nominal value of a flower being a penny, levied toll on the inhabitants during the day, collected over $20,000.

A wealthy professor, who had parted with all his ready money, was sold up by the flower girls, though he was already covered with flowers, and wrote out a check for $5,000 for one of the artificial flowers.

THE Dominion Insurance Act
Requires all Canadian Life Insurance Companies to bring their entire Policy Reserves up to a 3-1-2 per cent. interest basis by January 1st, 1915.
This ultimate Higher Standard which the Government will require from all companies in 1915 has from its inception been the lowest standard maintained by

The Imperial Life Assurance Co. of Canada
The Imperial was the first Canadian Company to place its entire policy reserves on a 3-1-2 per cent. interest basis. Unlike many other companies, it has not taken in the past, and will not need to take in the future, one dollar from policyholders' profits to make up any deficiency between its reserves and those required by law.
The Imperial's present high standard of reserves—nearly half a million dollars in excess of Government requirements—places the Company in an enviable position to earn profits for policyholders, and to continue to do so.
