PECULIAR LOVE FEAST.

A petty quarrel about patronage of whom got a second term each be led to an open rupture in the conserwas a convention called at Uxbridge and it proceeded to nominate Major Sharpe for the commons. Then it was proposed to adjourn without nominating a conservative candidate for the local house, and the present member, Mr. Hoyle, objected. He is the stronger man and asserted himself later, for he carried the convention against the persuasions of Major.

Some embittered partizan had created confusion in the ranks, and had occasioned such a defection that for ime it looked as if the party would to to smash. The master of the sitution was Mr. Hoyle. He had been given a nomination originally, according to one speaker, to get rid of him, That neat, spie and span look and he had won out in the election. on many people you see is . He had repeated the feat in later elections, and yet there were some who had been disgruntled over the patronage issue and were ready to sacrifice

> The funny feature is that after the scrap, in which angry people were looking for each others' scalps, there was a love feast in which men lauded and magnified each other, in which reciprocity was declared to be a good thing for the pockets of the people; and in which an election for the commons this fall, and for the legislature next June, were talked of. R and love feasts do not often go together. They are peculiar to North Ontario.
