Facts About the American Indian's Healthy Hair.

The American Indian accustomed from time immemorial to go bare-headed in all kinds of weather, is never troubled with falling hair or baldness.

The close atmosphere caused by our "civilized" headgear is conducive to the breeding of infinitesimal germs which dig into the scalp and thrive on the sap of the hair-root.

This true cause of baldness is of recent discovery and explains the non-success of all hair-vigors which treated baldness as a functional disorder.

Newbro's Herpicide is a direct exterminator of the germ. "It destroys the cause and permits the hair to grow as nature intended."

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to the Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. One dollar bottles guaranteed. Jas. B. McLeod.

TEMPER IN THE CHURCH.

In a sense the annual sessions or sessions of the churches are to be regretted. But for them one would never hear the jarring notes that indicate the presence of unkind thoughts and feelings. The business men, or the secular bodies, are excused when they collide, and there are the explosions that shock or startle. The clergymen are supposed to be under restraint all the while, to be ready for an application of the oil in speech that soothes and mollifies.

Some of them are conciliatory in theory only. They may have great provocation, for somehow public discussions take on a wide diversion and lead men into trouble. In one convention an elderly member metaphorically wept as he portrayed the ruin which would follow the union of the great Protestant churches. His fearful theme was the superannuation, which had been his special care and the safety of which was imperilled by the proposed union. In another place, where the independence of Queen's College was under discussion, the controversy became somewhat personal and one delegate says he went into retreat or retirement in order to possess his soul in patience.

In still another a great lay figure was boldly charged with circulating statements that were slanderous, and in still another a certain member was referred to as having exhibited the instincts which were missing in a gentleman. Elsewhere the Ne Temere legislation suggested language which had passed through a furnace at white heat. One religious denomination could see no religious ardour or merit in another, though in faith and doctrine it was assured that they were ready for a merger.

What is the matter with men who call themselves Christians, and who cannot consider the great issues of the church without quarrelling and calling bad names? The sessions are over, and the delegates are at home. Some of them, away from the scene of conflict, (not the scene of triumph) have great reason to sit down and ponder over all they have read and heard. As a result they may decide that never again will they allow their angry passions to arise or to give the cause they espouse a distinct shock.

A PRINCE OF CANADA.

A well-known citizen recently expressed a fear lest the Duke of Connaught, as our next governor-general, would erect a court at Ottawa, and create social distinctions which would be seriously out of place in democratic Canada. But against this fear comes the assurance from Ottawa that a representative of the duke had been out to inspect his future residence, and had expressed a desire for improvements whose modesty was simply surprising. The duke may not be able to disguise his royal blood—indeed it is not expected that he will—but he is not eager or anxious to establish suddenly conditions for which the people are not prepared. That much is clear.

What may happen later, and as a result of this dual reign, may not be apparent. C. F. Hamilton, a journalist of standing, the correspondent of the Globe in South Africa and later the Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto News, has an article in United Empire which is remarkable. Our friend sees the necessity of a permanent governor-general, a prince of the blood, in order to lift this country out of the depths into which it has fallen politically. The custom of appointing a representative of the crown for five or six years, even when the occupants of office are earls and marquises, has lost its value. Canada has grown big and robust, has great ambitions and must have constitutional government in keeping therewith.

Mr. Hamilton is quite persuasive in his argument. Three things, he regards as imperative and permanent. The local constitutional head should be a man of experience in Canadian affairs, and he cannot have this experience and hold office for a few years only; he must have an aloofness from party though conversant with what it does, and he must have an abiding concern for the country he governs. Incidentally, Mr. Hamilton finds fault with the situation as it is. The crown is out of domestic touch with Canada and its people; the senate is a failure; the House of Commons is uneducated and independent public opinion which is corrective in its influence. A change will follow the advent of the duke, but it will be gradual, and in the process of time, by re-appointments, he will be so accepted to the people that they will be glad to have the six year term suggested. The duke is becoming a king, though exalted in public favour, but he can become the Prince of Canada. Is all this a dream, or is it based upon promises the reasonableness of which will appear to others? Canada has big ideas and plans and purposes. As it grows in population, in importance, in industrial and commercial greatness, it may want a change in its form of government. Would this want take the form which Mr. Hamilton suggests?

TRUMPETS OF SIR WILFRID.

The truth is coming out with regard to the imperial conference, and the wise and discreet part which Sir Wilfrid Laurier has performed in it. At the earlier stages Sir Wilfrid had dissented from the proposition to have an Imperial Defence Committee, on grounds that were high and dignified. This committee would not be composed of men carrying the responsibility of government. They either could not act until they had conferred with their respective superiors, or they would be assuming duties which might involve strain in place of strength to the union. Sir Wilfrid's attitude in matters of defence was similarly careful and judicious. The autonomy of the overseas dominions had better be preserved, though the assurance was present that these dominions would, without sharing in the direction of foreign affairs by the mother country, be free to act in such a way as to develop the power and continuity of the imperial government.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier had been regarded as the great and dominating influence of the conference. He was not only the senior member, the dean of the faculty, so to speak, but the man of experience, the man who was bound to remain a central figure because of his power and personality. And he verified this conclusion by the further proceedings of the conference. His motion prevailed which requests the imperial government to open correspondence which will relieve the colonies of the effects of treaties which operate against these colonies without contributing directly or substantially to the welfare of Great Britain. His argument was conclusive. He showed how Australia had been unable to carry a preference for British products, carried on British bottoms, because of these much favoured-nation treaties, and Canada had for a time been hampered in the same way. His position was unanimously endorsed.

Again, as a means of drawing the mother country and the dominions together, and ascertaining how far and in what way they could develop each other in the matter of trade, he proposed a commission, representing the United Kingdom, and Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and Newfoundland, to report upon the resources of each, their facilities for manufacture and production, and distribution, the manner in which trade between them has been affected by legislation and the methods of which the trade of each may be improved and extended. This commission will be the greatest ever appointed and will prepare the way for an expansion of trade as it has not so far been obtained. The conference again unanimously adopted the motion, and Hon. Mr. Aquith, who was present, took occasion to express his gratitude, and the gratitude of the British people, for the exceedingly practical services which Sir Wilfrid had rendered. It may be added that the dominions would undoubtedly contribute their share of the cost of the great undertaking.

One thing more. The Montreal Gazette, in a recent issue, and in an article of some length, endorsed the proceedings of the conference, and in every particular. This conference is designed to foster and develop the thoughts that make for empire, an empire that rests upon a good understanding, rather than upon a written word, and everything in connection with it must be slow growth and mature judgment.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Borden has a glorious time in Winnipeg, a conservative city. If he did not get a warm reception there, where would he expect to receive it? The American farmer, is told that the trade agreement means blue ruin to him. The Canadian farmer is told the same thing. Some side must be out. Which is it?

There are numerous applicants for the position of nurse, and in connection with medical inspection in the schools. A good deal depends on the appointment. Hence the importance of careful procedure.

The Canadian Courier does not think the reciprocity pact will make any material difference in the political matters. But the general consensus of opinion is that it will, and the difference will be in favour of the government.

The laird of Skibo is nothing if not eccentric. He regards the coronation of the king as a farce, as a great waste of money. He believes in advertising, in his own way, and for his own benefit. For the time being there is a bigger figure in the field.

though opposing the trade agreement, in the commons, has since his return home changed his mind. He finds that about eighty-five per cent. of his constituents want reciprocity. He would like the matter to be referred to the people. Why? Wants to dodge a vote?

The Toronto Telegram is distressed because of the triumph of poverty over privileges in England, the right of the poor man to tax the rich man's property. And yet there never was such a social triumph in any country as Lloyd-George's non-employment and sickness insurance. There is practically no objection to it.

A conservative print represents Sir Wilfrid Laurier as hurrying for Canada in order to appease the people and to make some explanation of his action abroad. He is sailing according to schedule, and he returns, as his friends expected he would do, with the honors of the imperial conference. His report to the Canadian commons will be a complete answer to the croakers.

LAKE ONTARIO PARK

THE VAUDEVILLE SEASON OPENED MONDAY EVENING.

A Large Crowd Attended—Improvements Made to the Pavilion—A Fine Programme Given.

The opening of Lake Ontario Park Monday evening, was an auspicious event in the history of this favorite resort. The park itself looked fresh and inviting to lovers of nature. In the pavilion many improvements have been made for the comfort of the patrons, while the stage has been enlarged and the settings and scenery are really beautiful. The attendance was very large, every seat being occupied, while every space where a view of the stage would be seen was packed with a large crowd.

The performance was first-class, the performers being adepts in their work. The moving pictures were new and many beautiful scenes were presented, the principal ones being "An Indian Maid's Lesson," "His Daughter," a domestic tragedy, and "Packing For Honeymoon," one of the most laughable stunts imaginable, picturing the troubles of a prospective bride-room.

In connection with the illustrated picture Miss Rosewear, a decided favorite, sang with her usual ability, "Nightingale," an Indian song, and a response to a recall gave the new song, "Sweeney."

Harry Lakola and Hazel Lorain, the U. S. navy duo, jugglers and equilibrists, gave a high-class presentation of their work, including the act with the celebrated "Swinging cello," introduced for the first time in America by Harry Lakola, March, 1894, at the London theatre, New York city. Their performance was greatly admired.

By her charming personality, and the artistic rendering of her several numbers, Miss Williams carried all hearts with the beauties of her rich soprano voice. She gave "Bonnie Bessie, the Maid of Dundee," "In the Garden of My Heart," and being recalled again and again she responded with two beautiful songs, "To Find a Sweetheart From the Emerald Isle," and "What Little Boys Are Made of." The audience seemed as if they wanted her to sing all night. Prof. Wilner played the accompaniments and also gave several selections of his own.

GANANOQUE TIDINGS.

Knights Templar Visit the Town—Search for a Year.
 Gananoque, June 20.—A large excursion party of Knights Templar, numbering about 250, from Syracuse, N.Y., came in on the steamer New Island yesterday afternoon. All hearts were entertained at luncheon at the big tent on the lawn in front of Gananoque Inn. They were accompanied by a band. The party left about the middle of the afternoon on the return, being due in Watertown, to-morrow for the Mystic Shrine dining hall.

On Saturday last two young men of the town, who had been in the woods a short distance east of the town, came back with the report that they had seen a bear in that locality. Several local sportsmen with a tenacity for big game, armed themselves with rifle and cartridge belt and set out to run him down, but after toiling through the woods till dusk neither ruin nor any trace of him could be found.

The government supply boat, Reserve, with the Perry Sound in tow, was in port last night, having been supplying the lighthouses in this section.

PREACHED A SERMON.

And Afterwards the Umpire Said, "Play Ball."
 Poughkeepsie, N.Y., June 20.—A new era in Sunday baseball may have been marked by a semi-professional game here yesterday, when the Rev. J. W. Larkin, a local pastor, opened the game with an address to the crowd of a thousand. Men, women and children stood in the hot sun for nearly an hour and heard him preach a sermon on practical religion to fit the needs of the masses. One minute after the clergyman had retired the umpire shouted "play ball" and the game was on.
